And this is significant because it is in accordance with the notion of the liberals for the past century, namely, that real autocracy in action is impossible, and that the burden of government under modern conditions in a vast empire must be in part transferred or it will become crushing. It is the realization of this fact that has dictated to the Czar the recent measures, the grant of wider range of movement and of employment, of religious liberty, of education, of civil and military rank, of peaceful organization, of participation in local legislative bodies, and finally the grant on his birthday of a Zemsky Sovyet, or Council of the People. In a sense this is but a redistribution of deputed powers. The Czar had already been forced to trust the actual work of the empire in great part to the bureaucracy, and the bureaucracy was responsible for most of the oppression, repression, and stupid restriction under which the Russian people had been more and more suffering. The events of the war with Japan brought out so clearly that the head of the Government could no longer be deceived the wretched ineptitude and corruption of the administration of affairs. And when these became plain the Czar, happily inspired and advised by the more intelligent of his Ministers, began the changes requisite.

This explanation of these changes is in the highest degree encouraging, because it is plain that the forces which have thus operated will continue to operate, that the advances made will not be retraced, and that, however slowly, new advances will be made. It will be fortunate if, as now seems at least possible, they can prevent revolution. That will be the sincere desire of all friends of liberty and of the Russian people.

THE MORTGAGE TAX.

There is a possibility that Gov. HIGGINS will yet veto the bills taxing mortgages. He well might do so, for the measures finally passed by the Legislature, despite the desperate efforts to lick them into shape, are undoubtedly full of obscure provisions and provisions of doubtful constitutionality, and will at best furnish so little revenue that the Governor would be amply justified in putting the matter over for the next session and trusting to the preparation of a better and more productive scheme.

Quite apart from the radical defect, or vice, of double taxation, which is inherent in any legislation taxing mortgages without exempting the real estate pledged as security, there is in these measures another form of double taxation. No provision is made to set off debts owed by the owner of the mortgage. The measures still tax mortgages recorded in this State though owned by non-residents, for which action there is no sufficient jurisdiction. Again the whole plan of assessment and of appeals is so complicated and clumsy that its administration will be found a source of constant dispute. Indeed, the practical yield of the legislation for the first year, and probably for several years, will be little else than a crop of vexatious lawsuits. These may easily cost the State more than all the revenue from the tax. If the matter be deferred it may be possible to get from the next Legislature a bill that will simply impose a recording tax, to be paid once for all. This would not only be much more nearly just than any form of annual tax, but it would in the long run be more profitable for the Treasury, and, from a party standpoint, would have the immense advantage of popularity, whereas the present measure is intensely unpopular.

THE LABOR LAWS.

Two important changes for the better were made in the laws regulating labor at the last session of the Legislature. One related to child labor. Much trouble has been met in enforcing the law against children under sixteen being employed, save under certain conditions, from the fact that the testimony of parents was taken as conclusive, and parents were not always averse to lying when the wages of their offspring were in peril. By the amended law there is needed the birth certificate or transcript of the baptismal record, the same evidence that is demanded by the Board of Health. This will make it pretty hard for conscienceless employers or parents to escape the law, if it be honestly and sensibly enforced, as under Mr. SHERMAN, the new State Commissioner of Labor, it is very sure that it will be.

The second change makes it necessary for a landlord, instead of a tenant, to take out the license to conduct manufacturing in tenement houses. This puts a responsible person in place of one usually quite irresponsible and will make it much easier to enforce the regulations in regard to what are called "sweat shops." Commissioner SHERMAN is beginning his work carefully and with energy. He promises cordial co-operation with the organizations that have done so much to secure legislation of this sort, and the prospect for decided improvement is undoubtedly good.

OUR INTEREST IN THE SEA FIGHT.

Washington dispatches yesterday reported that the President is deeply interested in the naval situation in the Far East, and is "taking every opportunity to obtain information bearing upon it." This adds interest to the recent cablegram from the correspondent of The London Telegraph in Tokio that "the Foreign Ministry here learns that President ROOSEVELT has ascertained the peace terms that would be agreeable to the neutral Powers." JOHN HAY will have play for his energies, now reinforced by rest, when he returns to the State Department in June. It is certain that if a Japanese naval victory should prove decisive of the war, as it probably will, it would be also decisive for this country's commercial interests in the Pacific. Yet what we may do to show how far the neutral Powers may be prevailed on to allow Japan complete freedom to exact her own peace terms. If they should be constrained to give her a large measure of freedom, the result, for specific reasons, cannot but be favorable to Great Britain and the United States.

To begin with, Russian trade restrictions and competition would be wholly eliminated for at least a generation. Japan would reassert her control over the territory ceded by China in 1895; she would bar the Czar's ships from Pacific waters; she would insist on the retrocession of Saghalin Island and the evacuation of Manchuria; she would demand a guarantee of China, backed by Great Britain and the United States, to cede no territory to a foreign Power, but to open up more of her provinces to trade; and she would buy the East-China Railway and define clearly Russia's boundary line west of the River Amur. Such terms, outlined by Mr. KINNOSUKE in The North American Review for May, would pluck Russia root and branch out of the Eastern situation, besides assuring permanent peace with the removal of the national menace to Japan.

But these terms would carry with them the assurance to England and America of their own preponderant naval power in the Pacific. With the withdrawal of Russia, France could no longer afford to defend, should it be attacked, her all but useless colony in Indo-China. Further German aggression upon the Province of Shantung would be effectively discouraged, and it would no longer be profitable to maintain for her remaining provinces a fleet which could cope with the sea power of Japan. The United States would eventually gain most. England's naval strength must remain forever scattered over the globe, while the opening of the Panama Canal will make easy the mobilization of our squadrons upon those Eastern coasts where American commercial interests are growing.

It is no wonder, then, that the Administration and State Department at Washington are fixing regardful eyes on ROJESTVENSKY's fleet. Upon its fate depends the issue of a battle equally momentous, to be waged with weapons of diplomacy.

TRAFFIC REGULATION.

Probably the most dangerous street crossing in New York at the present time is the intersection of Broadway and Sixth Avenue at Thirty-fourth Street. That it is now receiving the attention of Commissioner MCADOO as a point exigently demanding traffic regulation is gratifying. All the street car movement on Broadway passes this point, and it is almost a constant stream of cars passing north and south. This movement is crossed at an acute angle by the railroad traffic of Sixth Avenue, which is also operated under the least headway consistent with efficient car dispatching. The general vehicular traffic of these two streets is probably the largest and most varied of any which the streets of New York can show. It is of every kind, including an unusually large proportion of hacks and private carriages. The east and west movement is also large, including the cars on a double-track street railroad, a great deal of trucking, and a very large carriage traffic. Owing to the intersection of the three streets, all of first importance by reason of local business activities and as main avenues of communication between parts of the city which maintain active exchanges of passengers and merchandise, it is the busiest centre of New York, if allowance is made for the number of hours in the twenty-four through which it is congested.

For reasons due to the angle at which Broadway and Sixth Avenue intersect, the crossing from the west side of Broadway to the east side of Sixth Avenue is very wide. A great many thousands of people have to make this crossing every hour, keeping in the way of traffic nearly twice as long as is required in crossing any single street in New York. Crowds of women and children cross it constantly, not in regular lanes as at ordinary crossings, but at all sorts of angles, so that the street is usually full of pedestrians.

Here also one may see more reckless driving and more dangerous speeding of automobiles than at almost any other busy point in New York. It is not unusual to see a motor hansom or a touring car driven through the tangle of persons and vehicles at more than its customary speed to escape delay and strike a more open roadway beyond. It is so dangerous a place for a vehicle to linger that all regard for people afoot is dismissed. They must look out for themselves. They do this pretty well, it must be admitted; but it is scarcely fair that all sorts and conditions of citizens should have to scurry out of the way of vehicles to escape the necessity for a ride in the ambulance. The plaza has no isles of safety, and those taking or leaving the various cars of the Broadway lines at Thirty-fourth Street find themselves in the focus of a criss-cross traffic with no better protection than the dry goods box used as a stand for a dispenser of exchange tickets offers.

This local Mugby Junction needs systematic traffic regulation very much more than many of the points which have had and are now having it. The problem of such regulation is not a difficult one, but it needs constant attention. Dependence cannot be placed upon the formation of regular habits by drivers, motormen, and chauffeurs as result of a few days or even dangerous crossing for so long a time to come as one needs to look ahead, and within fifteen minutes of the withdrawal of the police guard it will relapse into the condition of confusion from which an effort is now making to redeem it.

AN IMITATION DINNER.

The "meatless dinner" given by a social leader to some distinguished delegates to the National Tuberculosis Convention at Washington the other evening was furnished with a menu not wholly devoid of blame, we think, with respect to its nomenclature, but on that account stimulating to the imagination if not to the palate. Here is the terminology of the feast:

Fruit Soup.
Imitation Salmon, Sauce Hollandais.
Cucumbers.
Unfermented Concord Grape Juice, mixed with Apollinaris.
Broiled Slices Pinenut Protose, Nut Sauce.
Artichoke Cups and Asparagus.
Unfermented Catawba Wine.
Eggs à la Villeret. Mushrooms.
C. C. Protose Timbale, Tomato Sauce.
Grape Fruit and Cherry Salad. Cheese Soufflés.
Fruit Frappé. Kellogg Gelatine.
Imitation Coffee.

From these suggestions of good things anathema how the guests' mouths may have been fixed for soup built of "stock," live salmon trembling from their icy packing to the pan, broiled partridge in place of proxy protose, coffee brawed from the brown roasted berry, grape juice fermented and "wine" that was wine, is a matter for grave consideration by the estimable lady who purveyed the repast. For was this not confessedly, according to the implications and admissions of the menu, an imitation dinner?

But we are surprised and pained to note the introduction into this otherwise inocuous banquet of "Kellogg gelatine"—clearly a violation of the vegetarian canon. We submit that Dr. KELLOGG is not a mineral; he is quite as foreign to the vegetable kingdom. Everybody knows how Kellogg gelatine was made. First it was boiled Kellogg. Then they strained him, skimmed him, and set him away in a cool place to "jell." The result was the Kellogg gelatine of this menu, in consuming which the vegetarians not only transgressed the law of their associated being, but made cannibals of themselves.

Mr. CLEMENTS of the Inter-State Commerce Commission is apparently very much vexed at the railroad men for daring to question the entire ability of the members of the Commission to take upon themselves the work of fixing rates over the continent. That he should indulge in scolding the corporations with which the Commission has to deal in the temper that he shows is in itself a pretty strong indication of the disabilities of the Commission. The plain truth is that the Commission has not shown itself a very capable body, that it has not secured the confidence of the public, and, especially, the confidence of those most intimately acquainted with its operations. It has had during the years it has been in existence the opportunity to gain much influence, and it has not succeeded. This is not the fault of the present Commissioners alone or chiefly. They are by no means inferior to their predecessors. But the standard of selections for the Commission has not been as high as it should have been. It would be absurd to speak of the average of its successive members as leaders in the line of their work. They have been usually small men. It is a pity, for the chance opened to them was really a splendid one.

The Mayor has done a good thing in a very good fashion in vetoing the bill to increase the pay and the privileges of the street cleaning force. The bill was a "put-up job." It was intended to embarrass the Mayor, forcing him to sanction a piece of gross extravagance or to incur the resentment of the street cleaners. He has defeated the scheme by treating it honestly and plainly. He points out the extravagance and refuses to sanction it. He also exposes the insincerity of the authors of it. The Board of Apportionment has already ample authority to increase the pay of city employés when it thinks it best, and there was no need and no excuse for the interference of the Legislature. Mr. MCCLELLAN loses nothing politically by this frank appeal to the good sense of the people of the city, and the Treasury saves a neat sum.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Still Leaning on the Millionaire.

An already exploited grievance of ours was revived by the letter of a clerical correspondent who was moved by what is now known to have been a false report that Mr. JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER had given $10,000,000 for the support of old and indigent Baptist ministers, to make an eloquent, or, at least emotional, appeal in behalf of similarly conditioned clergymen in his own Church. There were, he said, some 600 of them on the ragged edge of destitution, and he exclaimed: "Think of it, ye millionaires; ye women of wealth who sit at ease in Zion, ye clergy who are rich and enjoying large incomes!" There it is—the expectation, fast coming to be a stern demand, that any neglected duty of a public or semi-public, or charitable or semi-charitable sort, shall be assumed, not by those who voluntarily incur and are entirely able to perform it if they choose, but by the millionaire—the one person for whom the performance of the duty is so easy, so entirely free from any element of self-sacrifice, that it makes a wholly insignificant item on the credit side of his account of things well or ill done. As it happens, the church for whose clergy our correspondent asked alms—with some slight touch of the stinely beggar's impudency—is composed of members the majority, or at least many, of whom have of their world's goods. If they have any of their clergy on the ragged edge of destitution in their old age it is not at all from necessity, and if they appeal to the millionaire to support their faithful servants it is simply that they find it preferable, because cheaper, to give the name of benefactor and philanthropist to him and to keep their own money in their own deep, well-buttoned pockets. It is peculiarly and fatally easy to see another man's duty to give and to ignore one's own duty to pay. If the 600 clergymen did not receive a living wage, that was the fault of their flocks; if they were not wise enough to live within their means and put aside something for old age, that was their own fault. In neither case does the millionaire come in except as a remedy, much more convenient than commendable, for past mistakes, moral and financial, of other people. Of course the millionaire has his own very large duties to perform, but there is difficulty in seeing that they include the pauperization of solvent communities, corporations, and individuals.

A Slave in London.

"I bought the boy from his parents, and I gave an undertaking to the powers in Africa that when I have done with him I will take him back." That was the remarkable statement made before a London Board of Guardians the other day by a man, a full-blooded Britisher, apparently quite sane, from whose house an eleven-year-old negro had run away to escape the punishment he expected for breaking a decanter. The boy finally turned up in the workhouse, and it was then the man went there to get him back that the queer story came out. It was told without any manifestation by the narrator of realization that his course was incompatible with English policy as to slaves and slave holding, and he seemed much surprised when the return of his animated property was refused, and the case was turned over to the police for investigation. There was, however, no charge that the little black had been seriously maltreated, and, though the "master" expressed a confident belief that he had a right to give needed and reasonable correction to the boughten servant, he also spoke of him as "one of the dearest little fellows in the world"—which may or may not be evidence of a warm and sincere affection. The reports of the hearing do not state in what part of Africa the Londoner made his purchase or what "powers" held his "undertaking." Those would seem to be questions worth settling. At any rate, the boy had been held and treated as a slave for twelve months in the very capital of the British Empire, and it is just possible that, as a decanter led to his enfranchisement, so some equivalent container of intoxicants may have had something to do with his entrance into bondage.

Troubles on the Galveston.

It is to be hoped that the citizens and newspapers of Galveston will get profit as well as humiliation from the suave and stately snubbing they have just received from the Secretary of the Navy as a reward for their well-meant but injudicious attempt to interfere with the maintenance of discipline on the United States cruiser bearing the name of their city. There have been rumors for some time that all was not well on the Galveston, and the dissatisfaction of the crew with some of their officers resulted recently in the telling by men on shore leave of stories that much excited the Galveston papers and at last moved the local Humane Society to lay all the facts and gossip in its possession before the Secretary. Without any regard to the question whether the men on the Galveston have or have not received harsher treatment than their conduct deserved, or to the question whether or not the bad conduct was wholly or partly due to the commander's excessive severity, this course was entirely wrong and could only tend to the subversion of discipline throughout the navy. The crews on our men-of-war are not only as well protected as those of any nation from the cruelty of officers, but they have under the regulations they all know or should know a perfect method of appeal from their superiors to the civilian superiors of those superiors, and the recent talk to the effect that the Galveston men feared to avail themselves of the right to make formal complaint through the authorized line of communication is simple nonsense—perfectly well known to be that by the men themselves. It is practically impossible that they chose to stir up the indignant emotions of landsmen for any other reason than that they felt their case was bad. For real grievances they had a certain remedy, and not an officer on board would have ventured to harass them for taking advantage of that remedy. By their failure to do so, and by their utterly inexcusable attack on a civil official who boarded the cruiser, they deliberately put themselves in the wrong if they were ever in the right, and there was nothing for the Secretary to say to the letter of the Humane Society except what he did say.

Northern Veterans and the South.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Northern veterans have no bitterness toward their Southern antagonists. We admire and respect a brave man fighting for what he thinks is a principle; but time it about time he woke up to the fact that he was wrong and stops the bitterness shown through the South and the education of children that the destruction of this country was the proper thing? Let the South give its old soldiers all the respect they deserve, but the cause was wrong.

New York, May 20, 1905. E. S.

Tommy Atkins's Teeth.

No doubt, says The London Pall Mall Gazette, the War Office thought it had done a clever thing when it decided to allow men with imperfect teeth to enlist, on condition that they would pay for new teeth or the stopping of old ones, such payment to come out of stoppages of another kind. As was to be expected, a good many men came in on these terms, and, as was also expected, they afterward backed out of them, refusing to see the dentist. We read in The Daily Telegraph that the Guards have suffered particularly in this respect. The War Office holds that the dentist cannot be forced upon the man, and that they may not remain soldiers without his services; and they must be discharged accordingly. We do not pretend to pity the War Office. If it must have men, although their teeth are naturally not good, it should pay for better teeth for them. A man who is not worth the price of a tooth or two is not worth much.

False Hopes Raised.

From Brooklyn Life.

Mr. Close—About how much does an automobile outfit for a woman cost?

Mrs. Close (excitedly)—Oh, George, you're not going to buy an automobile, are you?

Mr. Close—I should say not! I'm merely trying to figure out how far beyond his income that man Brassey is living.

The Awful Loneliness.

From Brooklyn Life.

The Friend—What made you close your season so early?

The Actor—The solitude, my boy, night after night, the appalling solitude.

Feathers Prohibited.

From The Kansas City (Mo.) Star.

Under the new Missouri game law, which will go into effect in June, the wearing of the feathers of any wild birds or women's hats is forbidden.

JEWISH PUBLICATION SOCIETY

To Join the 250th Anniversary Celebration—Officers Elected.

PHILADELPHIA, May 21.—The annual meeting of the Jewish Publication Society was held at Kenesseth Israel Temple here to-day. Among those present who made addresses were Rabbi David Philipson of Cincinnati, and Rabbi M. M. Eichler of this city. The society decided to co-operate with the American Historical Society in the celebration next Fall of the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the settlement of the Jews in the United States.

The following officers were elected: President—Edwin Wolf, Philadelphia; First Vice President—Henry M. Leipziger, New York; Second Vice President—Sol Blumenthal, Philadelphia; Trustees—Cyrus Adler, Washington, D. C.; Henry M. Leipsizer Judge Mayer Sulzberger, Edwin Wolf, and Morris Newburger, of this city.

TO CLEAN CAPITOL ROTUNDA.

Plan to Remove Paint and Let Stone Color with Age.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 21.—Elliott Woods, Superintendent of the Capitol, is conducting an experiment on a section of the wall in the rotunda with the view of determining what is best to do to produce the most desirable color effect in the walls.

For many years paint has been thickly applied to the dome and upper walls of the rotunda. The scheme now is to remove the paint from the Virginia sandstone, of which the walls are built, and allow the walls to remain without coloring of any kind, the expectation being that age will give a more pleasing and effective tint than can be obtained from paint.

A TAINTED MONEY PARALLEL.

Would the New Haven Pastors Take a Certain $100,000?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your editorial, "Tainted Money," published in to-day's issue, you quote approvingly the New Haven pastors who "draw the line" at "any man's gift of that which is lawfully his own," and their denial that the acceptance of it makes the receivers of the gift for religious or charitable use "enter into an alliance with him in his business, or become yoke-fellows with him in wrong practices."

The case of the wealthy octogenarian who sought to recover over $600,000 bestowed by him on a colored woman is fresh in the minds of your readers. The octogenarian lost his suit and the $600,000 worth of property has been adjudged the "lawful property" of the woman in the case. Suppose she should offer $100,000 for the endowment of a Chair of Christian Ethics in some theological seminary. Would those New Haven pastors be willing to accept the gift because it is "lawfully" the woman's own? And if not, what becomes of the criterion of "lawfulness" in these matters? J. L. S.

New York, May 18, 1905.

One Way to Lose the City's Money.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Having in mind the recent decisions of the city authorities to repave Park Row and lower Broadway, would it not be well for the Rapid Transit Commission to note the loss accruing to the city by their omission to provide for such contingencies in their existing contracts, whereby in case of such eventualities, their contractors, thereby relieved of the necessity of replacing these pavements in as good a condition as when originally disturbed, should pay over to the city such sum as it would have been necessary otherwise to have expended, which amount would help defray the cost of repavement? By this omission the city is the loser by a very considerable sum of money necessarily allotted by the contractors for the purpose of making the extensive repairs provided for by contract, and probably the same conditions have occurred elsewhere along the route.

New York, May 20, 1905. ENGINEER.

Spare the Songbirds.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There is a great difference between hunting big game and shooting our singing birds. If our President shoots bears and our ex-President ducks, it does not matter much to us. Those animals are not companionable, but if men go in our parks and kill our singing birds which we all love it is a different thing. If those men want birds let them kill the English sparrows, for they are of no benefit to us and give us no music. They only destroy other birds. C. L. M.

A Blow to Protestants.

From The London Globe.

The second article of the bill for separating Church and State in France, which the Chamber has passed by a majority of 100 votes, enacts that "the republic neither recognizes, pays salaries to, nor subsidizes any form of worship." Although the measure is directed mainly against the Church of Rome, it is not surprising that it has been received by the Reformed and Lutheran Churches with little satisfaction. The adherents of the Established Protestant Communions will suffer financially, in proportion to their numbers, as severely as the Roman Catholics. They will gain in liberty of action, for the existing law, which dates from the time of Napoleon, placed them under rigid State control; but a heavy price will have to be paid for the boon of freedom. The stipends of the Protestant ministers, now guaranteed by the State, are small enough, in no case exceeding 3,000f. a year; but in future there will be nothing but the voluntary offerings of the people, who have not been trained, like the English Nonconformists, in the practice of systematic giving. At the same time the right of pastors' wives to pensions, if they are left widows, is to cease after a period of years. Few of the churches and personages belong to the Church, and these buildings will have in future to be rented from the State or the parishes or, in some cases, from private persons. The hardship is even greater than befalls the Roman Catholics, because the Protestants are, as a rule, neither numerous nor wealthy.

French Doctors on Meningitis.

From The London Telegraph, April 28.

PARIS.—French physicians say that epidemic cerebro-spinal meningitis, otherwise spotted fever, is not by any means a newly discovered disease, but has been exhaustively studied for over sixty years. In 1837 the malady broke out at Bayonne among two regiments of the line, which, being removed to other garrisons, spread the epidemic. Spotted fever invariably appears in wet weather. The epidemic is of short duration, and dies down on the return of sunshine and warmth. The disease begins with shivers and violent headache, pains in the limbs, and vomiting, then muscular contractions in the back and jaw follow, with disorders of the eye. Delirium is succeeded by torper and coma in fatal cases. All this has been described years ago, but the discovery of the bacilli of the disease is comparatively recent. There are of many species, pneumococci, streptococci, staphylococci, &c., producing various forms of the complaint. The bacilli become lodged in the spinal cord. Prof. Dieulafoy recommends treatment by hot baths, the application of leeches, and the administration of certain anti-spasmodic medicines, such as polybromide, chloral, sulphonal, &c.

Imitating the Foreigner.

From The London Chronicle.

People who are affected by what the French call "snobisme," that is to say, a desire to imitate the foreigner, should take a lively interest in the habits of the Emperor Francis Joseph. He rises every morning at 5 o'clock; after coffee and a roll he works at State documents until nine; then he receives visitors. At eleven he has a very slight repast, and then a short walk. He walks all the afternoon until six, and then dines very frugally. More work until 9:30, and then bed. The student will note with particular care that the Emperor takes a glass of sherry before retiring. This is probably the only one of his habits which lends itself easily to imitation. The rest of them are not gay. We expect to hear that sherry, which has long been neglected, shows signs of reviving popularity.

PAUL JONES'S RANK.

His Priority as Naval Captain Disputed with the Russians.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Much as I hate to dispute the priority of any Irishman's claims to a good fighting title, Mr. James Doran P. Canavan is very much mistaken as to the designations "Commodore" and "Captain," both in relation to Paul Jones and to their use in the United States Navy in general.

Up to 1857, "Captain" was (with one short-lived exception) the highest actual rank in the navy, and that of "Commodore" was not legally existent until the passage of an act of Congress July 16, 1862, but it was customary to apply the courtesy-title of "Commodore" to the senior Captain commanding a squadron. Paul Jones accordingly signed himself "Commodore," and is so styled in the writings of his officers, his adversaries, and other contemporaries, including Benjamin Franklin and John Adams, and is therefore rightfully so called by most naval historians and biographers from Cooper down.

My evidently misleading reference to Paul Jones as "our first Captain" was not intended to convey the impression that he was the first to hold that rank, but was meant to imply his pre-eminence in our naval history. John Barry was certainly not the first Commodore in the navy, nor was Gustavus Conyngham the first officer to hold a commission in the service. Poor Esek Hopkins, commander of the expedition against New Providence in January, 1776, above whose flagship, the Alfred, First Lieut. John Paul Jones hoisted the Rattlesnake flag of the infant navy, has the best right to the first distinction.

By the resolution of Congress, Dec. 22, 1775, creating a naval personnel, Hopkins was appointed "Commander in Chief," but he was generally addressed as "Commodore." Dudley Saltonstall, commander of the Alfred, was the first Captain of the service, his name heading the list of those of that rank appointed by the same resolution.

Although the matter is not historically important, it is of some interest that Jones, while only senior Lieutenant, was the first officer in the navy actually to receive his commission, which was handed to him in the old Independence Hall, in Philadelphia, Dec. 22, 1775, by John Hancock in person. The other officers, his seniors and juniors, received their commissions later as they called for them.

Jones and twenty-three others were appointed Captains by a resolution of Congress Oct. 10, 1776. The commission of Capt. Conyngham, to whom Mr. Canavan would give the seniority, is dated March 1, 1777.

Several recent writers, including a distinguished historical novelist who will not rest satisfied with having drawn a false and ridiculous caricature of the naval hero in his first book, have seen fit to condemn Paul Jones for having entered the Russian service, so a few words in his defense on this count may not be amiss.

Letters of Paul Jones and his good friend, Thomas Jefferson, show that Jones accepted a commission as Rear Admiral in the Russian Navy, then operating against the Turks, not only with the approval, but also at the instigation, of Jefferson, who put the opportunity in his way, and argued that Jones could thus perfect himself in the art of naval warfare for the benefit of his adopted country, which the statesman then foresaw would soon need an efficient navy. Referring to the action of the Commodore, Jefferson writes to Washington: "He has made it a condition that he shall be free at all times to return to the orders of Congress, and also that he shall not in any case bear arms against France."

Jones says in a grateful letter to Jefferson: "I am not forsaking the country that has had so many disinterested and difficult proofs of my affection, and can never renounce the glorious title of a citizen of the United States."

How the Farmer Might Be Happy.

From The Chicago Record-Herald.

A correspondent of THE YORK NEW TIMES asks: "Why shouldn't the farmer be the happiest man on earth?" He should be, and the probabilities are that he would be if his crops never failed, if there were no trusts to oppress him, if he could get cheap help easily, and were able to live in town.

Sunset Charms.

From The Philadelphia Public Ledger.

"Oh, Mr. Chappey," exclaimed Miss Gush, "why weren't you up on the hill to see the sunset? It was just too lovely."

"Yaas," replied Chappey, "sent my man up to do it for me. He understands that sort of thing, don't y' know."

TO THE SEA SERPENT.

Once more you're lifted by the bonfince
From the cold cellar and from tail to head
Revamped, recovered, and patched up space
And painted till you shine a brilliant red,
Then, quite untarballed, you are fondly led—
Or carried—out, wound up and on the wave
Launched, while the manager lies on a bed
Of roses, for he knows you're fit to brave
The storm as swift you skim above the coral cave.

Now from your fangs you're belching gasoline
With head erect, upon the purpling swell,
As you go hurtling with an air serene
Before the white shores of the big hotel.
In our friend's eye we see the guests pell mell
On the piazza, beer and julep filled,
By your appearance held as in a spell
While they observe you coming on unbilled—
A thing from wonderland mysteriously spilled.

You brim our soul with oceans of delight
Because you tell us that the Summer's here,
More surely s'en than does the fairy white
Lily, that trembles on the rippled mere;
And that is why we swing our hat and cheer
To see you from your gargoyle nostrils rain
A sizzling blaze that lights both far and near
The billows, while with ecstasy insane
You Roman candle balls spit o'er the white-capped main.

Therefore glide on, oh, serpent of the sea;
Glide on and glad the bonfince with cash,
That he financially ahead may be
When he boards up the seaside house of hash;
Flap your old tail and let your optics flash—
Wriggle and twist and splash while on you steer
For nowhere, with a ghostly vim and dash.
You're welcome as the bluebird is to dear
Old Spring because you tail in Summer's surely here.

INTO CENTRAL PARK WENT ALL NEW YORK

Or Nearly All, Judging from the Crowds There Yesterday.

A GRAND PARADE ON ROADS

Fine Phaetons Next to Humble Vehicles—Walks Crowded—Elephant House a Popular Resort.

Central Park had its real opening of the season yesterday. Its guests found a beautiful display of restful green foliage and sward and had a beautiful clear day to enjoy it all in.

On the grassy carpets gamboled children in dresses of shining white, with bunches of bright flowers strewn on their wide-brimmed hats, while among their elder sisters that promenaded along the asphalt walks predominated the reds and blues now so much in fashion. Above all that life and color was stretched an almost spotless sky, the luminous azure of which was only made more beautiful by a few wisps of feathery white clouds.

From early morn till late at night a stream of pleasure vehicles of every conceivable kind passed into the highroads of the Park through all the gates. About 4 o'clock in the afternoon the procession was the largest, four lines of carriages moving in unbroken succession, two going one way and the two others in the opposite direction. But the elegant phaetons and victorias and automobiles of the very rich were in a hopeless minority. Democracy reigned even on the road, and the humble turnout of the simple citizen or the vehicle hired for the occasion was the rule. Not that the motor vehicle or any other kind of wheeled conveyance was lacking—everything that saves man from walking was there, including the puffing motor cycle and the silent bicycle.

Those who went on foot had to be counted not by thousands, but by tens of thousands, particularly in the warmest hours of the afternoon. The walks were crowded not only near the entrances and around the Mall, but where they meander through the Ramble or play hide-and-seek around the reservoir. It would have been the children's day had the grown-up people not been so numerous. They were all there, from the toddler who had just learned to walk up to the octogenarian who had nearly forgotten how. And if it was surprising to note the number of plain buggies and runabouts and hired hansoms on the road, it was still more surprising to note the total absence of all signs of abject poverty among the strollers. Judging only by the appearance of the crowds, a visitor might deem it safe to declare this city free from poor people. Everybody looked prosperous. Perhaps the sunshine that gilded all helped.

And never was there a better place or occasion to test the cosmopolitan nature of the metropolis. Strange tongues were heard everywhere, each one gabbling away at his merriest in happy consciousness of the unintelligibility of his remarks to all but his own particular listener.

The crowds were greatest along the roads leading to the Mall, about the menagerie, and on the ballground. The blue tickets giving the purchasers access to the swings and the scarlet tickets admitting to the merry-go-round were in constant demand. In the restaurants within the Park pale the waiters were wearing out both souls and soles bringing ice cream and other light refreshments. The keep-off-the-grass signs were nothing but empty letters, for the policemen were feeling too happy to take notice of any but the most flagrant violations of the rules. Every squatter on the lawns seemed to be equipped with a peanut bag, and in every thicket the squirrels held feast, darting out now and then to forage, snatching nimbly the proffered tidbits from friendly hands, and returning lastly to their private nooks to enjoy themselves at leisure.

In the elephant house the spectators stood four deep in rapt contemplation of the swaying pachyderms. And when they had gazed so long that they felt there was nothing more to be seen, in came "Billy" Snyder, the clever keeper of the big animals, and at his heels little Jerry, a Boston bull terrier which he has trained into doing various tricks, together with Hatty, the baby elephant. Then the show began in earnest, and the real circus was eclipsed for a few minutes. Hatty, who is not yet quite so tall as a grown man of average height, knows how to dance gracefully to the tunes whistled by Snyder. It is a sort of hop, skip, and jump with the hindlegs, but the forelegs move rhythmically in time to the tune. Then she walks about on her hindlegs only, standing up as straight as any man. She can also climb up on a square box, the top of which is hardly large enough to make place for her four feet. To cap the performance of Hatty as a soloist, Snyder puts a harmonica into her trunk, whereupon she plays upon it as she turns around and around on the box to her own music. But when Hatty plays Jerry begins to howl, for he is blooded and his nerves that cannot stand such weird strains. Lastly, at a word from Snyder, Hatty begins to trot around the cage, and as she moves Jerry runs in and out between her forelegs in such a fashion that he is all the time describing the figure 8 on the floor. Then it is the turn of the spectators to howl, but not in the same way as Jerry. It is their joy and their approval of the pretty play of the two animals that finds expression in that way. Yesterday Snyder had to go through those acts about a score of times, each time to an audience of about twice as many as the elephant house is supposed to have room for.

In the midst of one of those happy times there was a sudden outburst of a female voice. A woman had lost her purse, which she had been carrying in her bag. The bag was open. In the purse she had $65 cents, she explained to the interested crowd:

"Eighty-five cents and an English penny—and I care most for the penny."

"There is a police station right near here," said an elderly man. And to the station went the woman, leading a small girl by the hand. Hardly had she told her story to Detectives Kennedy and Connors, when two men entered. They said they had just seen two half-grown boys steal a pocketbook out of a woman's bag. Then they were asked to turn about—and there was the woman herself. Yes, they thought they could recognize the thieves. Off the four men ran, turning their steps to the elephant house, where the theft was committed. The largest crowd and the best field were there. And sure enough, there the alleged pickpockets were found. And when their own pockets were searched one of these gave up an English penny, which was promptly identified by the woman as hers. Thus justice moves swiftly and gayly in Central Park.

The Rev. Robert Bagnell's Warning to the Matrimonially Inclined.

In a sermon on marriage and divorce at the Metropolitan Temple, Seventh Avenue and Fourteenth Street, last night, the Rev. Robert Bagnell declared that no man should marry until he can see his way clear, especially as to the minister's fee. He also asserted that there should be a law debarring all men who indulged in gambling or drinking from marrying.

"No man," he said, "should marry until he can see his way clear, especially as to the minister's fee.

"There should be a law, and a strong one at that, debarring any person with an incurable disease from marrying. This should also apply to persons who indulged in any form of gambling or touched intoxicating liquors. Of course, no woman would be foolish enough to marry a drunkard, so I apply the drinking question to the man who uses liquor in any form. No man would marry a woman if he knew that she drank liquor, and she should also draw the same line and not take a husband who did so.

"It seems to be the universal question of the present day that marriage should be either for money, position, or enjoyment. This is a poor argument.

"A Catholic should not marry a Protestant or a Protestant a Catholic. It brings discord and unhappiness, the wife going one way and the husband the other regarding the bringing up of their children. It is disgusting to see a man marry a woman in order to get a housekeeper or a woman to wed a man in order that he should support her."

Income Just Pays Expenses, President Says—Vacation Camp Plan.

The thirty-first annual meeting of the Young Men's Hebrew Association was held in the association building, at Lexington Avenue and Ninety-second Street, yesterday morning, at 11 o'clock. President Percival S. Menken read his annual report, and speeches were made by Jacob H. Schiff, N. Taylor Phillips, Deputy City Controller; Miss Sadie American, President of the New York Section Council of Jewish Women, and others.

Mr. Menken's report showed that the income had just about met the expenditures, with a few dollars over, although less was received from membership dues than last year. This bad showing in the dues was caused, Mr. Menken thought, by a falling off in the gymnasium attendance, due to the inadequacy of the bathing facilities.

The membership for the year ended April 30 was just about the same as that of the previous year, and very hard work had to be done to hold the membership up to the line of 1904. The President congratulated the Employment Committee on the good work it had done in obtaining places for worthy young men. He suggested that a big tract of land, on which the association now has an option, be purchased as a permanent vacation camp as soon as possible. He pointed out that The Bulletin, the association paper, has done a world of good. He advocated the union of all Hebrew institutions doing work similar to that of the Young Men's Hebrew Association, after the manner of the Young Men's Christian Association branches, and believed that what he was advocating would be accomplished in the future. In conclusion, President Menken appealed for financial assistance for the association.

Jacob H. Schiff said he thought it his duty to attend the meeting, although he was compelled to come in late. "I have followed your work here," he said, "and I am glad that the Young Men's Hebrew Association is growing from year to year. It is coming to be an educational and intellectual centre for the young men of this community."

B'NAI B'RITH IN SESSION.

Good Reports on Growth of the Order in Foreign Countries.

The District Grand Lodge, No. 1, Independent Order B'nai B'rith, which embraces the lodges in the States of New York, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, and the Dominion of Canada, met for its annual session yesterday at the Lexington Avenue Opera House. The sessions will be continued to-day.

There were about 125 delegates, representing individual lodges, in attendance when the session was called to order at 10:30 o'clock yesterday morning. After welcoming the delegates, J. B. Klein of Bridgeport, Conn., President of the District Grand Lodge and presiding officer of the session, delivered his annual message, in which he reviewed the activities of the organization for the past year.

A feature of the message was the references made to the extension of the order to foreign countries. Growth of the organization in membership and influence was reported from Germany and from Austria, where the two grand lodges were finding employment for thousands of suffering families in Galicia and pushing the movement in various directions. In Roumania, where conditions still are deplorable, the Grand Lodge existing there furnishes the strongest bulwark against the aggressive governmental persecution of the Jews. Reports from England, Holland, Australia, and South Africa declared conditions ripe for the beginning of work in those countries. One lodge has recently been established at Basel, Switzerland.

District Grand Lodge No. 1 has a membership of about 4,200. This is about the same number as a year ago. Mr. Klein with some regret said that, while the individual lodges outside of the City of New York had shown considerable growth during the year, the lodges in this city had been rather backward.

Satisfactory conditions were reported in connection with the various phases of philanthropic and benevolent work done by the order. Among the institutions maintained by it are a free employment bureau on the east side, through which work was obtained for 2,139 applicants last year, and a home for the aged at Yonkers. A special committee appointed for the purpose of securing a district cemetery reported progress.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President—Charles Hartman; First Vice President—Adam Wiener; Second Vice President—Judge Jacob B. Ullman of New Haven; Treasurer—Solomon Sulzberger; Secretary—S. Hamburger. Mr. Sulzberger was re-elected for the twenty-sixth time and Mr. Hamburger for the thirtieth time.

Last night the delegates gave a dinner at Terrace Garden to the newly elected officers.

Special to The New York Times.

DES MOINES, May 21.—Friends of Carl M. Spencer, the Des Moines bank cashier indicted on two counts in the Federal court for embezzlement, have circulated a subscription paper, and said to-night that $12,000, the entire amount of the bank's loss, had been raised.

The money will go to reimburse the bonding company in the hope that prosecution will be dropped. Spencer used the bank's funds to secure surgical treatment for his crippled son. This was urged in his behalf.

STAMPS WORTH $100,000

Earl of Crawford Always Has Collection on the Valhalla.

SHOWED HIS TREASURES HERE

Philatelists, Just Before Ocean Race, Saw Collection, Said to be the Finest in the World.

Aboard his ship-rigged Valhalla on her long race across the Atlantic the Earl of Crawford has his famous collection of United States stamps, which is generally conceded to be the finest in the world. The Earl is as enthusiastic a philatelist as he is a sportsman. He is a member of the most prominent philatelic club in London, to which the heir to the British throne also belongs. Stamp collecting is a hobby with many of the British nobility.

The Earl of Crawford has been some seven or eight years getting his United States specimens, and he has paid well for them. He began by buying for about $5,000 the collection owned by M. P. Castle, a well-known English philatelist. Several years ago he secured for $20,000 the very fine collection belonging to H. G. Mandel, an employe of the American Banknote Company, which has turned out so many beautiful issues of the stamps of this country.

The Earl's collection is in forty volumes. He has devoted much time and labor to this pastime, and the result is that not only does he possess what is said to be the finest United States collection in existence, but also a complete history of the philately of this country. The first volume contains the provisional issues by Postmasters between the years 1845 and 1847, prior to the earliest general issues of our Government. Included among these Postmaster stamps in the Earl's collection is the very rare twenty-cent St. Louis specimen, with the picture of the two bears. The value of this alone is $1,500. Another rarity is the Annapolis, Md., five-cent envelope stamp of 1846, whose value is also $1,500. Still another rarity is the Brattleboro, Vt., five-cent adhesive, valued at $650. Each stamp in this collection has been mounted by the Earl himself, and above it in his own hand are written all the facts about its history. The collection is estimated to be worth at least $100,000.

Wherever the Valhalla has sailed it has carried this philatelic treasure with it. In each port where she has been, and these are all over the world, her owner has been on the lookout for any rarity that would fill a gap in his magnificent collection. When the Valhalla arrived here recently the forty volumes were in her cabin. New York philatelists were, of course, aware of the very many rarities contained in the work, and it was made known to the Earl that it would be a great treat for them to be allowed to view it. He consented to exhibit his stamps at the Collectors' Club, 24 West Twenty-sixth Street, and some fifty members and friends availed themselves of the opportunity thus offered. The Earl himself was present, and short speeches were made by him and Charles Gregory, a New York stock broker and well-known philatelist. The Earl, while in this country, went on to Washington, one of the objects of the trip, it is understood, being to get further philatelic data from the Government officials at the National Capital.

WAS INWARDLY INSOLVENT.

Dr. Parkhurst Describes Plight of a Soul-Empty Millionaire.

The Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst preached on wealth yesterday morning in the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church.

"It is rather a dubious commentary on our current ways of thinking and estimating," he said, "that when we ask how much a man is worth, we are not thinking about his own worth at all, but about the worth of the things that he lugs around with him. It sounds very well to say here in the church that a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth, but it does not mean a great deal to pronounce pious shibboleths of that kind here in the sanctuary, if as soon as we get out into the vestibule or down to the 'street,' we think and feel, and act out, the idea that a man's life does in reality consist in the abundance of the things which he possesseth.

"I remember with a sadness that has continued to this hour the last interview I had with an old friend many years ago, whose millions ran up into the high figures, and whose life, had a long time to that, had been spent in the steady pursuit of dollars. And with tears coursing down his pallid cheeks he said to me, 'And what have I now to show for it all?' The horror of it was unspeakable. He was not a bad man. He was not addicted to vices of any kind. He was no thief—and his money, it is said, was all of it honest money. But his soul was empty—clean soul, perhaps, but nothing in it. In his soul was no music, but the echo of the days that were gone. He had few friends with whom he could confer or commune, and he couldn't commune with himself; there was desperately little to commune with. His estate was worth a great deal, but he himself was worth very little. While outwardly a multi-millionaire, inwardly he was insolvent."

FIGHT OVER THEATRE WIRING.

Stage Hands Doing Some of it and the Electrical Workers Complain.

A dispute has arisen between the Electrical Workers' Union and the Theatrical Protective Union over the work of electric wiring in theatres and other places of amusement. The Theatrical Protective Union is composed of stage hands, and the Electrical Workers' Union complains that the stage hands are doing electric wiring. Complaint was made to the Central Federated Union yesterday.

"This work," said Delegate Kelly of the Protective Union, "involves the changing of wires quickly for stage effects, and it would be impossible to rely on the electrical workers to do it. We are not trying to be electrical workers, and could not afford to be, as our wages are higher."

The two unions were directed to appear before the Executive Committee of the central body, which will hear both sides.

RABBI'S ADVICE TO NEGROES.

Tells Tuskegee Students Not to Mix Too Much with Government.

TUSKEGEE, Ala., May 21.—The twenty-fourth annual commencement exercises of the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, of which Booker T. Washington is Principal, began to-day with the commencement sermon by Rabbi A. J. Messing of Montgomery. Bishop J. W. Hood, Senior Bishop of the A. M. E. Zion Church, participated in the services.

Rabbi Messing in his sermon gave this advice to the graduates:

"Do not mix too much with the Government; do not seek for snaps. It is better to be a first-class man than a fourth-class Postmaster."

Cornerstone Laying at Holy Cross.

WORCESTER, Mass. May 21.—The cornerstone of the new Alumni Hall of Holy Cross College was laid this afternoon in the presence of a large gathering of alumni. The cornerstone was blessed and set by Bishop Thomas D. Beaven of Springfield. The oration was delivered by James P. Carroll, '81, of Springfield.

Tiny Manhattan Tots Went to Prospect Park—Police Helped Them.

From where the tenements of Forsyth Street meet the tenements of Division Street, in the east side's heart, three pairs of tiny feet, belonging to seven-year-old Minnie Lea, seven-year-old Lucy Calibresa, and five-year-old Katie Satalina, started on a long tramp yesterday. Minnie had heard of a big place, across the new bridge, in Brooklyn, where there were flowers and trees and birds and grass for anybody to enjoy.

The six little feet found their way to the huge span over the East River. Across the bridge they walked, and on and on, until they came to think that the tale about the place of grass and flowers was only a fairy story. But bravely the tiny trio pushed on. At last, in the late afternoon, they came to a great open space, in the middle of which was a big white arch of stone, and beyond which stretched what seemed to be a section of the country set down in the city. It was Prospect Park. Then they knew that the wonderland Minnie's teacher had told about was real, and that they had found it. Even more beautiful was it than they had dreamed, and until the sun went down and the birds that they had watched with wonder and delight had ceased to hop and fly about, did they leave the leafy paths and bright green lawns to return home.

In the early evening a big policeman found the three at Grand Avenue and Eastern Parkway huddled together under a tree—tired, hungry, and lost. He took them to the station, where, after they had told Sergt. Knox about their journey into wonderland, he managed to get from Minnie that she lived at 18 Forsyth Street. The other little girls, she said, lived in Chrystie Street. Word was sent to the Manhattan police, and an hour or two later the parents of the children, who had been searching for them all day, called at the station and took them home.

DR. TUPPER TO COME HERE.

Will Become Pastor of the Madison Avenue Baptist Church.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 21.—The Rev. Dr. Kerr Boyce Tupper will accept the call to the pulpit of the Madison Avenue Baptist Church in New York, which offers him a salary of $10,000. He announced his decision to the congregation of the First Baptist Church here at this morning's service.

After the sermon Dr. Tupper said: "The congregation and church will please hear a communication from me which Dr. Keen will read." Dr. Keen, a Trustee of the church, then read a statement, in part as follows:

"As known by you, the Madison Avenue Baptist Church of New York City, on May 3 last, extended to me a unanimous and cordial invitation to become its pastor.

"Up to last month, when the first overture in this direction was made to me through a committee of the New York church, I had hoped and planned to have no other pastorate than the one with you, but as the Madison Avenue Church call has come to me absolutely unsought by and unexpected to myself, and that, too, to a work almost exactly like that which during nearly a decade I have endeavored under God to do for you, I felt compelled to give it most earnest thought, and during the past week, after careful and even tearful consideration of all interests involved, I have reached the conclusion that it is my duty to relinquish this joyous pastorate in Philadelphia for an untried work in another neighboring city. The call to New York seems to me as clearly and unmistakably from God.

"I ask, therefore, that you accept my resignation as your pastor, to take effect on the last Sunday in June, 1905. My reason for making the request that my work here close at so early a date is that it is my purpose, with my family, to go abroad about July 1, not to return until September, and so, of course, I could be of but little service to you after the first of July."

The Madison Avenue Baptist Church is the church of which the late Rev. Dr. George C. Lorimer was pastor.

DINNER OF THE PLEIADES.

They Are Bohemians and, Therefore, It Was an Occasion for Stunts.

The Pleiades, all of whom are shining stars in the sky of professionalism, theatrical and otherwise, and who together, according to the Chairman of their Arrangement Committee, constitute "the leading bohemian club in this city," held their annual dinner last night in the small ballroom of the Hotel Astor, and a lively time they had of it.

Paul N. Turner, the President, who also acted as toastmaster, applied a silver fork to a champagne bottle when he wanted to make himself heard after the dinner had been eaten and the time for "doing stunts" had come. Most, if not all of these "stunts" were done by members, and thus the time was spent till long after midnight. The programme was wholly impromptu, the toastmaster hooking his victims as quickly as he spied them.

Edwin Markham spoke, and so did S. M. Gardenshire, the Missouri author. J. Clarence Harvey told dialect stories. Alice Fischer recited. John Jerome Rooney, known as the author of "The Man Behind the Gun," read some of his own poetry. Edward E. Rice, a monologuist, brought down the house with a Dutch parody on Whittier's "Barbara Fritchie." Bob Hilliard recited, and so did Harrison Armstrong and Charles Bowers. David Bimberg played the violin.

Miss Narelle, known professionally as "the Irish-Australian songbird," and Miss Edith Chapman sang, Ethel Watts Mumford, another poet, recited. And so on, until Toastmaster Turner grew tired of beating his bottle before announcing more numbers. The souvenir programme arranged for the occasion contained many original contributions, prose and verse, by members, illustrated by other members.

LIKES A PENCIL DIET.

Much Vain Concern About a New Trait of the Bronx Zoo's Orrang-Outang.

Some boys fed an indelible pencil to the red orang-outang in the Primate House at the Bronx Zoo, on Saturday. The orang ate it with avidity and looked for more. There were no seeming ill-effects, and everything might have been placid contentment at the Zoo, had the ape been allowed to work out its own salvation.

But on Sundays the Morrisania Court squad is sent to the Zoo to maintain order. Policeman Meiland, who has seen many years' service in the court, has become almost a detective. When his eagle eye lighted on the red ape and saw that its face was blue, he knew that he had discovered either a clue or a symptom.

He did not know which, so he summoned the Zoo ambulance. Dr. Blair, who responded, made a diagnosis on the spot, and had the orang removed to the Zoo hospital. There, after a season of special treatment, the patient gave up the indelible pencil.

And then just as Dr. Blair was going to bulletin the fact that the animal was past danger to the many children who were inquiring for their pet all day long, the latter changed its mind, strained, and swallowed the pencil again before the veterinary could prevent it.

HARVARD MEN TO PUNISH SOCIETY VANDALISM

Students, Roused by Brooks House Entry, Plan Exposure.

MAY PROPOSE EXPULSIONS

Society Long Regarded as Myth, They Declare, Includes Outrageous Acts in Initiation.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 21.—Harvard students have determined to punish the Medical Faculty Society, which for years has been committing depredations about the university. They are aroused by the incident of the entry of the Phillips Brooks house, which resulted in the arrest last week of a prominent senior.

A number of undergraduates met last night and discussed means of apprehending the other three participants as well as unearthing the other members of the society. It is proposed, if necessary, to expel the entire lot from college.

The men who are interested in this movement are among the leaders in the university. Already they have secured proof that such a society as the Med Fac, for years considered as a myth, exists, and that its initiation includes the desperate deeds which have aroused the wrath of the authorities.

In their efforts to bring the vandals to justice the students are aided by The Harvard Crimson, which to-morrow will declare its attitude in a long editorial. Contrary to the paper's conservative policy, the name of the arrested wrongdoer will be published. This action is taken, it is understood, with the consent of the Faculty, which is anxious to see the evil stamped out.

ALBION W. TOURGEE DEAD.

Author of "A Fool's Errand"—Fatal Illness Due to an Old Wound.

BORDEAUX, May 21.—Judge Albion Winegar Tourgée of Mayville, N. Y., American Consul here, died this morning from acute uræmia, which resulted from an old wound.

Judge Tourgée was taken seriously ill some months ago, but his condition afterward improved, and it was believed he would recover. Recently, however, the disease took another serious turn.

Albion W. Tourgée was best known as the author of "A Fool's Errand, by One of the Fools," a novel of the reconstruction period in the South, which was published in 1879 and of which probably 200,000 copies have been sold.

In writing of the reconstruction period the author was treating of a subject with which he was thoroughly familiar. He was born in Ohio in 1838, and served in the civil war, being wounded at Bull Run and Perryville and being a prisoner in Libby Prison for six months. After the war he settled as a lawyer, farmer, and editor at Greensborough, N. C. He opposed the plan of reconstruction that was adopted, favoring instead the establishment of territorial governments in the seceding States. He was an active member of the North Carolina Constitutional Conventions of 1868 and 1875, and was a member of the commission appointed to codify and revise the State laws.

In 1868 he was elected Judge of the Superior Court for the Seventh Judicial District of North Carolina, and held that office till 1874. His district included the counties in which the Ku Klux Klan was most powerful, and several attempts were made to capture him.

In 1881 Judge Tourgée moved to Philadelphia, where he established a literary weekly. In 1897 he was appointed Consul at Bordeaux, and returned to that post after being for a time Consul General at Halifax, N. S. Among his literary works, besides "A Fool's Errand," are "Bricks Without Straw," "Hot Plowshares," "An Appeal to Caesar," and "Button's Inn."

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

Major James H. Butler.

Major James H. Butler, a wholesale jeweler and veteran of the civil war, died at the St. Luke's Hospital yesterday after a lingering illness. His death was due to a complication of diseases.

Major Butler was seventy-six years old. He was born and educated in Utica, N. Y., where as a young man he started in the wholesale jewelry trade. In 1852 he came to this city, where he established himself in the same line of business. He went to California in 1852, but returned to this city three years later.

In 1861, when the war broke out, he went to the front as a Captain of Company F, Thirty-second Regiment, New York State Volunteers, in which regiment, it was said yesterday, every officer was a Californian. He fought in the first battle at Bull Run and in fourteen other battles and a number of skirmishes. The worst injury he received was a scratch from a bullet on the back of his left hand. He was with the Army of the Potomac through the war, and was present when Gen. Lee surrendered. On the bloody field of Antietam his company was pressed back between the hostile firing lines, and escaped annihilation only by the soldiers lying flat on the ground on their stomachs. He was a Lieutenant Colonel on the staff of Gen. Butler. Before Richmond he personally established the picket line nearest the fortifications and stubbornly held them during the siege.

After the war he returned to this city and established himself as a diamond broker in Maiden Lane. He continued in this business up to the time of his last illness. He was a member of the George Washington Post, 108, G. A. R., and the Loyal Legion. He was a bachelor. Funeral services will be held on Tuesday in the chapel at St. Luke's Hospital.

William E. Cramer.

MILWAUKEE, May 21.—William E. Cramer, editor-in-chief of The Evening Wisconsin died early this morning of pneumonia. He was one of the oldest newspaper men in the United States, having been born on Oct. 29, 1817. He was an editorial writer on The Albany Argus from 1848 to 1861. Among his associates at that time were Horatio Seymour, Samuel J. Tilden, and Martin Van Buren. He has been blind and deaf for years, but kept up work.

Obituary Notes.

Hope for Mrs. Livermore.

MELROSE, Mass., May 21.—Mrs. Mary A. Livermore, who is ill at her home here, was in a semi-conscious state at 10:45 o'clock to-night. Her physician said that the turning point of the disease would be reached on Tuesday, and if the heart's action, which was being stimulated, remained strong until that period the chances were would be some hope of her recovery.

MRS. R. O. DOREMUS DEAD.

Prominent as Friend of Singers, Wife of the Well-Known Chemist.

Mrs. R. Ogden Doremus, wife of Prof. Doremus, the chemist, died early yesterday morning at Prof. Doremus's home, 80 Madison Avenue, after a lingering illness. Mrs. Doremus, whose maiden name was Estelle E. Skidmore, was the leader of the American colony in Paris during the most brilliant part of the reign of Napoleon III. in the early sixties. Prof. Doremus was then conducting experiments for the French Government.

Mrs. Doremus was a close personal friend of many of the great singers and musicians of the time. From the time Adelina Patti first appeared in America she carried on a correspondence with her. Ole Bull, Parepa Rosa, Camilla Urso, and Christine Nilsson were all entertained by her. The Doremuses formerly lived on Fourth Avenue, between Eighteenth and Nineteenth Streets. This and a later home of the family at 241 Madison Avenue were visited often by leaders of the musical world, with whom Mrs. Doremus kept in close touch. The present home of the family contains many mementos of these visits.

Musical entertainments were often given in Mrs. Doremus's home. At one time on her birthday Dodworth's Cornet Band, at that time the premier organization of its kind in the United States, serenaded her at the residence in Union Place. It was such a notable event that the illustrated papers of the day took it up and devoted pages to the musical entertainments that were constantly being held in the Doremus residence.

When Christine Nilsson arrived 1,500 Swedes, with lanterns and Dodworth's Band, filled the streets about the Doremus residence in Union Place, with the band of course having the space in the front garden. This demonstration blocked the streets all about, some ten thousand persons trying to come within earshot of the Doremus house.

Mrs. Doremus was born on May 6, 1830, in New York. She was married to Prof. Doremus on Oct. 1, 1850.

Mrs. Doremus was the daughter of Capt. Hubbard Skidmore, and was said to be the only member of the New York Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution whose father actually served in the Revolution. She was a Regent of the New York Chapter and honorary Vice President of the National society. She was recently re-elected President of the Underhill Society of America. She was a descendant of the Underhills, who received much of their land on Long Island by cession from the Pequots.

The Marriage of William Ashe

It is a fine thing to be in at the creation of a great book—to be able to tell your children how Pickwick Papers first came out in green covers, and to recall all the talk when Robert Elsmere was born.

And now here is a new title on a book—a name which your children's sons and daughters will know as they know the every-day things of life. A year ago and it did not exist. Now it belongs—as one critic has put it—"to the books that do not die." Perhaps this is putting it with a little over-emphasis; but if the judgment of critics and reviewers and the great ones means anything, it means that in "The Marriage of William Ashe" Mrs. Humphry Ward has written a story that will endure. There is a breadth of sympathy, a delicacy of touch in the great moments of abandonment, a realness which makes the book not so much a picture of life as Life itself.

The Candidate

"Out of such apparently crude and colorless material as a political campaigning trip in the West, Mr. Altsheler has constructed a strong and telling story of human loves and hates. It is a notably well written American novel with a wholesome love story to lighten the strenuousness of its political theme."—Albany Argus.

SON KILLS HIS FATHER IN DEFENDING MOTHER

Saved Her from a Beating and Found Himself in Danger.

IN JAIL PENDING AN INQUEST

Case of a Boy Parricide Whom the Townsfolk Expect a Jury to Justify.

BELLPORT, L. I., May 21.—After defending his mother and shielding her from a beating which her husband tried to give her, Joseph O'Connell, to save his own life from his angry father, shot and killed him. Young O'Connell has been arrested, and is held for the Coroner, who will hold an inquest early in the week. It is not believed that he will be detained longer than that, for his mother and younger brothers corroborate his story of what took place.

John T. O'Connell, the man killed, was about forty-five years old. The fact that he was drunk and quarrelsome in the village before going home this morning adds strength to the story told by his widow and their sons. Their version of the shooting is that O'Connell reached home about midnight. He was drunk and abusive, and began to abuse the three members of his family. Then he tried to beat his wife.

Young Joseph O'Connell—he is eighteen years old—went to his mother's assistance. Between the mother and son the drunken man was forced to desist, but this threw him into a wild rage. He ran from the house to the woodshed, and returned in a minute with an axe, with which he renewed the attack. This time the object of his rage was his eldest son.

Mrs. O'Connell and her younger son, a boy of fourteen, ran into another room. Joseph tried to follow them, but his father cut off his escape and made toward him with the axe. As his father approached Joseph whipped out a revolver and fired. The bullet entered the elder man's heart, and he dropped dead on the floor.

Coroner Moore is expected to hold the autopsy and inquest to-morrow or Tuesday.

PLAYING BURGLAR, BOYS SAY.

Six Arrested at Mount Vernon—Carried Away Stuff from Unoccupied House.

MOUNT VERNON, May 21.—Playing burglar too realistically threatens to result seriously for six boys of well-known families unless they can show they had no evil intent. The boys are all between ten and fifteen years of age.

The house which, until recently, stood at 21 South First Avenue, is being moved across lots to a site on Union Avenue. Before it started on its journey it was occupied by Harry T. Dutler. When the house was about to be moved he left a lot of his belongings stored in the attic. Yesterday Mr. Dutler visited the building and found some of his property gone.

Detective George C. Atwell to-day arrested Carl Stroebel, Ray Dolley, Courtney Stroebel, William Roe, Arthur Reed, and Frederick Woolrich. The boys said that on Friday while playing about the building Woolrich pried open a door with a crowbar, and later in the evening they decided to play burglar. They carted away a lot of property, using a baby carriage found in the house to transport the stuff.

SUPPORTS ROOSEVELT'S PLAN

Country Won't Stand Being Squeezed by Trusts, Says Mr. Palmer.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 21.—Congressman Palmer of the Luzerne (Penn.) District expresses the opinion that, nothwithstanding the deep-seated conviction in Pennsylvania in favor of high protection, the people of the State will uphold the President in the policy laid down regarding the purchase of supplies for the Panama Canal. He interprets the policy as a simple business precaution against imposition.

"The protective tariff is sound," said Mr. Palmer, "in that it keeps the home market for our own manufacturers and likewise enables them to pay higher wages to American laboring men. That is one thing, and the combination of American producers to keep up prices so that our Government is to be forced into paying a higher price for home articles than foreign buyers are charged is another.

"This Government ought not to be made the victim of exorbitant charges in the name of protection. It is not a square deal, and the country won't put up with being squeezed by the trusts."

SUICIDE IN FRONT OF WIFE.

Man Who Took Pistol Locked Up Till Truth Was Known.

NEWARK, May 21.—Albert Schillig committed suicide by shooting himself in the head this morning in his saloon, 53 Hamburg Place, in the presence of his wife and Frank Hannis, a neighbor. Schillig and Hannis were drinking when Mrs. Schillig came down stairs from their living apartments and asked her husband to close up the place and go to bed. He ordered her back to her rooms and words followed. Suddenly Schillig picked up a revolver that lay on the bar, and placing the barrel to his head fired.

Schillig at the time was seated on a high stool behind the bar. Hannis was half asleep, leaning on the bar with his head on his arms. When Mrs. Schillig saw her husband pick up the revolver she screamed. At this moment there was a report at the other end of the bar, where Schillig sat, and, looking in that direction, Hannis saw the saloon keeper lurch over the bar. Hannis ran behind the bar, and, grabbing the revolver from Schillig's hand, placed it in his own pocket. He then dashed out into the street, where a policeman stopped him. At the sight of the policeman he dropped in a faint.

While he lay there the policeman took the revolver from him, and when Hannis recovered he was taken to the police station. Word was soon received of the shooting in the saloon and Hannis was charged with the deed. He was freed as soon as the truth was known.

BREWERY EMPLOYE MISSING.

A. J. Pfister, Connected with Newark Firm, Gone from Orange Home.

Special to The New York Times.

ORANGE, N. J., May 21.—A considerable stir has been aroused in Orange over the absence from his home, at 166 Main Street, of Adam J. Pfister, who is prominent in brewing circles in Newark, and who is connected with the brewing firm of George H. Wiedenmeyer. Mr. Pfister has not been seen in Orange since Tuesday last.

Pfister left his home at the usual hour on Tuesday, taking no extra clothing and giving no hint that he would not return at night. He lived with his father, wife, and two small children. Mrs. Pfister says she can throw no light on her husband's whereabouts.

"He is gone, but where he went and why he went we do not know," she said. "We have been unable to get any trace of him. When he left home on Tuesday he seemed in his usual cheerful frame of mind, and he said nothing to indicate that anything was worrying him."

Mr. Wiedenmeyer, it is said, visited the Pfister home on Friday. Pfister occupied an important place with the firm, and he was in receipt of a good salary.

Captain Will Call McAdoo's Attention to Policeman's Bravery.

A special report will be made to Commissioner McAdoo by Capt. Gardner, who is in charge of the Williamsburg Bridge squad, on the bravery of Policeman Charles Gesele, who was badly burned yesterday while making rescues from a burning tenement at 100 Suffolk Street.

Gesele was on duty on the bridge when he saw a fire in the apartments of Morris Garfingel on the fourth floor of the building. He ran to the scene and learned that the occupants of the third and fourth floors had not escaped.

He went through an adjoining house and reached the roof of the burning building. Gesele made his way down the smoke-filled stairs. At the third floor he heard a child's groans. He found Mrs. Diana Moskowitz and her ten-months-old baby almost suffocated. He carried out the child and handed it to David Kodachs, a tenant on the first floor. Then Gesele rushed back and dragged out Mrs. Moskowitz. She was severely burned.

Gesele was taken to the Bridge Police Station in Williamsburg suffering from burns on the face and neck and arms. Later he was taken to the Williamsburg Hospital, and then sent home.

KANSAS-BAYONNE PIPE LINE.

Standard Oil Soon Expects to Take All Western Field's Output.

KANSAS CITY, May 21.—W. F. Gates of Independence, Kan., Superintendent of all the pipe lines of the Standard Oil Company in Kansas, Missouri, Indian Territory, and Oklahoma, to-day said:

"We are preparing to take care of all the oil production in the Kansas field. The Whiting, Ind., Pipe Line will be completed in a few days, and then we can handle all the oil produced west of the Mississippi."

At Whiting the pipe line running from the Sugar Creek refinery, on the outskirts of Kansas City, will connect with the company's lines to Bayonne, N. J., completing a line that will reach half way across the continent.

The effect of the completion of the line to Whiting will be that the Standard Oil Company will be able to handle 75,000 barrels of oil a day. Already the pipe line Superintendents are laying out new lines. Construction forces are working on an order for 150 tanks of 35,000 barrels capacity each.

UNION CHARGES OVERTIME.

Says Jerome Park Reservoir Contractors Violate Eight-Hour Promise.

In reply to a request to the Controller to withhold payments from McDonald & Onderdonk, contractors for the Jerome Park Reservoir, until they have lived up to the terms of the contract, a letter was received by the Central Federated Union from Deputy Controller Phillips yesterday saying that the letter making the request was not specific enough. It is charged by the union that the firm has failed to live up to the eight-hour rule in the employment of men at the Jerome Park Reservoir, where there is now a strike, although it says that through a special bill in the Legislature the Board of Estimate some time ago was authorized to appropriate over $460,000 in order that the eight-hour rule might be lived up to. At the time the contract was taken the eight-hour law was not in operation, and the appropriation was made, the central body says, before the eight-hour law was declared to be unconstitutional. It further says that the money was paid to the firm.

The Secretary was directed to write again to the Controller giving more details.

$300,000 WILKESBARRE FIRE.

Crossed Wires Start Double Blaze Which Destroys Big Building.

WILKESBARRE, Penn., May 21.—Fire to-day destroyed the Welles Building, on the west side of the Public Square, one of the costliest structures in the city. The loss is $300,000.

When discovered in the millinery department of Isaac Long's dry goods store, on the second floor, it was controlled by the firemen in less than an hour. A second fire started in the basement about an hour later, and gave them a fight until afternoon.

A careful investigation was made by experts, who declare that the first fire was caused by the crossing of electric wires. The water used in quenching the first flames followed some of the wires into the basement. A short circuit was formed, causing a flash from a large dynamo, which started the second fire among some inflammable stored goods. Before the general alarm could be sounded the entire building, a five-story structure of brick and stone, was a mass of flames.

DIED AFTER FIVE-WEEK SLEEP

Dr. Erwin Fischer Had an Abscess in the Brain—Operation Vain.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, May 21.—Dr. Erwin Fischer of Pittsburg, who for nearly five weeks had been asleep, died this morning.

Dr. Fischer broke down while working with some spotted fever patients, and when he collapsed five weeks ago it was feared that he had contracted that disease in some form. An autopsy performed this afternoon by Dr. Karl Emmerling showed that there had been a large and peculiarly shaped abscess in the brain. Dr. Carl Berg of New York performed an operation on Dr. Fischer last Tuesday, but the patient was then too far gone.

KNIFE FOR BRIDGE BLUECOAT.

Prisoner's Blade Broke on Policeman's Buckle—Arrest After Struggle.

Policeman Harry Smith of the Brooklyn Bridge police took to the Oak Street Station last night a man named John Ryan, who said he had no home. Ryan was charged with misbehaving in front of Ferry's drug store, and causing annoyance to women, when Smith ordered him to move on. He moved as ordered, but at the Bridge terminal he turned upon the policeman and knocked him down.

Smith said that Ryan then drew a long shoemaker's knife and tried to stab him, but the blade struck the policeman's belt buckle and broke. Policemen Gude and Gardiner ran to Smith's assistance and after much struggling took Ryan to the station house.

FOUND AN UNSET DIAMOND.

Letter Carrier Let His Friends Spread the News and the Owner Heard It.

NEWARK, N. J., May 21.—When Albert Lane, a retired lawyer, of Coopers-town, N. Y., was visiting here a few days ago he lost an unset diamond weighing more than two carats. The stone was found in the street by Charles F. Byrne, a letter carrier.

Byrne called the attention of his fellow-letter carriers and the clerks in the Post Office to the stone, and requested them to speak about his find wherever they could, in the hope that he might find the owner. Mr. Lane learned that the stone had been found, and after he had established his ownership Byrne turned it over to him and was well rewarded.

BAN ON SUNDAY GOLF MAY WRECK A CLUB

North Valley of Greenwich Sees Membership Dwindle.

WAS FIFTY, NOW IS FIFTEEN

Sixteen Acres Leased for a Slight Consideration by William Rockefeller, Honorary Member.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., May 21.—The North Valley Golf Club of Greenwich, after an existence of five years, is undecided whether or not to renew its lease of sixteen acres of William Rockefeller's land, for the reason that at present there are only about enough members to hold the various offices. From a club of fifty it has dwindled to fifteen, and those fifteen are in a quandary as to what course to pursue to induce new members to join—whether to countenance Sunday playing or to forbid it.

The club was organized in 1900, having among its members Richard A. White, Treasurer of the New York Central Railroad; Albert C. Peck, a New York auctioneer; August M. Brush, a New York broker, and others, who spent holidays, Saturday afternoons, and occasionally a Sunday on the five-hole course. William Rockefeller, who leased the land for a slight consideration, was made an honorary member.

For two seasons there was no rule forbidding the use of the grounds for Sunday playing, although no match games were played. Then those who had become experts by Sunday play resigned to become members of larger clubs, and the North Valley found it necessary to look for members to replace them. They found several who would have joined but for the fact that use of the links on Sunday was objected to. A resolution forbidding the use of the grounds Sunday was passed, and several good churchmen joined, among them a clergyman.

For three years this rule has been adhered to, and now the club sees itself facing a dilemma. A club meeting may be held some night this week to settle the matter.

ROBBED IN ASYLUM.

Relatives Say Patient Went There with Bag of Money Concealed About Him.

Special to The New York Times.

BLOOMFIELD, N. J., May 21.—William A. Francis, a retired paper box manufacturer, was admitted as a patient last Tuesday to the Essex County Hospital for the Insane. When the commitment papers were signed Director Thomas McGowan of the Board of Freeholders, who is a friend of Mr. Francis, called up Dr. Daniel M. Dill, Superintendent of the asylum, and told him that when Mr. Francis arrived to make careful search of his clothes and to look out for a bag of money which he carried suspended by a cord about his neck.

When Mr. Francis arrived at the asylum Dr. Dill was out. An attendant searched the patient's pockets and found $137, which he handed to David B. Lyall, a son-in-law of Mr. Francis.

Mr. Lyall, knowing that Dr. Dill had been informed of the bag containing money, and fearing that his father-in-law might create a disturbance if he asked the attendant to remove it, left without saying anything about it.

Inquiries were made by Mr. Francis's friends the next day if the hospital authorities were certain that Mr. Francis did not have the bag of money when he arrived at the institution. A search was instituted, but no trace of the bag was found. Detectives are looking for one of the asylum attendants, who has not appeared for work for several days.

SCHOOLBOY A SUICIDE.

Feared Whipping Because He Had Been Suspended.

NEW BRITAIN, Conn., May 21.—George Walker, fifteen years old, committed suicide some time last week because he was suspended from school and was afraid to let his father know it. His body was found near Mountain Grove today.

A two-ounce bottle, partly filled with carbolic acid, was lying near, and also a note signed by the boy, saying that he killed himself because, if his parents had found out that he was suspended from school, he would have got "such a whipping as he never would forget."

RICHMOND, Ind., May 21.—Official confirmation was given here to-day to the report that a merger practically has been completed for traction lines between Columbus, Ohio, and Indianapolis, and that through dining and sleeping car service will be introduced.

This is the first important step in a traction system that is to connect Pittsburg and St. Louis. It is being promoted by the Widener-Elkins syndicate of Philadelphia, which is investing millions in traction property in the Central West.

TO TEST JERSEY AUTO LAWS.

Similar Action to be Taken in Other States After Decision There.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, May 21.—There is soon to be a test in the courts of the constitutionality of the New Jersey law requiring registration of automobiles as well as all legislation in the state regulating their use. This is not only a New Jersey affair, but it will affect all the different States in turn.

Last week a committee from the National Association of Automobile Manufacturers made arrangements to begin the suit. Several other States were under discussion, but the committee decided to make the test under the New Jersey law because they feel that it would be easier to force a decision on the main issue in this state, instead of on a mere technical point, as would be necessary in New York or Pennsylvania.

The reason for selecting New Jersey as the battle ground is that the Jersey law is free from several petty and objectionable features common to laws of this character in other States. In all respects the New Jersey law is considered remarkably liberal.

BULLETS IN HEAD, HE LIVES.

Two of Them Inconvenienced Would-Be Suicide Only Temporarily.

BALTIMORE, May 21.—George Horst, thirty-two years old, an employe in a brewery here, attempted on May 3 to commit suicide by shooting himself twice in the head. The bullets have not been removed, but, to the amazement of physicians who have interested themselves in his case, he will, according to present indications, soon be well enough to be out of the house.

One of the bullets entered just above the right ear, and the other just below the right temple. Ordinarily either bullet would have been sufficient to cause death, but in Horst's case they apparently resulted in nothing more serious than temporary paralysis of the left and part of the right side.

At first it was decided to probe for the bullets, but this plan was abandoned. Horst's mind began to clear rapidly after the second day, and five days after the shooting he smoked a cigar.

HATPIN GAVE AWAY DISGUISE.

Girl Started to See West as a Boy—Arrested in Pittsburg.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, May 21.—A young girl from Grove City, Penn., was arrested today while masquerading in boy's clothing. She was trying to buy a ticket for the Far West when a hatpin sticking through the jaunty cap attracted the attention of a station officer.

She found that the girl had run away from home about a month ago, and had since been in Allegheny. She comes of good family, and her father will come tomorrow to take her home. The girl declared that she had always wanted to see California. She gathered enough money to take her to Chicago and intended working her way from there.

BROOKLYN HANDICAP TO BE WEEK'S FEATURE

$20,000 Stake Will Mark Opening of Gravesend Meeting.

TWENTY HORSES MAY START

Delhi the Favorite Among Turfmen for Famous Event — Belmont Park's Closing Stakes.

The Brooklyn Handicap, in its nineteenth running, will be decided on Thursday of this week and will mark the change of racing from the first meeting on the Belmont Park track to the oval of the Gravesend course of the Brooklyn Jockey Club. Interest in the Brooklyn is keen, but it divides popular attention with wonder as to what effect on form the change from the immense distances and "wrong way" of running at Belmont Park to the mile course and rounded turns, with the horses racing in the old-fashioned way, the rail to the left, at Gravesend, will bring. At Belmont Park it has taken fifteen days of the meeting to prove to horsemen that the shortest way to the winning post is on the rail, and a number of the jockeys seemingly are not yet convinced that this is true.

A number of the most prominent horses in the Brooklyn Handicap have raced at Belmont Park, but none has raced so often there as to give any excuse for its effect on his training.

Of the horses that are regarded as probable starters for the big event of Thursday, Colonial Girl, Acbell, Graziallo, Syconby, and Jacquin have been returned winners in recent races at Belmont Park, while of the notables that have run there and been beaten the most prominent are Delhi, which was disqualified for a foul after he finished first in his race; Beldame, Burleigh, and Tanya. On the reports of training progress about twenty horses now are included in the list of horses that are likely to start, and in view of the fact that none of the entries that has been trained especially for the race stands out conspicuously from the crowd at the weights, it is probable that the field for the nineteenth Brooklyn Handicap may number that many horses. Hermis, the top weight, has been announced positively as a non-starter, and Ort Wells, the next in the weights, is very doubtful, as his progress has been of a nature to indicate that he will not be ready until the Suburban is run.

Delhi, with his 124 pounds, thus becomes the top weight of the entries that are counted in the list of starters, and is now the favorite among the horsemen, as his preparation has been a most satisfactory one, and the trainers are unanimous in throwing out the brush that Witch Hazel gave him as in the nature of a fluke, under conditions that did not permit Delhi to show anything like his real merit. Syconby, the crack three-year-old of the Keene stable, which divided the Metropolitan Handicap with Race King, is among the probable runners for the Brooklyn, and may be Mr. Keene's second representative in the race, as his other engagements at Gravesend come late in the meeting, and he is not in the Belmont, run on the last day at Belmont Park. August Belmont also has two entries that are both ready, in Beldame and Lord of the Vale, and while it is not unlikely that both may start, Lord of the Vale is the horsemen's choice of the pair, on their recent work.

Another stable with two entries, both of which have been pointed for the Brooklyn, is that of the Western horseman, C. E. Rowe, with Colonial Girl and First Mason, though Colonial Girl seems so much the more advanced of the pair just now that she is likely to be the reliance of the stable. Broomstick, of the stable of S. S. Brown, is another of the high weights that is ready to race and that is counted among the starters.

Of the lighter weights the more conspicuous in their training or in recent racing are W. B. Jennings's pair, Dainty and Proper; the Columbia stable's Graziallo, E. E. Smather's Witful, D. C. Johnson's Jacquin, Mrs. J. McLaughlin's Pasadena, the Boston Stable's Ostrich, and H. B. Duryea's Chieftain. Notable among the entries are Harry Payne Whitney's pair of great fillies, Tanya and Artful, stars among last season's two-year-olds. No three-year filly ever has won a Brooklyn Handicap, and only two three-year-old colts have ever been first for the stakes, but as the Whitney fillies have only one other engagement at Gravesend, and that a race which will be just as hard as the Brooklyn, and one in which they will have to carry higher weights, one or both of them may start for the big handicap, which, with its $20,000 guaranteed value, is the most valuable race of the Brooklyn meeting. This season Tanya's chance looks to be second to none, as the best horses of the probable starters are Blandy, Wild Mint, Migraine, Merry Lark, Dreamer, and Sparkling Star, and the opportunity to win the classic Belmont and its trophy in plate may induce the stable to prefer that race to the Brooklyn.

Cormack, American Jockey, Rode Filly for the $10,000 Purse.

PARIS, May 21.—The Prix de Diane (the French Oaks) for three-year-old fillies, purse $10,000, ranking next to the Grand Prix de Paris, was decided to-day at Chantilly, Veil Picard's Clyde, ridden by the American jockey, Cormack, winning by a head. Clyde was at five to one in the betting. Edmund Blanc's Muskerry was the favorite, but was unplaced. There were four fillies in the race.

There was a brilliant attendance, women as usual utilising the opportunity by donning Summer dresses. The scene, however, was somewhat marred owing to the chilliness of the weather.

WOMAN'S DEATH STRANGE

Told Druggist She Had Taken Disinfectant—Unconscious a Week.

Miss Amelia Selter, 30 years old, of 325 West Twenty-seventh Street, died at Roosevelt Hospital yesterday after having been unconscious since she was taken to the institution a week ago. The surgeon in charge reported the death to the Coroners' office, and asked for an autopsy.

On the morning of May 13 Miss Selter went to a drug store at Eighth Avenue and Forty-second Street and asked the clerk for an emetic. The said that she had taken a dose of some sort of disinfectant in mistake for cough medicine. The proprietor of the store advised her to see a physician and she left. About an hour later she came back to the store and asked for some sort of medicine, and the proprietor called in Policeman McKeon of the West Forty-seventh Street Station. The policeman summoned an ambulance. By the time the ambulance reached the drug store she was unconscious.

Her brother, Andrew M. Selter, who is in business in this city and lives at Plainfield, searched the woman's rooms and says all he found there was a bottle of tonic and a bottle of tooth wash.

BAN ON ELEVATOR MIRRORS.

Cause Accidents to Passengers, Says Cleveland Building Inspector.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, May 21.—The Building Inspector's office has one eye on the mirror-lined elevators of the city. Mirrored cars and the attraction of the reflectors, Deputy Building Inspector Pongee believes, cause many accidents.

"They are usually placed at such an angle that a woman in stepping up to one blocks the passageway," said he. "Often a woman will forget that a portion of her skirt protrudes beyond the grating, and accidents occur in this way as well. Not only women, but men are inclined to grow forgetful of personal safety on entering cars and beholding the glass-lined wall before them or to one side."

MAY SET UP GUN QUARANTINE.

Iowa Board of Health Defied by Shell Rock Schools.

Special to The New York Times.

SHELL ROCK, Iowa, May 21.—This town may be placed in control of armed deputies by order of the State authorities to enforce the quarantine laws. The State Board of Health insists that there is an epidemic of scarlet fever here, while the local health authorities, School Board and citizens say there is not.

Dr. F. W. Powers of Waterloo and Dr. A. M. Linn of Des Moines, who were sent here by the State Board of Health to investigate, pronounced it scarlet fever.

As the result of threats from enraged citizens the physicians left town during the night. Dr. C. P. Thompson, a local physician, who agreed with them, was hanged in effigy. Dr. W. H. Smith, who placed quarantine signs on several houses, was threatened with violence, and the signs were torn down within ten minutes. The School Board asserts that it will prevent the fumigation of the school buildings by force if necessary. The State authorities have notified Superintendent Sharpe to close the schools.

YUKON RIVER FLEET OFF.

Rush of Miners to Tanana—Lawlessness at Fairbanks.

Special to The New York Times.

TACOMA, Washington, May 21.—Yukon River and its tributaries opened completely on Thursday, permitting navigation from Le Barge to St. Michael. Twenty steamers, with barges and small boats, left Dawson and other points on the upper Yukon for Fairbanks, carrying supplies, machinery, and hundreds of passengers who are rushing to the Tanana district.

Provisions are very short throughout Tanana. For two months hundreds of miners have been living on rice and rabbits. Gold is arriving at Fairbanks, in quantities from Tanana Creek. Numerous robberies have occurred. The business men of Fairbanks have formed strong vigilance committees to enforce law and prevent further crime.

REV. DE LARME STAYS AWAY.

A Substitute in His Pulpit and an Empty Seat Where Miss Mather Sits.

PATERSON, May 21.—The First Baptist Church was filled this morning largely by the curious, but the Rev. A. A. De Larme, whose resignation is in the hands of the Trustees, did not appear in the pulpit. The Rev. Benjamin Otto of Jersey City officiated and read the note from the Rev. Mr. De Larme asking him to assume the duty.

In the interlude to the sermon the preacher expressed a hope that the health of Mr. De Larme might quickly be restored, and sympathized with the congregation, which had been so suddenly deprived of its pastor's services.

Almost as much interest attached to the pew of Arthur Vanderbree as to the pulpit. Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbree were in their places, but Mrs. Vanderbree's sister, Miss Martha Mather, to whom the minister says he is not engaged to be married, did not appear.

It is understood that the Trustees have not yet received a response from the minister to grant him a six months' leave of absence, with pay, if he will reconsider his determination to resign. He is expected to answer this week, as his resignation is to take effect on June 1. No action has yet been taken about investigating the contradictory statement of the minister and the relatives of Miss Mather in regard to the engagement beyond appointing a committee for the purpose.

CHINESE PEACE DOVE COOS.

Ah Ling and Wah Sing Shake Hands in Court After Battle.

At the suggestion of Magistrate Whitman, in the Essex Market Court, yesterday Wah Sing and Ah Ling, Chinese laundrymen, who for the last three months had been sworn enemies, again became friends. The men swore in court on counter-charges of assault, and each appeared very desirous at first to prosecute the other. Wah Sing, who is six feet tall, has his place of business on Forsyth Street, near Grand, and Ah Ling, who is only four feet five inches tall, lives in Mott Street.

Ah Ling told the court that Wah Sing had owed him several dollars for nearly a year, and Saturday night he decided to collect it. Arriving at Sing's laundry, he got into an argument over the affair, and in the quarrel he had to strike his enemy over the head with an iron bar, he said, to make him understand the situation. He believed that this would make Sing hand over the money.

Ah Sing said that he was asleep in his laundry when Ah Ling entered and started to rifle the money drawer. He protested against this action and assaulted his countryman. Magistrate Whitman, after hearing the Chinamen's stories, advised them to shake hands and be friends again. The men scowled at each other, then smiled, and grasped hands. The charges were withdrawn, and they journeyed forth together.

Picked Up Around the Diamond.

The game played yesterday at Washington Park was the one scheduled for to-day between the Brooklyn and Chicago teams.

Ritter, the Brooklyn catcher, is suffering from chills and fever, and is not likely to play again for several days.

Brooklyn begins a five-game series with the New Yorks at the Polo Grounds on Friday, but Monday's game will be canceled, so as to allow the two teams to play at Washington Park on Sunday.

Frank Oliver, Fordham University's outfielder, is out of the game on account of bad hands. One is poisoned and the other is sprained, the result of sliding to second base in the Lafayette game. Catcher McCarthy is also laid up with a split finger. Both men, however, expect to be able to play in the Georgetown game on Decoration Day.

Brooklyn Tries Three Pitchers Against Chicago, but Loses by 11 to 2.

The Brooklyn team's poor showing in the National League this season has not been wholly due to indifferent exhibitions, but rather to ill-luck just at the period when victory was almost assured. Hanlon's men at times have played a superior game, and at other times played wretchedly, but the five thousand enthusiasts who were at Washington Park yesterday hardly expected that they would play so poorly, the outcome of which was a defeat by a score of 11 to 2. Three pitchers were tried against the Chicagoans, but the runs kept piling up until Doescher went into the box in the eighth inning, and he succeeded in stopping further additions to the visitors' score. They were completely outplayed until they took their last turn at the bat, when a combination of three singles, a base on balls, and Chance's drop of a fly ball gave them two runs.

The game was never in doubt after the first inning, when the Chicagos amassed a collection of five hits, including a home run and two triples, and, with the aid of a horrible throw by Jones to second base and a base on balls, six runs were tallied. The visitors did not let a chance to get around the bases escape them, and their base running was one of the conspicuous features of the game. Casey began the lively proceedings by going to first on four bad balls, but on Schulte's bunt to Jones should have been easily retired at second. Jones, however, made a poor throw to Owens. Maloney then hit over Sheckard's head for a home run, and this was followed by a triple by Chance. The latter scored the fourth run on Slagle's safe stroke to centre, but the latter was forced out by Tinker. Evers hit safely, and the two runs got across the plate on Kling's triple to left field. Lundgren's best effort was to strike out, and Casey's second appearance at the bat resulted in a fly out to Dobbs.

McIntyre succeeded Jones in the second inning, and Schulte opened with a safe hit. He reached second on Maloney's sacrifice, and, after Chance had got to first on called balls, Tinker hit a fly to centre field, which Dobbs missed. This gave Schulte a run. During the next four innings the Chicagos could do nothing with McIntyre's delivery. He struck out King and Lungren in succession in the third inning, and struck out five in all. In the seventh inning, however, the Brooklyn infield became rattled, and by a couple of hits, including a double by Schulte, costly errors by Bergen and Batch, and other ridiculous plays, four runs were tallied. The score:

NATIONAL LEAGUE.

Brooklyn Tries Three Pitchers Against Chicago, but Loses by 11 to 2.

The Brooklyn team's poor showing in the National League this season has not been wholly due to indifferent exhibitions, but rather to ill-luck just at the period when victory was almost assured. Hanlon's men at times have played a superior game, and at other times played wretchedly, but the five thousand enthusiasts who were at Washington Park yesterday hardly expected that they would play so poorly, the outcome of which was a defeat by a score of 11 to 2. Three pitchers were tried against the Chicagoans, but the runs kept piling up until Doescher went into the box in the eighth inning, and he succeeded in stopping further additions to the visitors' score. They were completely outplayed until they took their last turn at the bat, when a combination of three singles, a base on balls, and Chance's drop of a fly ball gave them two runs.

The game was never in doubt after the first inning, when the Chicagos amassed a collection of five hits, including a home run and two triples, and, with the aid of a horrible throw by Jones to second base and a base on balls, six runs were tallied. The visitors did not let a chance to get around the bases escape them, and their base running was one of the conspicuous features of the game. Casey began the lively proceedings by going to first on four bad balls, but on Schulte's bunt to Jones should have been easily retired at second. Jones, however, made a poor throw to Owens. Maloney then hit over Sheckard's head for a home run, and this was followed by a triple by Chance. The latter scored the fourth run on Slagle's safe stroke to centre, but the latter was forced out by Tinker. Evers hit safely, and the two runs got across the plate on Kling's triple to left field. Lundgren's best effort was to strike out, and Casey's second appearance at the bat resulted in a fly out to Dobbs.

McIntyre succeeded Jones in the second inning, and Schulte opened with a safe hit. He reached second on Maloney's sacrifice, and, after Chance had got to first on called balls, Tinker hit a fly to centre field, which Dobbs missed. This gave Schulte a run. During the next four innings the Chicagos could do nothing with McIntyre's delivery. He struck out King and Lungren in succession in the third inning, and struck out five in all. In the seventh inning, however, the Brooklyn infield became rattled, and by a couple of hits, including a double by Schulte, costly errors by Bergen and Batch, and other ridiculous plays, four runs were tallied. The score:

FRENCH OAKS WON BY CLYDE.

Cormack, American Jockey, Rode Filly for the $10,000 Purse.

PARIS, May 21.—The Prix de Diane (the French Oaks) for three-year-old fillies, purse $10,000, ranking next to the Grand Prix de Paris, was decided to-day at Chantilly, Veil Picard's Clyde, ridden by the American jockey, Cormack, winning by a head. Clyde was at five to one in the betting. Edmund Blanc's Muskerry was the favorite, but was unplaced. There were four fillies in the race.

There was a brilliant attendance, women as usual utilising the opportunity by donning Summer dresses. The scene, however, was somewhat marred owing to the chilliness of the weather.

ST. LOUIS, May 21.—After a week's illness, Philip Busch, son of Adolphus Busch, the brewer, died to-day at St. Luke's Hospital of appendicitis. Adolphus Busch, his wife, and his daughter are on the Atlantic Ocean going to Europe.

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

Washington Got Only One Hit Off Smith and Lost by 2 to 1.

CHICAGO, Ill., May 21.—One of the largest crowds that ever attended a baseball game in this city saw the Chicago team of the American League defeat the Washingtons to-day in a rather sensational game by a score of two to one. The fielding of the local men was the best seen on the local grounds this year, and, while their batting was weak, that of the visitors was weaker, Manager Stahl being the one to make a safe hit off Smith. A base on balls, a sacrifice hit, and a single in the first inning gave the Washingtons their only run. A one-handed catch by Cassidy, and a running catch by Nill, the second baseman, were among the conspicuous features of the fielding. The score:

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Declines Last Week Outnumbered Advances Nine to One.

St. Paul Failed as a Leader—Selling Concentrated on Union Pacific and the Steel Stocks.

One result that has been expected from the continued liquidation of speculative accounts in the stock market was a shifting of interest from stocks to bonds. The record of last week's transactions shows that while very few stocks escaped losses the bond department was relatively steady. Of the stocks that moved a point or more, 139 declined and sixteen advanced, while in the bonds the record was twenty-one declines to fourteen advances. If this may be taken as an indication that the looked-for movement from stocks to bonds has begun it is a favorable sign, for while slower than some other influences none is more effective in steadying the market in general than a quiet absorption of investment issues. One fact that was deserving of special attention in considering the details of last week's market was that to a larger degree than in any recent week the trading was confined to the dozen stocks that were the leaders of the list. These twelve supplied 3,519,480 shares out of a total of 4,505,763 shares in all issues. This restriction of trading may be significant of increased bear activity; it certainly is not suggestive of a general selling movement. When investors rather than speculators take to selling, it may be expected that the record of sales will not show that a small number of stocks have practically monopolized the dealings.

As was to be expected in a market in which declines so largely predominated, all the most active issues ended with net losses varying from half a point in Brooklyn Rapid Transit to 6¼ points in American Smelting and Refining. Union Pacific and the Steel shares were the issues upon which during a considerable part of the week the selling was concentrated. The former supplied a total of 747,300 shares, and United States Steel common and preferred together showed a total of 958,785 shares. St. Paul, which early in the week assumed the rôle of market leader to a very poor purpose, inasmuch as other stocks fell while it was advancing, itself ended the week with a net loss of 3 points. Northern Securities, which had been instrumental in advancing the market the previous week, last week fell as much as it had previously advanced, its net loss being 7¼ points, as against the previous week's advance of 7⅝ points.

BUSINESS IN ENGLAND.

Unusual Amount of New Orders—Pig Iron Corner Apparently Over.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES.
Special Cable. Copyright, 1905.

LONDON, May 21.—The Times in its financial supplement to-morrow will say:

"An unusual amount of new business has come forward in the past week, but the actual gains in the volume of output in most industrial lines were unimportant on account of the high prices of raw materials.

"The grain markets all advanced in price, with increasing business passing. Seeds and seed oils are higher with the exception of linseed.

"Cotton has been fairly active, with slowly hardening prices. While American yarns as a rule maintained their satisfactory position spinners of Egyptian have found sales at profitable prices difficult. The position of the cloth markets continues excellent.

"The colonial wool sales closed strong at the best prices of the series. Home-grown wools are advancing. Woolen goods could be sold in good quantities at the prices ruling recently, but manufacturers generally require advances, and this checks business.

"The corner in pig iron is apparently over, for the time being at all events, and prices are much lower. Hematite is also lower.

"Wolverhampton and Sheffield report an improved demand for finished products and Glasgow and Newcastle some new shipbuilding orders.

"From Swansea it is reported that the steel bar makers have effected a combination.

"Copper has declined. Tin and lead are higher."

ASPHALT CASE PROBLEM.

Washington Awaits Official News of Venezuelan Court's Action.

WASHINGTON, May 21.—The State Department will await official notification from the American Chargé at Caracas of the decision of the Federal Court of Cassation against the New York and Bermudez Asphalt Company before deciding what, if any, further steps are to be taken by this Government to protect the interests of the company.

If it shall appear that the rights of the company have been infringed and justice denied it as a result of the decision, then an effort may be made to have the whole question referred to arbitration for settlement. Just what would be the outcome of such a request, however, is a matter of considerable conjecture, as President Castro heretofore has curtly declined to agree to this method of determining the company's rights.

The whole question of the dissolution of the contract enjoyed by the New York and Bermudez Asphalt Company has been pending in the high Venezuelan courts for nearly a year. After notice had been given that the Government had entered suit for annulment of contract, the company's affairs were put into the hands of the receiver appointed by the Venezuelan Government.

FIREMEN MAY BALK.

Disgruntled Richmond Volunteers Consider Refusing to Answer Alarms.

Fire Chief Croker, in company with Fire Marshal James Lestrange of Richmond Borough, on Saturday afternoon made another inspection of the fire houses in Richmond which the city may purchase from the volunteer firemen for use when the paid department is installed. It is expected that the paid department will be established by July 1. Twelve companies will be maintained for service in the built-up parts. Volunteer companies will continue in service in the outlying districts.

Some of the companies which are to be left out are considering the plan of refusing to answer alarms between this time and July 1. They declare they will be left with their houses, apparatus, and horses on their hands and the market glutted, while twelve of the companies will have theirs taken off their hands and well paid for. The companies dissolved without recompense say that some consideration should be shown them.

TENNIS DATES CONFLICT.

Local Club and Southern Meetings Start on Same Day.

Activity in lawn tennis circles takes on added interest this week as it marks the beginning of the championship and open tournament schedule of the big meetings of the season under the direction of the United States National Lawn Tennis Association. The Southern States championship will be started Saturday, May 27, on the courts of the Bachelors' Lawn Tennis Club, Washington, D. C., and on the same day the big open tournament of the New York Lawn Tennis Club, together with the Manhattan championship doubles, will begin on the courts at the junction of Manhattan Avenue and One Hundred and Twenty-third Street.

This conflict of dates is the first time that the National Association has ever scheduled two big meets for the same week. But there was such a demand for dates this season, there being nearly a score of important official tournaments added to the usual list, that it was impossible to avoid the conflict. In former years nearly all of the local rating men went down to Washington to tune up for the season's play. They always managed to keep the valuable cup, the oldest now in competition on the tennis courts of this country, in this city the better part of the time. Raymond D. Little, F. B. Alexander, and H. F. Allen all having held it. The latter is the present holder, and if Little, Parret, or J. C. Davidson can win it from him this year the cup will become their personal property by virtue of three wins and will be replaced by another trophy.

OARSMEN ON PARADE MAKE FINE SHOWING

Several Hundred Participate in Annual Review on Harlem.

C. S. TITUS LEADS THE LINE

Twenty Barges Appear Carrying Ladies as Passengers—Clubhouses Bedecked with Flags.

The annual parade of the Harlem River oarsmen took place yesterday afternoon, after a week's postponement. The glorious weather brought out hundreds of spectators, who viewed the aquatic event from many vantage points. The Speedway was lined with people from end to end, and many more saw the parade from Washington and High Bridges, while every boat club was filled to its utmost capacity.

The clubs which are located below Macomb's Dam Bridge vied with each other in their efforts to have their houses carry off the palm for artistic decorations. A particularly fine display was made by the Harlem Rowing Club. The house was a mass of blue and white, the club's colors, while long strings of flags and pennants ran from the peak of the roof to the float. The Metropolitan Boat Club used its colors, red and black, very profusely, and evoked much favorable comment. The Bohemian Boat Club and the Dauntless Boat Club also made fine displays.

Although the parade was scheduled to start from the Lenox Avenue Bridge at 2:30, it was after 4 before the first shell started up the river, owing to the tardiness of several visiting oarsmen. When Commander William Regan, Metropolitan Boat Club, had finally assigned the boats to the different divisions the start was made without a hitch, and the procession up the river to Sherman's Creek began. Past "Scullers' Row" a big ovation was received, the applause continuing until the last barge had passed.

The first division was composed of single scullers, with C. S. Titus, ex-champion of America, in the Nonpareil Boat Club colors, leading. Following Titus were Frank Veseley, Bohemian Boat Club; G. Youngs, Atalanta Boat Club; and Fred Kafka, Atalanta Boat Club, all rowing in single shells. There were eight single scullers in the first division.

Mulcahy and Varley, Atalanta Boat Club, the present champions of America in the doubles, had the place of honor in their class. Among the clubs represented in this event were the Harlem Boat Club, Aatalanta Boat Club, Union Boat Club, Bohemian Boat Club, Nassau Boat Club, Nonpareil Boat Club, Metropolitan Boat Club, and Lone Star Boat Club.

Edward Anderson, Dauntless Boat Club, and Herman Hjertberg, Union Boat Club, were in charge of the division for four-oared gigs and shells. A number of visiting clubs were represented in this division. The Active Boat Club, Hoboken, had a four-oared gig entered, manned by oarsmen dressed as frogs. The boat was decorated with green branches, and the green costumes of the rowers supposedly typified frogs among the marshes. It was a very pretty effect, and the men were continually cheered on their passage up the river. Other visiting clubs having four-oared gigs or shells out were: Ravenswood Boat Club, of Long Island; Woodcliffe Boat Club, Hudson Boat Club, and the Bloomingdale Boat Club, Hoboken.

In the next division, for eight-oared shells, the Harlem Rowing Club had two entries, and the Dauntless Boat Club, the Crescent Boat Club, the Lone Star Boat Club, the Atalanta Boat Club, the Nassau Boat Club, and the Metropolitan Boat Club, each one.

The last division, for four and eight oared barges, with ladies as passengers, was the best-filled event of the afternoon. At least twenty boats took part in the parade, and the gay dresses of the fair sex made a pretty picture in the bright sunlight. Six barges from the Active Boat Club, Hoboken, headed the division, and then in order came a four and eight oared barge from the Metropolitan Boat Club, an eight-oared barge from the Crescent Boat Club, an eight and four oared barge from the Ravenswood Boat Club, an eight-oared barge from the Woodcliffe Boat Club, an eight and four oared barge from the Dauntless Boat Club, an eight and four oared barge from the Atalanta Boat Club, an eight-oared barge from the Nassau Boat Club, an eight-oared barge from the Nonpareil Boat Club, and an eight-oared barge from the Wyanoke Boat Club.

After the parade disbanded at Sherman's Creek there was a short sprint home between the eights. It was hardly a race, but the men hit up a fast clip for a short distance, with the Nassau Boat Club showing a little in the lead.

The committee in charge included R. H. Stettig, Nassau Boat Club; John Nagle, Harlem Rowing Club; C. S. Titus, Nonpareil Boat Club; Frank Veseley, Bohemian Boat Club; Edward Anderson, Dauntless Boat Club; Herman Hjertberg, Union Boat Club; John D. Breen, Wyanoke Boat Club; William Regan, Metropolitan Boat Club; John J. O'Grady, Crescent Boat Club; Albert Heyne, Atlantic Boat Club, and Joseph Ryan, Seawanhaka Boat Club.

New West Side Athletic Club Games.

M. Bache won the individual honors in the first set of the regular monthly outdoor games of the New West Side Athletic Club, West Fifty-fourth Street, yesterday morning. His liberal handicap in the shot put gave him first place in this event by a big margin. In the 600-yard novice event he ran a pretty race, breasting the tape in 2:32.

The best race of the day was the "quarter," in which Dan Frank made his first appearance of the season on the cinderpath. He had the place of honor, and gave handicaps up to twenty-two yards. F. Mertz had the limit, and won the race, although Frank pushed him hard at the finish. The summary:

50-Yard Dash, Handicap.—Won by C. Peabody, (scratch;) W. Bechman, (5 feet,) second; F. Merz, (14 feet,) third. Time—0:07 4-5.

880-Yard Run, Handicap.—Won by W. Dawson, (5 yards;) R. Gregory, (22 yards,) second; E. Hoffman, (30 yards,) third. Time—2:10.

Shot Put, Handicap.—Won by M. Bache, (15 feet,) actual put, 35 feet 7 inches; C. Peabody, (14 feet,) actual put, 33 feet 2 inches, second; Gabriel, (15 feet,) actual put 32 feet 2 inches, third.

600-Yard Run, Novice.—Won by M. Bache; B. Keley, second; J. Lavers, third. Time—1:32.

440-Yard Dash, Handicap.—Won by F. Merz, (22 yards;) Dan Frank, (scratch,) second; W. Dawson, (7 yards,) third. Time—0:54 3-5.

Tombs Leads Sheepshead Bay Athletes

By winning one first and a second S. Tombs closed the gap separating him from A. Lossing for the general average cup of the Sheepshead Bay Athletic Club. Three events were decided at the weekly meeting of the club, which was held at Twenty-fifth and Voorhees Avenue, Sheepshead Bay, yesterday afternoon. Owing to the Decoration Day meet of the club, the usual weekly meeting scheduled for next Sunday will be postponed. It has been decided to add an open mile handicap to the Decoration Day programme.—Summary:

440-Yard Dash.—Won by T. Mugridge, (20 yards;) F. A. Van Cott, (15 yards,) second; A. Loesing, (scratch,) third. Time—1:01 2-5.

Putting the 12-Pound Shot.—Won by S. Tombs, (3 feet;) R. Potts, (3 feet,) second; C. Curry, third. Distance—33 feet 11¼ inches.

GET BETTER NINE, BROOKLYN

Pastor's Advice to Stop Sunday Baseball Across the Bridge.

The Rev. Dr Charles Edward Locke, pastor of the Hanson Place M. E. Church, Brooklyn, protested in his sermon last night against the playing of professional ball games on Sunday. He said that "if the Brooklyn club would only get better players they would have such big crowds on weekdays that they would not have to play Sunday games." The sermon was delivered before the Clinton Commandery, Knights Templar, who marched to the church in uniform. Talking of Sabbath desecration in American cities, he said that the people seemed to be either discouraged or indifferent, and the officials who were sworn properly to discharge their duty either powerless or mendacious. He continued:

"For instance, professional ball playing on Sunday is clearly illegal, and yet the Brooklyn Ball Club is permitted to conduct its games on Sunday. Large numbers of people pay money to see our local players regularly defeated by better players. It is argued that without the Sunday games the club cannot be made to pay and may lose its place in the National League. The simple truth is that better playing by better players is all that is needed to attract large week-day crowds. They are trying to make up by Sabbath desecration for their poor club organization.

"The Pittsburg Club does not play Sunday games on its home grounds, and stock in that club has been considered a good investment for years. Has it never occurred to those who urge the Sunday games that the players themselves are entitled to Sunday rest? It is nothing less than inhuman to require of those splendid fellows that they should work like slaves during the ball season at the expense of body and soul. I protest as a lover of this fine sport against our National game being made a National calamity."

SPEEDWAY'S HARNESS RACES.

Trotters and Pacers "Try Out" for Thursday's Cup Events.

Light harness sport of the highest order delighted a crowd of several thousand spectators on the Harlem River Speedway yesterday morning. Both the weather and track were ideal for fast work, and the rushing took the form of "try outs" for next Thursday's cup races in which about sixty of the best-known trotters and pacers on the road are entered. All classes were represented, the pacers making the best showing and holding the interest of the crowd with their close and exciting finishes.

Mary Jo, the famous green trotting mare which was considered the fastest and most promising of her class on the Grand Circuit two years ago, caused a genuine sensation by stepping home a length in front of the pacer Don Riley, 2:07, one of the favorites for the championship cup. Andrew Phillips handled the lines over Don Riley, while Walter M. Jermyn drove the mare. The start was a good one, and although Mary Jo followed pace a length behind the champion, nobody looked for a close finish, as the trotter was considered outclassed. Entering the stretch a touch of the whip caused the mare to show a wonderful burst of speed, and in an instant she was on even terms with her rival. Realizing that his pacer would have to show his top speed to win out, Mr. Phillips used both whip and rein to coax Don Riley, but he could not get the animal to lengthen his gait, and when the final dash was made the trotter took the lead and shot by the post an easy winner. The crowd cheered enthusiastically. Mr. Jermyn declined a second heat.

Princess Pique, Thomas B. Leahy's little black trotter, did some fast work and won two straight heats from the trotter Nellie Wilkes, driven by her owner, Philip Heiperhausen. Both brushes were unusually close and well contested, the first being won by a half length and the second by a short head. Isaac A. Hopper drove his new pacer Black Bell a losing heat in company with the bay pacer George Dumond, driven by Dr. H. D. Gill, which won in turn beaten by the pacer Fred W., 2:08¼, driven by his owner, A. Frankenstein.

There was generous applause when W. C. Floyd-Jones drove up the stretch with his new trotting team, composed of the former champion of the Speedway, King Cromes, 2:10¾, and Governor Holt. They are perfectly matched and proved that they could step when they carried Isaac Fleming's crack trotter Eagle Medium, 2:14, from the wire at the head of the stretch after a nip and tuck go over the entire upper stretch. Nathan Straus sent the pet of his stable, Cobweba, 2:12, but only one heat at speed, but that proved a winning one. Samuel Bloch's gray pacing mare Bicycle Girl was the challenger and she gave the veteran a close argument from start to finish, Cobweba nosing out in almost the last stride.

Harry Topiitz's show ring trotter Judge Boardman won a good brush from Stewart Barr's bay trotter Brightlight, and the old pacing favorite Magic, driven by L. D. Emery, outfooted her classmate, Denton Boy, 2:14, driven by his trainer, who claimed that he was out in form, and refused a challenge for a second heat. One of the best brushes of the morning was between the speedy little bay trotter Can't She Go, driven by Samuel Levy, and the black trotter Madge, driven by Frank Knowlton of Yonkers. Can't She Go was left at the post, but before her competitor had got to the head of the stretch reached even terms, and in a driving finish won out by a narrow margin.

Charles Weiland's Inter-City Cup trainer Mustard, 2:08¾, attracted much favorable attention by his form and speed, and the fact that he won every one of the half dozen heats in which he started.

Among the many others who participated in the sport were M. L. Simon, driving The King, 2:10¾; Benjamin Lichtenberg, driving the trotter Billy Palmer; Claus Bohling, driving the former champion Kingmond; E. J. La Place, driving the trotter Cotillion; W. F. Kuster, driving the pacer Friday; Andrew Crawford, driving the trotter Belfry Chimes, and Christopher Hackett, driving the pacer King Tom.

More Autos Needed for Orphans.

Fifty-five automobiles have thus far been promised for use on Orphans' Day, June 7, but 100 more cars are needed to accommodate the large number of children from the different homes and asylums in the city. The committee of the New York Motor Club is hard at work making the necessary arrangements, and everything has been planned to give the children a good time at Coney Island, the terminus of the run. All that is needed to make the event a complete success is a sufficient number of cars.

It is expected that there will be no difficulty in getting the requisite number, but the Chairman of the run would be glad to receive offers of cars for use that day from private owners. His office is 7 East Forty-second Street, Room 1,002. Among those who have offered cars already are Col. John Jacob Astor, A. R. Pardington, Richard Stevens, Dr. Charles Osgood, Sidney Bowman, T. K. Hastings, W. J. Morgan, Charles G. Wridgway, Col. K. C. Pardee, Carl Page, Harry S. Haupt, W. H. Owen, E. T. Birdsall, Charles H. Hyde, H. A. Lozier, Jr., A. E. Dietz, E. S. Jackson, and Mrs. J. H. Duncan.

Amateurs in Billiard Tourney.

Five of the Class B amateurs will begin play to-night in the annual Spring billiard tournament at fourteen-inch balk line at Maurice Daly's Academy. The entry list includes Albert Lowenberg, William Gershel, Harry A. Coleman, Mark Muldauer, and Albert Brock. The matches will be of 300 points' duration, two counts allowed in balk. All of the men entered in the tournament have won honors in previous events, and are particularly evenly matched as to skill, being equal to averaging between 5 and 10 under the strain of competitive play. The prize list will include a first and second prize, a high average prize, and a high run prize. The schedule is arranged for afternoon and evening games, so as to complete the tournament in one week.

AMERICAN GOLFERS FOR BRITISH HONORS

Amateur Championship Opens This Week at Prestwick.

CANADIAN PLAYER ENTERED

Women's Trophy of Great Britain Likely to Come to This Country—Professionals for Open Event.

During the coming week the first of the three big foreign golf championships will begin in Great Britain, and all of these notable events will be watched with peculiar interest by American golfers. The great amateur competition starts this week on the Prestwick links. So high has the quality of the golf invariably been in this contest that by general consent it has been deemed equivalent to the golf championship of the world. It will always be regarded with deeper interest in the future by American players from the fact that Walter J. Travis, an American-bred golfer, won the English title last year and is still the foreign champion.

He found it impossible to go abroad this season to defend his title. Last year, for the first time, half a dozen Americans played in the event, but the only prominent player from this side of the water who will be seen among the native contestants this week will be George S. Lyon, the ex-amateur champion of Canada and the winner of the Olympic championship at St. Louis last year. In that event he beat the present American champion, H. Chandler Egan, the Harvard student.

The Englishmen are deploring the absence from this week's play of Edward Blackwell, who was runner-up to Travis last year. An injury to his arm has prevented Blackwell from playing for some time, and he will be unable to enter the championship.

If the American contestants are scarce this year in the amateur event, the women have more than made up for it by entering in larger numbers than ever before in the women's amateur championship of Great Britain, which will begin on May 29 on the Royal Cromer links, near London. A team of the best women golfers in the United States sailed for England several days ago, and it would be no surprise to see the women's British championship brought back to this country. Those who will uphold the golf standard of the United States are Miss Georgianna Bishop, the present champion; Miss Frances C. Griscom, an ex-champion; Miss Margaret Curtis, Miss Harriet Curtis, Miss Emily Lockwood, Miss Mary B. Adams, Mrs. S. B. Bettle, and Miss E. Barnett.

The Curtis sisters from Boston and Miss Bishop are regarded as the most dangerous competitors. Miss Charlotte Dod, who visited this country last Fall, is the British champion. She did not make a very brilliant showing while here, and was beaten by a number of our players. Miss Rhona Adair, the previous year's champion, will not be able to compete on account of a late illness, but Miss May Hoziet, also an ex-champion, will be an aspirant for her old honors, and she will be one of the strongest that the American women will have to meet.

The third and last of the three big British events will be the open championship, which will be played on the historic old St. Andrew links on June 7 and 8. Two of the leading professionals in this country have gone over to compete for the prizes as Americans. While they are both Scotchmen, and come from golfing families abroad, that does not detract from the American interest in their presence in the event. Willie Anderson and Aleck Smith are the men who will represent this country against the best professionals that Scotland and England can bring against them.

Notes of Interest to Golfers.

The New Jersey golfers are preparing for their annual championship tournament, which will be held June 1, 2 and 3 on the links of the North Jersey Country Club at Paterson. Only residents of the State are eligible for this event. The title holder is F. Murray Olyphant, a Princeton student.

The public links at Van Cortlandt Park are now in good playing condition, and the course is used by several hundred players every pleasant Saturday and Sunday. The greens have improved very much during the last two weeks, and the New York Golf Club has held several club handicaps with excellent results.

James Braid, an ex-open champion of Great Britain, has been using a new ball lately, and one of American make. In a recent tournament at St. Anne's Braid won first place, playing throughout the event with the new ball. It is being used by a number of prominent foreign golfers, and has given general satisfaction.

The next one-day open tournament for the women of the metropolitan district will be held on May 20 on the links of the Plainfield Country Club. The contest will be similar to the event held last week at Richmond County. The large number of women who turned out is an indication that the fair players will devote more attention to the finer points of the game this season than last year.

Golfers will meet this week on the links of the Fox Hills Club course, Staten Island, for the metropolitan amateur championship. Harold Wilcox of Montclair and a preparatory school lad, is the title holder, and he will defend the championship. Travis will be a contestant, and most of the good local players will be seen. The qualifying round will be played on Wednesday, and the match play round will follow, the final coming on Saturday.

The Canadian amateur championship tournament will be played on the links of the Lambden Country Club, Toronto, beginning on June 28. George S. Lyon, the ex-Canadian champion and the winner of the Olympic championship last year, who went to England to play in the amateur championship there, will probably be back in time to compete for the Canadian honors.

The Westbrook Golf Club, always a popular meeting place for lovers of the old Scotch game, has announced an amateur open tournament for June 14, 15, and 17. The qualifying round on the opening day will be at thirty-six holes, sixteen to qualify for the President's Cup, and the second sixteen for the Consolation Cup. The final round will be played on Saturday, the closing day, and in addition there will be an eighteen-hole handicap. The Westbrook links are situated at Great River, L. I., a short distance beyond Islip.

Mrs. Charles Lewis Tiffany, Secretary of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association, has issued the programme for the annual championship contest which will be played at the Baltusrol Club, Short Hills, N. J., beginning on June 13. The medal play round will be eighteen holes, sixteen to qualify for the championship cup, and the second eighteen holes for the Consolation Cup. One match play round will be played each day, the final coming on June 17. Additional contests will be held each afternoon, including handicap, mixed foursomes, and putting and approaching.

Official Guides for College Athletes.

The official handbook of the Intercollegiate Amateur Athletic Association of America and the official handbook of the Intercollegiate Cross Country Association of America have just been issued by the American Sports Publishing Company. The books should be invaluable to collegians, as they contain a mass of information pertaining to athletics, including a complete list of former champions, records of different events, the laws of athletics, and the constitution and rules applicable to cross-country runners.

CAYUGA'S GREAT SPEED TRIAL

The Saturday Night Might Have Been a Battleship Starting Out.

With as much ceremony as if she had been a battleship a catboat was launched in Jamaica Bay yesterday afternoon at Holland's, before a large company. There were speechmaking and an elaborate luncheon in honor of the twenty-four-foot craft.

She is a little white yacht with the unusual name Saturday Night, and though she did happen to be a vessel planned for pleasure and not to destroy, her baptism included all the bunting she could carry and the spilling of as much wine as is used on the steel prow of a larger sister. She slid into three feet of water at high tide—"two bells."

The Saturday Night is the property of the Saturday Night Club. She is of sufficient dimensions to carry safely the whole club, of which F. R. Pentz is the President. M. P. Holland the Vice President, Charles Smith Treasurer, and James White Secretary. It is a club with every member an officer. The four some time Summer residents at Holland's got into the habit of going back there from the city every Saturday night, even in Winter, for a friendly game of billiards. They thought it wise to establish the club, chose its name, had it incorporated, and adopted a flag of orange and black, with "S. N. C." in gold letters. Last Winter they planned to have a yacht for the club. The launching of yesterday was the outcome.

When the party had all gathered a much-beribboned bottle of champagne was handed to Mrs. Pentz. Mrs. Emma Frey, a tall blonde, and her brunette sister, with Miss Fannie R. Holland, stood at either side as sponsors. As the boat trembled with the first sensation of life Mrs. Pentz smashed the bottle in good style and said:

"I christen thee 'Saturday Night.'"

When the cheering had ceased the new craft was towed to her moorings, flying at the bow the red-and-white flag of the Jamaica Bay Yacht Club, and at the peak the orange-and-black club flag of the Saturday Night Club.

Later followed the feast in the dining room of the club, where those who toasted the Saturday Night could see her riding gently with an occasional little nod to the waves with which she is to live. Her health was drunk many times in wine sparkling like the reflected sunlight dancing along her sides, and at the close there was as much speechmaking as if the launching had been to celebrate the christening of a 12,000-tonner. There was singing, also, and as good a time as is allowable on a Sunday afternoon.

International Cup Offered for Carnival Races in September.

Three trophies instead of one will be offered for auto boat competition during the carnival race days in September by the National Association of Engine and Boat Manufacturers. The chief trophy will be the international cup. This will be open to boats forty feet in length or twelve kilometers. Invitations will be extended to all the leading foreign manufacturers and private owners of fast motor boats, and there are good expectations for believing that some entries will be made from across the water.

The second trophy in importance will be the National Cup, open to boats forty feet long, and the third trophy will be the Inter-State Cup, open to boats thirty-three feet in length and under. In addition to these prizes, there will be cups for lesser events, and special classes will be included for cruisers and open launches. The carnival will be held on the Hudson during the first week in September, but the course has not yet been selected. All freak boats will be barred, and since the accident to the motor boats in the Mediterranean, the committee will exercise particular care to admit only the events only boats that are thoroughly seaworthy.

Power Boats Run to Nyack.

Eleven of the new power boats in the one design class of the Knickerbocker Yacht Club raced to Nyack and back from College Point yesterday, finishing the run each way within two minutes of each other. The showing was a big surprise to those who had followed the development of the power boat fad, and testified to the expertness of the handling of the new racing machines. All the eleven will compete in the opening race of the season at the Manhasset Bay Yacht Club next Saturday in the special class event arranged for them.

Charles Coughtry, the designer of the boats, received a testimonial before the start, and signalized the occasion by leading the procession both ways in No. 39. The others participating were Kramer and Norrac, in No. 40; M. C. Derriam, No. 41; Commodore F. E. Brown, No. 44; E. B. Sands, No. 46; Joseph Cassidy, No. 45; J. Sulzbach, No. 47; W. H. Cassert, No. 48; Daniel Noble, No. 53; M. A. Connolly, No. 54, and E. Reiss, No. 55.

The start was made at 9:30 o'clock, stopping at Harlem, and arriving at Nyack at noon. The return trip began at 5 P. M., and finished at 7:23.

Don't Work So Hard Next Monday

Get Miller's Soap made with Naptha and learn what it is to wash clothes with the right kind of a soap. If you are a slave to the old methods of rubbing and scrubbing and bending over a tub it's high time that you learn about the easy way to make clothes cleaner and whiter by using

MILLER'S SOAP
Made with Naptha

Naptha is a great cleanser and when combined with Miller's pure, good Soap there is no necessity for hard work. Don't use a washboard, don't try to rub the dirt out; just let the clothes soak in a tub of water with Miller's Soap and all dirt and grease is quickly dissolved and the clothes made cleaner and whiter. Pure Soap and pure Naptha won't hurt the most delicate fabrics. It is the only Naptha Soap that can be used equally well in either HOT or COLD water. Time saved, labor saved, clothes saved and made cleaner by Miller's Soap with Naptha than by any other way you may do it.

Try the Large Cake—5c.

Use Miller's Powerine with Ammonia for cleaning everything but clothes.

He jumped in front of the car, apparently with deliberate intention of committing suicide.

Its Scenes Photographed at the Rate of 900 a Minute.

BELMONT WANTS AN EXHIBIT

Views Taken with Elaborate Preparations in a 52,500 Candle Power Light, Patrons Wondering.

For the personal use of August Belmont a moving picture was taken yesterday morning to show the operation of trains in the Subway between Fourteenth and Forty-second Streets, with platform scenes at the Fourteenth, Twenty-third, Thirty-third, and Grand Central Stations.

The work was done by the American Mutoscope and Biograph Company in seven minutes, the pictures being taken at the rate of 900 a minute, so its film will include 6,300 separate photographs.

It was the first attempt to secure an exact reproduction of traffic conditions underground here, and the arrangements were most elaborate. Three trains—an express, a local, and a camera train—figured in the operation, and seventy-four tubes of the Cooper-Hewitt light, each of 750 candle power, strung on a specially constructed car, lit the Subway with a glare which dimmed the sunshine filtering through at the stations.

Subway patrons at the Brooklyn Bridge station were much mystified when, at 11 o'clock, an express pulled in and came to a stop with a flatcar coupled on behind the last coach, which was loaded with appliances new to the public gaze. The apparatus suggested anything from the paraphernalia of a musical specialty act on the front end to an engine room on the back end. A dozen men on the car were all as busy as bees. H. S. Putnam, associated with L. B. Stillwell, the electrical director of the Subway, was in charge, assisted by F. A. Dobson of the biograph company.

The car carried a complete electric installation, including voltmeters, ammeters, a dynamo, and a 110-volt generator belted to a 555-volt motor, fed from the third rail. The electrical apparatus took up the rear end of the car. The Cooper-Hewitt tubes were strung at the front in a long line. Each tube was half incased in a brilliant reflector, so hung that the piercing green rays were thrown to the right or local track a bit ahead.

It was explained that the 52,500-candle power the tubes supplied in the aggregate was not to be measured from a photographic point of view by anything like the ordinary standard. The actinic quality of the light multiplied its value many times over. Superintendent A. L. Merritt of the Subway directed the running of the trains. Manager Hedley had planned the schedule.

At 11:30 o'clock the local train which was destined to play a part in the picture-making arrived. Immediately in its rear was a special, consisting of a motor car and an empty coach. On the front platform stood Manager G. E. Van Guysling of the biograph company, supervising the picture machine, which was mounted on sturdy iron legs and consisted of several compartments, one above the other; a projecting lens, and a rapid-fire crank. The taking of pictures began at the Fourteenth Street station.

The local and express, both open to passengers, ran neck and neck, the flat car just far enough behind the rear car of the local to show it clearly while the trains were in motion. Pictures were taken showing the interchange of passengers between the local and express trains. At Twenty-third and Thirty-third Streets stops were made so that the boarding of the local and its discharge of passengers might be shown. At the Grand Central, the finish point, a stop of several minutes was made so that the picture machine could get in its work on the crowds to the fullest extent.

The programme was carried through without a hitch. The three trains took their relative positions at Astor Place, and the lights were turned on. At Fourteenth Street there was the usual rush on the platform. When that had been photographed, the trains pulled out, with the machine focused on the train ahead, taking in the rear of the local. Watchers were amazed at the detail with which the interior of the tunnel was shown. It was literally as light as day, if of a somewhat different hue. Eighteenth Street flashed by, the waiting patrons on the platform looked their amazement. The light of day which streamed down the steps was vanquished, the only effect being to inject a bit of color. There are no red rays emapating from the Cooper-Hewitt tubes.

Mr. Van Guysling was sure that the interior of the Subway, its pillars skipping by, would show up well in the pictures. Typical scenes were secured at the Twenty-third and Thirty-third Street Stations. At the Grand Central there was a scurrying which warmed the hearts of all concerned in the success of the undertaking. The stay there was sufficiently long for some of the crowd to realize what was intended, and several young fellows with their best girls got directly in range of the picture machine, and raced about in great fashion. Incidentally they will show up well in the moving picture, which was what they were evidently seeking.

When everything was over Mr. Van Guysling said the conditions had been most favorable, and he believed the pictures would be all that could be desired. He did not know what use Mr. Belmont had in view for it. The Interborough official thought Mr. Belmont would utilize it for private exhibitions.

SILENT AS TO PICTURES.

Elevator Boy in Whose Room di Cesnola Pictures Were Found is Held.

Frank McCarthy, the Hotel Seymour elevator boy, in whose room at 777 Eighth Avenue several thousand dollars' worth of pictures, bric-a-brac, and curios belonging to Mrs. Guy E. Baker, the daughter of the late Gen. Louis P. di Cesnola, were found by the police, was held for examination on Tuesday by Magistrate Steinert in the Yorkville Police Court yesterday.

Mrs. Baker, to whom Gen. di Cesnola gave the art treasures, is expected to return to the Hotel Seymour to-day. She is with her husband at their country place. Until she does get back, it was said at the hotel yesterday, no accurate estimate of the value of the articles found in McCarthy's possession can be made.

McCarthy declined to say anything about the case while in court or after he was locked up in the Yorkville Prison.

"I have been advised by my counsel to say nothing," he declared, "and will obey his advice."

BOY WENT UNDER FENDER.

No Protection to Small Boy—Badly Hurt by Trolley Car.

Because the fender was too high above the ground to afford any protection to such a little body as his, Isidore Steinberg, six years old, of 1,937 Fulton Street, Brooklyn, was ground under the wheels of a Fulton Street trolley car yesterday afternoon and so badly injured that he probably will die.

The boy was trying to cross Fulton Street in front of his home, which is near Ralph Avenue, when he was run down. He ran in front of the car while trying to dodge another on the other track. The motorman put on his brakes and reversed the current, but the fender caught up the boy and tossed him several feet ahead, where he fell on the track right in front of the car. The fender this time passed above the boy's body. The front wheels of the car ran over his legs, cutting off both, and the boy's skull was also fractured.

WHERE IS THAT LION CUB?

And If Fitzsimmons Has Given It Away, Why Not to the Donor?

"King, King, give a thing; never take it back again," is a precept which does not apply to the donation of lion cubs. When a lion trainer gives away a cub, he knows that the cub will become unmanageable in a year or so, and of course expects that the cub will be given back.

That is where Robert Fitzsimmons, former champion heavyweight pugilist, has upset tradition. Bostock's animal show at Coney Island had a cub named after Senator Reynolds of Dreamland last Summer. One evening Fitzsimmons visited Dreamland. He took the cub home. He declared that Bostock had given the animal to him. There was some misunderstanding about this, but it was settled, it was announced, by Bostock "giving" the cub to Senator Reynolds, who then gave it to Fitzsimmons all over again.

It was confidently expected that the cub would be back in Bostock's this season. It isn't there yet, and rumor has it that Fitzsimmons has given it to the Lincoln Park Zoo in Chicago. It is said that a friend of both Bostock and the former pugilist has written to Fitzsimmons, giving him some idea of the etiquette of giving and taking lion cubs.

SLAPS 3-MONTHS OLD BABY.

Father Believes in Early Discipline—Says Arrest Was Mother-in-Law's Plot.

"Your Honor, it's all the fault of my mother-in-law that I am here," was the excuse offered by Alfred Doscher, a carpenter, of 250 West Thirty-fifth Street, who was arraigned before Magistrate Wahle in the West Side Court yesterday morning, charged by his wife with abusing their three-months-old baby.

"I did spank the baby," he admitted, "but I didn't hurt her at all. I believe that parents should begin training their children while they are young."

Doscher said that his mother-in-law had been interfering in his household affairs ever since he had been married.

"She wants to get my wife away from me," he said, "and my wife wants to leave her home and go South with her mother. So they take this method to dispose of me."

Mrs. Doscher denied the charge against her mother. Her husband, she said, had slapped the baby, and then thrown her on the bed, and covered her up with a blanket, so that he could not hear her cry.

"Three months is a tender age at which to begin to discipline a child," the Magistrate said to Doscher. "You were probably brought up under old-fashioned methods, but don't attempt to apply them in this age."

"Keep the mother-in-law factor out of your home," he advised the wife.

The couple then promised each other in the presence of the Magistrate that they would try to agree in future.

OUT TO HEAR ORPHAN BAND.

The East Side Makes a Festival of a Tompkins Square Concert.

The band of the Hebrew Benevolent and Orphan Asylum Society, which is made up of forty of the asylum boys, gave the second of three park concerts in Tompkins Park yesterday afternoon. On the first Sunday the boys were at Seward's Park; next Sunday they will be at Mount Morris Park. In June the regular paid bands of the city will play in the parks.

All of Avenue A and its dependent streets were out to be soothed by the music. The crowd filled the parks and stood twenty deep in a solid circle around the band stand. Every bench was occupied, and it was only necessary to look at the faces of the benchers to see that they liked it. Over by the band stand a small urchin who had eluded the policeman and climbed a tree, yelled at Band Leader Philip Egner after a number:

"Hi, kidde, what was that?"

"That was 'Frost on the Pumpkins,'" answered one of the boys in the stand.

"Don't know about de pumpkin," said the tree lover, "but dat frost on it is swell stuff."

Little boys and girls had the run of the park. They disdained to sit down, but ran all over the green and played and laughed and yelled and listened to the music. They applauded unrestrainedly the cornet solo by little Morris Franzblau, a serenade by Schubert, and cheered patriotically when "America" and "The Star-Spangled Banner" began and ended the programme. The other numbers were:

"College Life," by Franzl; "Wedding of the Winds," by Reese; Hebrew melodies, by Egner; "Isis," an intermezzo, by Morse, and "Witchcraft," by Losey.

W. A. CHANLER FOR LEADER.

Friends Give Notice That He'll Oppose Prendergast in Fifth.

A report that ex-Congressman William Astor Chanler will be a candidate for the Tammany leadership of the Fifth Assembly District at the next primaries was sent out last night by some of Mr. Chanler's friends.

At the Iroquois Club, 4 West Thirteenth Street, the headquarters of the district organization, which for years has been led by Senator Bernard F. Martin, surprise was expressed at the news of Mr. Chanler's candidacy. It was said that a vigorous fight would be made on Mr. Chanler, as the organization purposed to stand behind Joseph F. Prendergast, who was picked out by Senator Martin as his successor. Mr. Prendergast is Secretary of the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity.

The statement sent out by Mr. Chanler's friends asserted that Senator Martin had been elected leader last year with the expectation that he would continue to serve, and, since he had turned the post over to Prendergast, the voters thought they should elect a leader for themselves. It was said in the statement that friends of Mr. Chanler in the district had called on him and asked him to become a candidate, and that he had consented.

Mr. Chanler first got into politics in 1897 by defeating Richard Van Cott for member of Assembly from the Fifth District. In the Autumn of 1906 he defeated Lemuel E. Quigg for Congress in the old Fourteenth District. He is said to be in Cuba at the present time.

GOLD LEAF SITUATION BAD.

Union Delegate Fears Gold Beating Trade Will Leave Country.

James McCabe, delegate of the Gold Beaters' Union, reported to the Central Federated Union yesterday that the trade was in a bad way, through the competition of imported gold leaf, made in countries where wages are much lower than in this country. A reduction in wages of $4 a week is threatened. If it is enforced, McCabe says, it is likely to lead to a general strike of the gold beaters in the metropolitan district.

The imported gold leaf comes from Germany, France, Belgium, Austria, and England. The employers say that with the payment of the duty added, the imported gold leaf costs much less than the gold leaf manufactured in this country.

On account of this foreign competition many of the gold beaters here fear that the trade may be driven out of this country altogether. There are very few gold beaters in the country, and their number has been growing less and their wages shrinking for the last two or three years, owing to the increasing importation of foreign leaf. The gold beaters say that their only hope for the future would be in an increased duty on the imported leaf, and the employers are ready to fight that increase bitterly, as it would bring about the paying of higher wages.

MORE ROCKMEN STRIKE; LOCK-OUT EXPECTED

26,000 Men May Be Put Out of Work This Week.

DEMAND UNION RECOGNITION

Leaders Say They'll Keep Up the Fight for It at Any Cost—C. F. U. Backing Them.

The fight of the rockmen and excavators against the Contractors' Protective Association for recognition of the union is to reach a crisis this week. The General Strike Committee, taking in the rockmen and excavators and the trades which have struck in sympathy, held a meeting yesterday and decided to continue the fight. Tito Pucelli, President of the Excavators' Union, said that more strikes will be ordered this week against the Contractors' Association. This will bring about a lock-out of all the 26,000 members of the union, but the union leaders say they have thrown down the gauntlet and are willing to meet the issue.

James Wilson, delegate of the International Association of Machinists, said yesterday at the meeting of the Central Federated Union that he will order the machinists at the Jerome Park Reservoir to strike to-morrow in sympathy with the excavators. The Central Federated Union ordered the delegates of all the trades which have not struck to call out their men at the reservoir in sympathy with the other strikers.

Vincenzo Vecchio, business agent of the Excavators' Union, declared that it is prepared for a lock-out.

"Let them lock us out," said he. "We have no horses to look after, and no money interests involved. All we have is our physical strength, and if the lock-out is ordered we will be little worse off than we are now. Our only resource is recognition of the union, and we will put up the biggest fight we have ever had to get it. It's the only way to insure a living rate of wages. We want $2 for a day of eight hours for rockmen and $2.60 for ten hours. For the excavators all we have asked is $1.60 a day for eight hours, and $2 a day for ten hours.

James Daly of the strike committee said that the Italians had as good a right to fair wages as people of any other nationality when they came to the United States.

"The cost of living has increased in the last four years," he continued, "and four years ago the Italian laborers were getting more wages than now. This fight will be kept on until the union is recognized."

It was declared to be the sentiment of the meeting that the strikers should be supported in every way possible until their union is recognized.

UNION LEADERS' DEFENSE.

Meat Cutters Forced Them Into Strike That Failed, One Says.

Michael Donnelly and Homer D. Call, National President and Secretary, respectively, of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of America, who were summoned here to answer charges that they had grossly mismanaged the National strike of last year, throwing about 65,000 men idle and resulting in a disastrous defeat to the union, left the city yesterday for their headquarters, after having appeared before several unions to face their accusers. Donnelly went to Chicago, where his National headquarters are, and Call went to Syracuse. Charges had also been made that in the management of the strike it looked as if the National officers were not working in the interests of the strikers. These charges were withdrawn at the hearing.

Donnelly and Call defended themselves against the charge of mismanagement at the hearings, and said that they were ready to defend themselves on any charges that could be brought. The charge principally arose out of the ordering of the second strike just after a settlement of the first strike had been reached and the strikers were returning to work. The second strike practically broke up the union for the time and ended in a rout of the strikers.

In his defense Donnelly said that the first strike was ordered by a referendum vote of the union, and as to the second strike, he was "mobbed" by union men into signing an order for it.

The unions will meet this week and decide as to whether the charge was justifiable.

MAY DIE AFTER RUNAWAY.

Alarm Over Condition of Mrs. Salmon Injured in Prospect Park.

The condition of Mrs. Emily M. Salmon, widow of Hamilton H. Salmon, of 285 Hancock Street, Brooklyn, who with her daughter, Mrs. Marian S. Tooker, was injured in a runaway accident in Prospect Park, on Saturday afternoon, was such yesterday as to cause her family and friends the deepest anxiety. Mrs. Salmon and her daughter are in the Seney Hospital.

There was a consultation of doctors yesterday over Mrs. Salmon's case. Because of her condition they were unable to make a complete examination to determine if her skull had been fractured. She is more than seventy years old and the doctors fear that her age will operate against her recovery.

Both bones of Mrs. Tooker's right ankle are broken and her right hip is dislocated.

GAS LEAK WAS FATAL.

Three Workmen Overcome After Fire —One Was Killed.

There was a fire early yesterday morning in the cellar of the Standard Twine Company's factory, at Stagg and Waterbury Streets, Williamsburg. A leaky gas pipe caused it. When the fire was extinguished by firemen word was sent to the Brooklyn Union Gas Company to repair the leak. Three men, James Kelly of 107 North Sixth Street, Robert McGreggor, and Charles Quinn, were sent to the rope works.

The three were overcome by gas fumes. Kelly died in St. Catharine's Hospital, and it was only with the greatest difficulty that the lives of the other two men were saved.

Pretended Inspector Grant Let Off.

Joseph Smith of 200 Degraw Street, Brooklyn, who was locked up on Saturday night in the Old Slip Police Station, after telephoning to Police Headquarters, using the name of Inspector Donald Grant, was discharged in the Tombs Court yesterday. Inspector Grant did not appear to prosecute him.

Arrested Here for Virginia Murder.

Central Office detectives last night, at the request of the White Plains Chief of Police, arrested Charles Young, a negro engineer, at 216 West Sixty-seventh Street. He is charged with murder by the Chief of Police of Green Bay, Va., and is alleged to have killed Andrew Paiges of that place on Dec. 25. The authorities of Green Bay traced him to White Plains and the police of the latter place to New York. The man was held at Police Headquarters.

Advertising Agents Move Uptown.

The J. Walter Thompson Advertising Agency has moved from the old Times Building, 41 Park Row, to the corner of Twenty-third Street and Fourth Avenue. The agency, which is forty years old, announces that growing business has forced it to seek what it calls the new commercial centre of business.

POSED AS DRUNKEN FARMER.

Sleuth Knocked Down One Alleged Highwayman, Tripped Up the Other.

The work of John L. Sullivan of the East Thirty-fifth Street Station in playing the part of a drunken farmer on Saturday night and arresting two highwaymen who tried to rob him, was commended in the Yorkville Court yesterday when the two prisoners, Charles Tyler of 313 East Thirty-fourth Street and John Connors, who said he had been employed at Bellevue Hospital, were arraigned. The men were held in $2,000 bail each for trial.

Capt. Naughton, who became commander of the East Thirty-fifth Street Station recently upon the retirement of Capt. Shirs, several days ago told his detectives that a stop must be put to street robberies, which were growing in that precinct.

On Saturday night Sullivan, playing the part of a drunken farmer, reeled from Third Avenue into Thirty-third Street where he was accosted by Tyler and Connors. Capt. Naughton and Detective Kane were near by, and saw all that happened. Sullivan and the two men walked toward the river. The sleuth told them he was on his way home by way of the Thirty-fourth Street ferry, but was willing to stop anywhere his companions said and have a drink. No stop was made, however, until First Avenue was reached, when Sullivan was pushed into a doorway and the men began going through his pockets.

Sullivan who is an athlete, knocked Connors down. Tyler started to run, but Sullivan tripped him. Capt. Naughton and Kane were early at the scene and the prisoners were taken to the station.

FOR METCALF'S SUCCESSOR.

Local Politicians Discussing Congressman Jenkins for Cabinet Place.

It having been reported that Victor H. Metcalf will retire in July as Secretary of Commerce and Labor, and take up business interests in California, Republican politicians in this city are discussing his successor. The name that seems to be most prominent in connection with the place is that of Congressman John J. Jenkins of Wisconsin, Chairman of the Judiciary Committee of the House.

Congressman Jenkins, it is said, stands high with labor organizations generally, and the labor leaders have begun a campaign for him as the successor of Secretary Metcalf. Congressman Jenkins, it is said, wanted the place when Cortelyou was appointed, but it was held that Wisconsin could not rightfully expect more than one place in the Cabinet, Henry C. Payne being Postmaster General at that time.

NURSE STILL MISSING.

No Trace Yet of Miss Jalonick of St. Luke's—Father Coming.

The Rev. George F. Clover, Superintendent of St. Luke's Hospital, on Morningside Heights, said yesterday that the disappearance of Miss Margaret Jalonick, the nurse from Dallas, Texas, who was in the training school for nurses till last Wednesday, was as much of a mystery as ever.

Miss Jalonick went out last Wednesday on an errand, wearing her nurse's dress with a mackintosh thrown over it, and has not returned since. Everything in her room indicated that she intended to return, and that she had taken nothing away with her.

The young woman's father, [illegible] Jalonick, of Dallas, is expected to reach the city to-day. He is expected to go directly to a friend, H. M. Thomas, at the Hotel Earlington.

BOOKMAKERS WAITING FOR GRAVESEND MEET

Do Not Believe the Open Betting Ring Is for Long.

MEET BUT TAKE NO ACTION

Metropolitan Association Has No Intention of Disbanding, Members Say—A New Member Elected.

A special meeting of the Metropolitan Turf Association was held in the clubhouse of the organization in West Twenty-sixth Street yesterday afternoon to consider the status of the bookmakers under the free betting ring at Belmont Park. After the meeting the members said that no plan of action for the future was decided on, because the bookmakers had no idea of what may develop in the next few days.

That even the tacit recognition of the Metropolitan Turf Association by the racing clubs has been terminated by the action of the managers of the Belmont Park track was admitted, but the bookmakers assert that their organization will continue, and that its usefulness to the members and the betting patrons of racing will not be decreased by the changed conditions. In evidence of this the election of one new member at yesterday's meeting was announced. J. P. Romair, with the consent of the association, transferred his membership to John H. Burke, the price being $3,500. The price is considerably less than memberships were sold for in the Winter, when one transfer was made for $4,800.

The bookmakers will resume business to-day at Belmont Park under whatever conditions they may find. They are confident that the ring will be free as long as the Belmont Park meeting continues. The free ring, as it now exists at Belmont Park, means a saving to each bookmaker regularly engaged of about $12,000 a year in the fees formerly paid for betting privileges. The loss of $6,000 a day to the racing associations the bookmakers do not believe can be made up by any reasonable increase in the prices of admission.

They look for light on the whole matter when they begin business at the Gravesend track next Thursday, with P. J. Dwyer, President of the Brooklyn Jockey Club, in charge.

ELEVATED SMASH, NINETEEN INJURED

One Train Rams Another, Waiting at Harlem Drawbridge.

THE SECOND ACCIDENT THERE

Two Cars Left Hanging Over the Trestle—One Catches Fire—Motorman and Guard Arrested.

A Third Avenue elevated train, traveling south, crashed into the rear of a Second Avenue train which had stopped a short distance below One Hundred and Thirty-third Street yesterday afternoon to await the closing of the drawbridge across the Harlem River. The front car of the Third Avenue train and the rear car of the Second Avenue train were partly telescoped by the collision, and forced off the track so that they were suspended over the tracks of the New Haven Road jammed together in the shape of a V, the couplings holding the inner ends on the structure.

Nineteen persons were more or less hurt, and nine were taken to hospitals. The Third Avenue motorman ran back into the train when he saw that an accident was inevitable and escaped unhurt. Though both motormen were arrested, he was the only one of the two held. Later, however, the police arrested Abraham Fabotsky of 233 East One Hundred and Tenth Street, the guard of the rear car of the Second Avenue train. He was charged with criminal negligence and locked up in the Alexander Avenue Station.

In both trains there was a panic after the accident. The cars were almost filled, and hundreds of frightened passengers streamed out on the tracks. The crushed motor car caught fire, and a column of smoke arose from it. A fire alarm was immediately turned in; then a call for ambulances and one for the police reserves.

Ambulances arrived presently from the Lincoln, Harlem, Lebanon, and Fordham Hospitals, and for half an hour the surgeons were busy attending to patients. Meantime the firemen extinguished the small blaze which followed the burning of the fuses and the contact of the electric current with the woodwork in the motor car. Then the police and Interborough employes explored the cars. No injured were found in the train, and as the hospital surgeons reported that only six persons were hurt sufficiently to warrant their being taken to the hospitals the first rumors of fifteen or twenty being killed subsided.

Ralph W. French of 77 Bailey Avenue was the motorman of the Second Avenue train and William H. Hartman, who gave his address as 65 Park Row, the motorman of the Third Avenue train, which caused the collision. In the Alexander Avenue Police Station French said that, following the usual custom, he had stopped his train near the entrance to the bridge while the draw was open. The next thing he knew was being thrown out of the motor box by the collision. The police released him, but sent Hartman to the Harlem Court, where he was put under $1,000 bail for examination today.

There is a sharp curve between the One Hundred and Thirty-third Street station and the bridge. Hartman told the police that he did not know the Second Avenue train was ahead until he saw it. Then he shut off the power and ran back into the train, calling to the passengers to save themselves. Statements of passengers corroborated his story. Nearly all escaped from the front car as a result of the warning.

Of the nineteen persons treated by the ambulance surgeons for cuts and bruises, many were suffering also from shock, and some hysterical women had to have restoratives administered to them. These were sent to hospitals:

GARVIDGE, JAMES, 47 years old, 1,683 Washington Avenue; cuts and bruises on hands, knees, and legs. To Lincoln Hospital.

GILLAN, Mrs. SUSAN, 54 years old, 800 Pelham Avenue; shock and possible fracture of the ribs. To Lebanon Hospital.

JANSEN, Lena, 31 years old, 127 St. Ann's Avenue; shock. To Lebanon Hospital.

JENNINGS, CLARA, 32 years old, of Rochester, N. Y.; shock and bruises. To Lincoln Hospital.

PULVERMACKER, ALBERT, 39 years old, 715 East One Hundred and Forty-fifth Street; lacerations on face and head. To Lincoln Hospital.

RICHTER, MARIA, 32 years old, 2,416 Tremont Avenue; bruises on knees and elbows. To Lincoln Hospital.

SCHILT, Mrs. TINA, 42 years old, 1,532 Washington Avenue; contusions of right thigh and shock. To Lebanon Hospital.

SODEN, JAMES T., 37 years old, 439 West Thirty-fifth Street; scalp wound and shock. To Lincoln Hospital.

STONE, MORRIS, 34 years old, 715 East One Hundred and Forty-fifth Street; shock and contusions of ribs. To Lincoln Hospital.

All those taken to the hospitals were able to go home last night except Joseph Gavidge, Clara Jennings, Albert Pulvernacher, and Maria Richter, and they were improving.

Several smaller accidents from a similar cause have occurred on this curve. In one ten days ago four persons were injured. An investigation of the signal system at the East One Hundred and Thirty-third Street Station and on the bridge is now likely to be made.

Hartmann, according to officials of the Interborough Company, could not help seeing the train ahead before he had rounded the curve. He is a trained railroad man, and came here from the Westinghouse Company at the opening of the Subway strike. He was one of the Westinghouse experts. For a time during the strike and afterward he was an air-brake instructor for the new men.

It was 10:40 o'clock before all the wreckage was removed. Till then the southbound track between the One Hundred and Thirty-third Street station and the station at One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Street was blocked. The northbound track between the two stations was also unavailable, because the power was cut off. Workmen lowered the two broken cars in sections.

Passengers going down town had to get off their trains at the One Hundred and Thirty-third Street Station and go by Union trolley down One Hundred and Thirty-third Street and Third Avenue to One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Street, where they again boarded the elevated trains for downtown. Passengers going uptown had to get off at One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Street and take the same trolleys to One Hundred and Thirty-third Street. The One Hundred and Thirty-third Street station, which is small, was uncomfortably congested all evening by the abnormal crowds.

CROKER NEAR AUTO CRASH.

Fire Chief Jumped at Railroad Gate—Wrist Is Hurt.

Fire Chief Edward Croker's quick eye saved his life and that of his chauffeur and two friends yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock when he jumped from his big red automobile and gave the warning signal which caused the chauffeur to pull the big machine up when within a few feet of a Long Island Railroad train at the Thomson Avenue grade crossing in Long Island City. Chief Croker's right wrist was painfully hurt, but none of the others in the auto was injured.

Chief Croker and his party turned into Thomson Avenue from Jackson Avenue. The Chief saw that the gates were closed when the machine was within a few feet of them. Chief Croker signaled the chauffeur and then jumped from the fast moving machine, which was brought to a quick stop flat up against the railroad gates.

While the members of the party were congratulating themselves on their escape the chauffeur turned around and drove to the spot where Chief Croker had fallen and still lay. The Chief was picked up and put in the automobile and carried to St. John's Hospital, a few hundred feet away.

Chief Croker was not in uniform, and he might have left Long Island City unknown to the doctor had not some of the sisters at the hospital told Dr. Mulcahey who he was. The party in the auto returned to Manhattan on the 3 o'clock boat from Long Island City.

The Chief was making an inspection of firehouses in Queens Borough when he met with the accident.

When Chief Croker was leaving the hospital Dr. Mulcahey, who had put a temporary bandage upon the Chief's right arm, said that he believed the injury to be only a sprain. He said, however, that the Chief ought to have a doctor examine it closely to find if any bone was broken.

The Chief was on duty as usual last night, although his arm was still in a big bandage and very badly swollen. The Chief declined to talk about his injury or the accident, but it was said that his arm was so badly swollen that an accurate diagnosis was impossible. Chief Croker was evidently in a good deal of pain as a result of his leap.

CHIEFS IN AUTO SMASH.

Milliken of Cincinnati Badly Bruised in the Accident.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Police Chiefs Milliken of Cincinnati and Donahue of Omaha were bruised, the former badly, and the Chief of Police of Elmira, N. Y., and Frank K. Raymond, President of the Business Men's Association of Washington, were severely shaken up by an automobile accident to-night.

The four men had been making a tour of the suburbs. The machine got beyond the control of the chauffeur, swerved, and turned over, throwing the occupants out. The car fell on Mr. Milliken, who received injuries about the head. He was removed to his hotel, and the physicians say he will be able to get out in a day or two.

STEPPED IN FRONT OF AUTO.

Capt. Treadwell Seaman, Retired, in Hospital, with a Badly Crushed Leg.

Capt. Treadwell Seaman, a retired army officer, came to Manhattan yesterday from his home, in Flushing, after having been laid up for three months with neuralgia. At 6 o'clock last night he stepped off an Eighth Avenue car at Sixtieth Street and Columbus Circle, in front of an automobile owned by J. Varnum Mott of 142 West Thirty-fourth Street, and driven by Sidney Heald. Mr. Mott was in the auto.

It knocked down the old soldier, wrenching the ligaments of his left leg and crushing his right foot. Bicycle Policeman Kuppain dragged him to the sidewalk, and the owner of the automobile, at the policeman's request, took Capt. Seaman to the Roosevelt Hospital.

The chauffeur said he had tooted his horn as he approached the car, but Capt. Seaman evidently did not hear the signal. The veteran refused to make a complaint against either Mr. Mott or his chauffeur, so they were not arrested.

DEATH ENDS WOMAN'S SUIT.

She Wanted $100,000 from the Late Le Droict Barber for Breach of Promise.

When the suit of Anderson against Barber was called to trial yesterday by Justice Gildersleeve in the Supreme Court it was marked "abated." The explanation was made that the defendant, Le Droict Langdon Barber, died last Friday at West End, N. J. He was sued for breach of promise of marriage by Miss Anna T. Anderson, a manicure, who sought to recover $100,000 damages.

Mr. Barber was a son of Amzi L. Barber, head of the Barber Asphalt Company. According to Miss Anderson's complaint she became acquainted with him while she was beautifying finger nails in a downtown office building in 1901. Mr. Barber had an office in the building.

Miss Anderson alleged that six weeks after meeting him he told her he was going to Europe and on his return intended to marry her. She swore that he bought a ring for her at Tiffany's before sailing, and that he wrote several letters to her, but about the time she expected him to return to New York he married a young woman in Austria.

A breach of promise of marriage case cannot be pressed against the estate of a defendant, so the suit was marked on the calendar "abated." That settles it.

TIFFANY JEWEL WORKER WHO HAD THE GEMS LAST

Sormani Not Suspected, but Ages Years in a Few Weeks.

NEIGHBORS SURE OF HIM

Police Say One of Three Stolen Diamonds Was of 14¾ Carats—Police Cable Abroad for Aid.

It was learned yesterday that the old and trusted employe who was the last man known to have the three Tiffany diamonds in his possession before their disappearance on the evening of May 3 is Albert Sormani, an Italian. He has a clean record of steady, conscientious work behind him and he is not suspected of the robbery. Notwithstanding this the Italian will never rest easy until the gems are restored and his innocence is absolutely made plain. In the last two weeks and a half he has grown years older, his neighbors say.

Sormani lives with his wife and only child on the top floor of the tenement at 19 Greenwich Avenue. The boy, Louis Sormani, is eleven years old. The father has worked hard and long so that he could give his son a good education and have a little money to leave him.

When the jewel mounter reached home on the evening of May 4 the butcher who has a shop on the ground floor of the tenement and the fruitseller did not get their customary smile and cordial greeting. The old man went sadly upstairs, without a word, to tell his wife of what had happened. The neighbors knew that something was the matter. Now they know what troubled Sormani and they say that he will never feel right again until the jewels are recovered. They have every confidence in him.

A reporter who went to the Sormani home at dinner time last night found Mrs. Sormani alone. She said her husband had not come home yet. A minute later the reporter met him entering the front door of the house, just back from work at Tiffany's Union Square place. He is slightly deaf. When he at last heard a question about the disappearance of the jewels he waved his hand deprecatingly.

"I don't know anything about them; I don't know anything at all about them," he declared in broken English.

"Can you say anything about how they disappeared?"

"No, no—for I don't how it happened."

The reporter asked what woman was to wear the jewels, for they were being prepared for a pendant brooch.

"That I don't know; they never tell us anything like that—I don't know any better than you do."

All the Tiffany workmen were very reticent yesterday. The only thing any official of the firm had to say about the disappearance of the jewels is contained in the remark of a Director, who said:

"I know a person or two who would like to know how this affair leaked out."

It became known yesterday that the workmen who are regularly employed in the Tiffany shop on the fifth floor were not the only persons in the big room at the time the jewels must have disappeared. Merchanics were there, either painters or carpenters, because Tiffany's is going to move to the firm's new building, at Thirty-seventh Street and Fifth Avenue, before long, and a great deal of carpenter work has to be done at the old place.

For the first time since the robbery occurred, a definite confirmation of it was given through the police yesterday. Acting Captain McCauley of the Detective Bureau made this announcement yesterday morning:

"Three pear-shaped diamonds, valued at between $80,000 and $35,000, disappeared from Tiffany's establishment, in Union Square, on May 3. The dimensions of the stones, as given to us by the firm, are as follows: One of 11 3-32 carats, one of 14¾ carats, and one of 12⅞ carats.

"The firm thought that the jewels were perhaps mislaid or that it could find them without our help, so the police were not notified until May 16, thirteen days after the diamonds disappeared. No arrests have been made so far and no warrants have been issued. Acting Inspector O'Brien has sent a description of the stones to every city in this country and Europe."

Though the police say the theft must have been committed by an employe and not by a professional thief they nevertheless rounded up several criminals early yesterday morning and put them through a catechism at Headquarters. They lined the men up in a row, like a class, as is usual, and then fired questions at them, making each one tell what he had been doing lately. It is said that the class acquitted itself to the satisfaction of the examiners.

Despite the thorough search which the authorities at Tiffany's repeated over and over again, there are still those who believe that the jewels may have been mislaid accidentally and will turn up again.

"I believe those stones will be found in Tiffany's store yet," said a Headquarters detective yesterday, "though nobody can tell, of course. No place in New York is more carefully guarded than Tiffany's store. There are detectives everywhere, at every counter. All they have to do is to look out for just such things as this. It's hard enough for a crook to get anything downstairs, but to go up on the elevator, where everybody is examined, is impossible unless you have all sorts of permits.

"Another thing: A regular crook would never have arranged to get diamonds so hard to dispose of as these. There would be too many other things easier to get and more profitable. Whichever way you look at it, the case is a puzzler from start to finish."

When Acting Captain McCauley, at Police Headquarters, was asked what explanation he had to offer for the failure to call in the Pinkerton detectives, he said:

"That is strange, isn't it? I don't understand that."

More cable messages were sent abroad by the police yesterday after a Tiffany detective called at Headquarters and had a conference with Acting Captain McCauley. The Tiffany detective was accompanied by another man, and when they left, Detective Sergt. Samuel Price went with them.

WOMAN WHIPS ANOTHER.

And the Victim Pays the Fine Inflicted on Her Assailant.

Special to The New York Times.

MEXICO CITY, May 22.—Mrs. Maud B. G. Taft of England, who describes herself as a sister of Lady Evelyn Goff, Lockooter Castle, County Galway, Ireland, has been arrested and placed in Belm Prison on the charge of assaulting Mrs. Alice Jewel of this city with a riding whip.

Mrs. Taft has been living in Mexico for several years, until now in comparative obscurity. She is the possessor of considerable means. She went to the house of Mrs. Jewel and as soon as the door was opened she rushed into a room where Mrs. Jewel was dressing and commenced thrashing her with a whip. The police took both women to the police station.

The British Consul General called at the station to do what he could for Mrs. Taft, who, however, was held and committed to Belm. Mrs. Jewel refused to give any details and declined to proceed against her assailant. The latter was fined $20, which Mrs. Jewel paid, and Mrs. Taft is to be released.

Last week this advertisement was published here:

"For Mrs. Maud B. G. Taft: I am advised you are in Mexico. Do not know your whereabouts. Answer, dearest. I shall forward money through the British Embassy. Join us in Ostend, Belgium, for the season. All is forgotten and forgiven. I remain always your loyal sister.

"LADY EVELYN GOFF,

GIRL STUDENTS ROBBED.

More Than 1,000 Articles Found in Former Servant's Trunks.

Special to The New York Times.

PELHAM MANOR, N. Y., May 22.—Hilda Armstrong, twenty-three years of age, who for three years had been employed as a maid by Mrs. John Cunningham Hazen, in her Pelham Manor seminary for girls, was to-day held to await the action of the Westchester Grand Jury on the charge of robbing many of the students as well as Mrs. Hazen. Four weeks ago Hilda Armstrong was discharged. After her disappearance many of the students missed clothing and jewelry. She obtained a place with Robert Agnew of Pelham Heights. In her room two trunks were found which, Detective Marks says, contained stolen property, while another trunk, telescope bags, and suit cases containing clothing and jewelry were found in another house in Pelham Manor.

The property was spread out in a room in the seminary on Sunday afternoon, and it was then that about fifty students identified some of it as theirs. More than 1,000 different articles were included in the display. Hilda Armstrong was released on cash bail.

SUIT IN TIMBER LAND DEAL.

G. H. Proctor Says He Paid $100,000 for Property Worth Only $15,000.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—George Henry Proctor of New York brought suit in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia to-day against Frederick Mertens of F. Mertens & Sons for $100,000 damages alleged to have been incurred in the purchase of land in West Virginia. He asserts that the land did not contain as much timber as represented.

George H. Proctor, who is the President of the Summit Coal Company, and several other companies, and has offices at 170 Broadway, lives at the San Remo Hotel. He said last night that his suit was to recover what he paid for 12,620 acres of timber land near Cumberland, W. Va. He alleges that Mertens declared the land was worth more than $100,000, the purchase price. Mr. Proctor said last night that he had found upon investigation that the land was worth not more than $15,000.

EXPLOSION KILLS MAN; HOTEL MANHATTAN DARK

Bursting Steampipe Extinguishes Lights Throughout Big House.

TWENTY MEN BARELY ESCAPE

Eleven of Those Reached Elevator and Failed to See Comrade in Cloud of Steam.

James Doran, a fireman, was killed in the Hotel Manhattan last night by the bursting of a steam pipe in the third subcellar. Twenty other firemen, engineers and employes escaped with the aid of a freight elevator. Every light in the hotel went out, all elevators immediately stopped, cooking which was being done by electricity was brought to a standstill, and consternation was caused among the 400 patrons and the hundred or more employes. Lamps, lanterns, and candles had to be employed for more than an hour.

Shortly before 11 o'clock Doran, with eleven other firemen, was at work in the third sub-cellar, shoveling coal into the large furnaces. Suddenly there was a loud explosion, followed by a flood of steam and scalding water. Every pound of steam in the boilers escaped, rushing out constantly for ten minutes.

Doran was standing nearest the boiler and about fifteen feet from the point where the explosion took place. He and the others rushed toward the freight elevator, ten feet away, realizing there was no chance for shutting off the steam at the broken part.

Eleven men gained the freight elevator, which was down. One of them seized the rope. The steam was gathering around them fast. It was believed that every one was aboard and the man pulled hard at the rope.

The car started up. Doran's absence was not immediately noted, and he could not be seen through the thick cloud of steam.

The steam followed the men all the way up to the street level on the Madison Avenue side of the hotel. People on that side of the street, who had been rushing toward the shaft, were astounded to see a crowd of men shoot up through the steam and literally fall off the freight elevator car.

In the room off the boiler room, where coal and other things were stored, were nine engineers, firemen, and porters. When they heard the explosion they rushed up a narrow iron stairway which led to the main floor of the hotel through the other two sub-cellars. The last man slammed the door at the beginning of this staircase, thus shutting off the flow of steam.

Doran was not missed even then. For half an hour it was impossible to go into the boiler room on account of the intense heat. Then David Stewart, chief engineer, and his assistant, John J. McGinley, got some lanterns and went into the cellar. As they got off the elevator they stumbled over Doran's body.

Doran was about forty years old, and his address was known only to the day engineer, who could not be seen last night. It is not known whether Doran was married.

Immediately following the explosion the lights in the hotel began to grow dim and they went out altogether within a minute or so. The rooms, the office, the lobby, the reception rooms, the dining rooms, the café, the workrooms, kitchen, and nearly every other part of the hotel had occupants.

All were thrown into a state of consternation. Patrons at once telephoned to the clerks, asking what had happened. The clerks explained as best they could that there was no apparent danger.

People began to rush down stairs to the lobby. Many went into the corridors and halls, looking for the elevators. These had stopped with the cessation of power. The power had stopped slowly, however, like the lights, and when the car runners noticed the power was being shut off they brought the cars to a stop at the next floor, thus avoiding mishaps.

The clerk sent hall, bell, and elevator boys through the hotel to explain that there was no danger, that there was something the matter with the electric power, and that everything would be all right within a few minutes. Women had left their rooms to see what had happened or what was going to happen, and were scattered about every floor and on the stairs. Some started from the top floor and made their way to the lobby to ask the clerks what the matter was and to feel safe. People from the street rushed into the hotel, making the excitement greater.

About fifty persons were in the dining room at the time, all of whom remained in their seats, however. In the café there were about a dozen men, who did not seem to be much alarmed.

Those who had rushed to the main floor stood about talking for something like half an hour, until they saw lanterns, lamps, and candles being placed about here and there.

Not enough lights could be procured for every room to have one, and the majority of the hotel guests had to sit in darkness, if they preferred their own room, until the power was turned on again, something like an hour or more later.

Chief Engineer Stewart, after about three-quarters of an hour's work, succeeded in repairing the break. The furnaces were started, the boilers set agoing, the dynamos worked, and the lights were turned on again. It was said that the steam had not injured the machinery.

PHILADELPHIA, May 22.—More than one hundred clergymen of the Methodist Episcopal Church marched to City Hall to-day in personal protest to Mayor Weaver against the pending gas lease and to congratulate him on the stand he has taken. In addressing them the Mayor said:

"I say to you, as I said before, that I will use the utmost of my power to prevent what I believe is the greatest iniquity put upon the City of Philadelphia."

The Committee of Seventy has planned a mass meeting to be held in the Bourse to-morrow night, and other mass meetings against the lease will be held during the week.

COTTRELL OFF TO STUDY.

Tenderloin's Police Captain Will Try to Become Inspector.

Police Captain John W. Cottrell, who has survived the strenuous life of the Tenderloin for a record period in reform days, disappeared from the station last night, leaving Sergt. Wilson in command. The Captain said as he went out of the door:

"I'll be back in a week."

When the midnight platoon came on the floor the Captain's action was explained when Acting Captain Wilson said to the men:

"Now, boys, the skipper has gone away for a week to study up for Inspector. I want you to work hard and give him a good showing."

TO CALL ON CONGRESS IN VENEZUELAN CASE

President Will Report It for Decision as to Further Steps.

STILL SLIGHT HOPE IN CASTRO

Administration Finds No Cause for Alarm—Asphalt Company Obtains Review of Decision.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—It is officially stated that the action of the Venezuelan courts in the matter of the asphalt controversy will be permitted to stand until Congress meets. President Roosevelt will then lay the whole question before that body.

It is not explained what the President expects to accomplish by reporting the contention to Congress. The matter is purely one for Executive action, and Congress could do nothing in the way of instructing the President unless the facts reported should warrant a declaration of war.

It does not necessarily follow that the President has any idea of embarking in a war with Venezuela. He may desire simply to get the views of Congress on the subject of his policy toward that country. Some of the politicians here draw the inference that the President is perplexed as to how to deal with the case, and that he will welcome any and all suggestions.

Before Congress assembles the entire situation may change and an adjustment of the dispute may be reached. There is no uneasiness felt in Administration circles regarding the outcome. While the situation may become even more annoying through the stubbornness of Castro, the disposition is to let the matter rest until all the facts can be laid before Congress in October.

Press advices from Caracas indicating that the resources of the law have not been exhausted and that a further appeal has been granted remove the necessity for hurried action.

The decision recently handed down by the Court of Cassation was the decision of its President. The asphalt company has availed itself of its right to have this decision reviewed by the full court. No one has any expectation, however, that the review will prove beneficial to the company.

CARACAS, May 22.—The New York and Bermudez Asphalt Company has appealed to the full Court of Cassation from the decision of the President of the Federal Court of Cassation, sitting as a Tribunal of the First Instance, dissolving the Hamilton contract and ordering the company to pay damages.

President Castro returned here to-day from his trip to the interior of the republic.

TRACK OWNERS CONFER.

Plan to Raise Admission Fee Discussed at Mr. Belmont's.

About a dozen prominent representatives of the different horse-racing interests were in consultation over the betting situation with August Belmont at his home, 44 East Thirty-fourth Street, from 9 o'clock last night until 1 o'clock this morning. No one present consented to tell what had happened. It was said, however, that an announcement would probably be made to-day.

A plan considered was whether the other tracks would follow the examples set at Belmont Park and forego the revenue that has been derived from the betting privileges, or whether there should be an increase in the price of admission to make up for this loss. It was declared that whatever action was taken no new rule would go into effect until the opening of the Brooklyn Jockey Club meeting on Thursday.

Some of those who attended intimated that there would be no increase in the price of admission. Among those present were P. J. Dwyer, President of the Brooklyn Jockey Club, and J. H. Bradford, Treasurer of the Coney Island Jockey Club. Among the Stewards were H. K. Knapp and Andrew Miller. Mr. Belmont is a Steward also.

KILLED BY STORM IN TEXAS.

Several Persons Dead—Churches Wrecked and Crops Much Damaged.

DALLAS, May 22.—Several lives were lost and serious damage was done to crops in many sections of Texas by the terrific wind and rain storm that prevailed last night in many sections. Streams are out of their banks and bridges have been washed away.

In the northwest part of Haskell County fourteen houses were destroyed. Near Marcy the two children of William Tounds were killed, and Mrs. Tounds was found unconscious and will probably die. Mr. Tounds escaped with slight bruises.

At Malone the Christian and Baptist Churches and several other buildings were wrecked.

At Temple, Bertha Henly, a twelve-year-old colored girl, was killed by lightning.

Considerable damage was done at Waco; several houses being unroofed.

BOY SOMNAMBULIST MISSING.

The River Is Near His Home and It Is Feared That He Walked in.

NEWARK, N. J., May 22.—Eighteen-year-old George A. Barry of 430 Second Street, East Newark, got out of bed and dressed himself some time between midnight and 5 o'clock this morning and walked away. His parents have asked the police to look for him, because he has a habit of walking in his sleep.

His parents fear that Joseph may have walked into the Passaic River, which is only a short distance from his home. He wore a cap, a pair of trousers, overalls, and his shoes.

Broker's Wife Robbed of Diamonds.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., May 22.—The theft of over $500 worth of diamonds was reported to the police this morning by Mrs. Augustus Knapp, wife of a New York broker. A maid lost a diamond engagement ring at the same time. The jewels are supposed to have been taken from the house on Saturday afternoon by a man who represented himself to be a telephone Inspector.

PROBABLY IS IN THE LEAD

Atlantic—Thurs., 7 A. M., by Oneida, 130 miles, due east; Thurs., 4 P. M., by India, 220 miles out, south of east; Sat., 2 P. M., by Cedric, long. 60 W., lat. 40 N., 840 miles out, south of east; Sat., 6 P. M., by Minnetonka, long. 59 W., lat. 40.49 N., 900 miles out, due east; Sat., 10 P. M., by Noordam, long. 58 W., lat. 40.53 N., 960 miles out, north of east, 82 hours out.

Hamburg—Thurs., 7 A. M., by Oneida, 132 miles, due east; 19 hours out.

Endymion—Thurs., 6 P. M., by Kennell, long. 70.06 W., lat. 39.45 N., 234 miles out, south of east, 30 hours out.

Apache—Thurs., 10 P. M., by Grosser Kurfuerst, long. 70.50 W., lat. 39.59 N., 190 miles out, south of east; Friday, 3 P. M., by Princess Alice, 65 miles, due east of Nantucket Light, 258 miles out in 51 hours.

Valhalla—Thurs., 12 P. M., by Nantucket Light, 193 miles out, north of east, 36 hours.

Thistle—Sat., 2 P. M., by Gorsemore, long. 64 W., lat. 41.08 N., 650 miles out in 74 hours.

The following telegrams have been received by The Associated Press. They were transmitted from the steamers by Marconi wireless to the Marconi stations on Long Island and Nantucket and thence to New York:

Steamship Cedric, via Noordam and Marconi Station, Siasconset, Mass., May 22.—(Associated, New York)—May 20, Atlantic sighted, latitude 40, longitude 60, heading east; fresh west-southwest winds, weather fine, clear to cloudy, sea moderate to rough.

Steamship Minnetonka, via Marconi Station, Seagonack, N. Y., May 22.—(Associated, New York)—Passed yacht Atlantic Saturday, latitude 40.49 north, longitude 39 west; fresh west-southwest wind, increasing.

Steamship Noordam, via Marconi Station, Siasconset, Mass., May 22.—(Associated, New York)—May 20, passed yacht, presumed Atlantic, 9:43 P. M.; latitude 40.53 north, 58 west, heading east, burned red, white, red Boston light, having fair west-southwest wind.

Wilson Marshall's three-masted schooner Atlantic, the favorite in the race across the ocean for the Kaiser's Cup, was three times reported yesterday by ocean liners. The positions occupied by her at various times on Saturday night when seen by the passing steamers indicate that she has advanced far beyond the expectation of her most sanguine followers, and, if maintaining the same speed since, is now nearly half way across to the Lizard light. She is following a more southerly course than was generally anticipated, and will have to traverse a much longer distance than the 3,020 miles dead reckoning which separate the Lizard from New York.

With a continuance of anything like the same luck in the direction and strength of prevailing winds, she should reach the Lizard light well ahead of the record time of 13 days 20 hours and 36 minutes, and should make a new record that will stand longer than the present one has stood.

Where the Hamburg now is no one can say. When last reported she was 500 miles out and making good headway. The weather has been as much to her liking as to the Atlantic's, and she has probably made nearly if not quite as good use of her time. She was ahead of the Marshall schooner when the two were last seen together, having outfooted her and maintained a better position as to wind than Capt. Barr's boat. This, however, was only 130 miles out, and against head winds all the way. She would compare in reaching very favorably with the Atlantic, experts estimating her less than half a knot slower than the American boat.

It is probable that the Endymion and the Fleur de Lys are doing well, and that the Ailsa is the fifth boat in the procession, with the others trailing various distances out, with the square-riggers Valhalla and Apache bringing up the rear.

Since the Atlantic was last seen on Saturday night, the wind has continued to blow from the west-southwest at a velocity of from twenty to twenty-eight miles. Averaging her progress at nearly the fifteen miles she was making when last seen, she should have advanced in the fifty hours elapsed from the time that the Noordam saw her until Monday midnight, 750 miles, which would make her 1,710 miles from New York, or more than half way across in five days and a half, where she was moving in direct line, and about half way considering her southerly course. With eight days and eight hours more to get in inside of the record, her chance of making new figures seems to be exceptional.

The Endymion, in the record run she made, covered in five and a half days 1,396 miles. The Atlantic would thus be over 300 miles ahead. The Endymion had strong favoring winds all the way until the last twelve hours of the time mentioned. The Atlantic had favoring winds for not over four days. The estimated figures of each day's run on the Atlantic, judged by the positions reported, would compare thus with the Endymion's log:

	Atlantic.	Endymion.
First day, (sighted Oneida).....	*184	†218
Second day, (sighted India).....	824	250
Third day, (sighted Cedric).....	342	340
Fourth day, (sighted Noordam)...	342	298
Fifth day.....	342	282
Sixth day, (to midnight only)....	176	‡110
Total miles.....	1,710	1,396

*Head winds. †Twenty-one hours. ‡Light airs.

The Endymion was probably not forced at the start until it became apparent that she had a chance to break the record. Under the conditions existing in this race she would probably do much better than her own time. It is interesting to remember, comparing the Endymion and the Hamburg, that Capt. Peters of the German schooner said his ship could have made the passage, with the same conditions the Endymion had on the record-breaking trip, in eleven days. The Atlantic if only as fast as the Hamburg ought on this basis to be easily ahead of the record.

There is nothing to judge of the position of Endymion, Hamburg, Hildegarde, Ailsa, or Fleur de Lys of the likely leaders. The Thistle, however, was reported yesterday from Boston. She was met by the British steamer Gorsemore, bound west from Antwerp to Boston, on Saturday at 2:30 P. M., at the same time the Cedric was passing the Atlantic. At this time Capt. Tod's boat was in latitude 41 degrees 17 minutes north, 75 miles north of the Atlantic, and longitude 64 degrees west, 240 miles west of the Atlantic. In other words the Thistle was about 200 miles behind the Atlantic and about 650 miles out from New York. She had all sails set and was making good headway.

Capt. Walker of the Gorsemore reported that Commodore Tod signalled "all well on board." The yacht, he said, had passed on Friday afternoon a derelict brigantine and the spars of another vessel at latitude 41.17 north longitude 67.30 west. He thought that a collision had occurred, the second vessel been sunk, and the brigantine abandoned. This idea was refuted later by Capt. John Williams of the Norman Fisher, who arrived at Gloucester and reported the derelict, saying she was the British brigantine Acacia of Port Medway. The spars were what he saw from the burning vessel.

An interesting light is thrown on the Thistle's progress by the two reports. They show that she advanced 210 miles directly eastward in nineteen hours, making eleven knots an hour. This would keep her well in advance of the Valhalla and Apache, according to the last reports heard from them on Thursday and Friday.

SHOT BOARDER FOR BURGLAR.

Williamsburg Man Wounded Friend Who Was at His Door.

Frederick White, twenty-one years old, a salesman in the dry goods store of William Schwartz at 122 Central Avenue, Williamsburg, was mistaken for a burglar by his employer early yesterday morning and was shot by him twice in the abdomen. But for the fact that the shooting was through a door panel White would probably have been killed. As it was the bullet wounds were slight.

White boards with the Schwartz family. On Sunday he accompanied his employer and the latter's wife and daughter to a picnic in Glendale, Queens. White went away from the picnic ground before the Schwartzes did, but when he reached his house he found that he had not his night key. Being unable to get in, he remained around the house until midnight. Then, as the Schwartzes had not appeared, he decided to take a walk around the block. While he was walking the Schwartzes appeared, and, believing that White had gone to bed, they also retired. An hour later Schwartz was awakened by a fumbling at the kitchen door.

The noise was made by White, who had returned, and Schwartz, remembering that a burglar had attempted to enter the house a month ago, took his revolver from under his pillow and fired through the panel of the kitchen door. As White fell with a cry Schwartz ran to a front window and shouted for help. Detective Landman appeared, and Schwartz told him he believed he had shot a burglar. Schwartz almost collapsed when he discovered whom he had wounded.

Schwartz was arrested for felonious assault, and was arraigned later in the Manhattan Avenue Court, where he was discharged, as White sent word to court that under no circumstances would he prosecute him.

REJECTED BY MAYOR JOHNSON

Cleveland Railways' Proposition Laid on Table in Council.

CLEVELAND, May 22.—The proposition made by the Cleveland Electric Railway Company to the city for a twenty-five-year extension of its franchises was laid on the table at the meeting of the Council here to-night. Mayor Johnson exclaimed:

"Throw it in the waste basket. I won't serve on the committee to consider it."

As an outcome of Mayor Johnson's recent proposition to the company to lease its property to a holding company, it presented the following proposition: For a twenty-five-year extension it would agree that its stock should receive not more than a 5 per cent. dividend, half the surplus earnings to go to the city and the other half to be used for improvements; the rate of fare to be six tickets for 25 cents, with eight for 25 cents for the heaviest hours of travel morning and evening.

Mayor Johnson said:

"For every dollar that was paid into the City Treasury it would cost the people five, and I doubt if the dollar would ever be paid in. The city would have no control over the finances."

$25 FINE FOR E. R. THOMAS.

Jerome Urges Heavier Sentence for Rapid Motor Driving.

A fine of $25 was imposed upon E. R. Thomas yesterday in the Court of Special Sessions, a conviction having been had upon the charge that he had driven an automobile faster than the legal limit. District Attorney Jerome prosecuted the case in person.

Bicycle Policeman Nerney of the West One Hundredth Street Station arrested Thomas on April 23. He charged that Thomas had driven his machine on West End Avenue, between One Hundred and Third and One Hundred and Sixth Streets, at a very rapid rate. He testified that he had held a stop watch on the car.

Thomas swore that his machine was so geared on April 23 that eight miles an hour was it maximum speed.

Mr. Jerome made a plea for a heavy penalty.

Justice Deuel announced that a fine of $25 would be imposed. He said Thomas had been convicted on his own testimony, but it had not been shown that he had driven "recklessly." The Justice further said he saw no reason to make an example of the defendant.

185 PACKARD GRADUATES.

Lieut. Gov. Bruce at School's Commencement.

The forty-seventh anniversary of the Packard Commercial School was celebrated at the commencement exercises at Carnegie Hall last evening. Lieut. Gov. M. Linn Bruce presided, and 185 young men and women received diplomas, 86 in the school of business, and 99 in the school of stenography. Byron Horton, Principal of the school, presented the diplomas.

Lieut. Gov. Bruce declared in his address that the City of New York owed a debt of appreciation to the late Prof. S. S. Packard, the founder of the school, for establishing the institution on such high principles. The Rev. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, pastor of the Second Congregational Church of Brooklyn, spoke on character and commerce. He cited the careers of Peter Cooper, Abram S. Hewitt, and Prof. Packard as worthy of emulation by the graduates.

MISS LELAND DIES OF HURTS.

Run Down by Electric Cab on Her Way to Church.

Miss O. M. Leland, seventy-six years old, of 692 Park Avenue, who was run down by an electric cab in Sixty-eighth Street, near Park Avenue, Sunday morning, when on her way to church, died yesterday afternoon in the Presbyterian Hospital.

An operation was performed on Miss Leland's head, with faint hopes of saving her life. Her advanced age and the nature of the injury prevented her recovery.

The body was removed to the Park Avenue residence.

George Cotter, the chauffeur of the cab by which Miss Leland was run down, is out on bail, but will be rearraigned.

TRAIN KILLED TWO WOMEN.

Trying to Avoid Freight and Got in Front of Express.

CHICAGO, May 22.—Dagmar E. Turnberg and her sister, Dora, two young women stenographers, were struck and instantly killed to-day by an express passenger train near Forest Glen.

They were in a group of five young women who sought to avoid a freight train that was approaching on the other track. The other three escaped injury.

Chicago Ball Player Dies in Game.

CHICAGO, May 22.—The sudden death of Edward W. Johnston put an end to a ball game to-day in which he was a player. He batted a ball and was put out at first base. He turned to run back to where the other players were and had gone but a few feet when he fell and died almost instantly.

Twenty Years for Strike Murder.

CINCINNATI, May 22.—William Patten, a union iron molder, having pleaded guilty to killing Samuel Weakley, a non-union molder, last Summer during a strike, was sentenced to-day by Judge Smith to twenty years in the penitentiary.

TO BE IN THE PACIFIC

Two of the Transports Were in Hai-Nan Straits on Saturday.

RUSSIAN OFFICERS CAPTURED

Junk Filled with Them, Supposedly from Vladivostok, Is Reported in Tokio to Have Been Caught.

HONGKONG, May 22.—The latest steamer to arrive here reports sighting a Russian Volunteer Fleet steamer accompanied by a large transport in Hai-Nan Straits, between Hai-Nan and the mainland of China on the morning of May 20.

The two vessels were steaming west.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 22.—While there is no official confirmation of a Hongkong report that Admiral Rojestvensky's fleet has passed through Bashee Channel, (the northern of the two waterways between Luson and Formosa,) it is credited by those who have insisted from the beginning that Rojestvensky would give Formosa a wide berth to the westward.

The Admiral, it is said here, has had ample time to reach the Pacific since he left the waters of Indo-China.

SAIGON, May 22.—Admiral de Jonquières, the French naval commander, returned here to-day after an inspection of the Annamese coast.

He reports that no belligerent ships have returned to French territorial waters since May 14.

TOKIO, May 22.—It is reported that a junk filled with Russian officers has been captured.

It is presumed that they were making a reconnaissance from Vladivostok.

RUSSIAN TROOPS AGGRESSIVE.

But Oyama Reports the Repulse of the Enemy's Attacks.

TOKIO, May 22.—Imperial Army Headquarters made the following announcement to-day:

"In the direction of Chang-Tu on May 20 a force of the enemy, consisting of over a battalion of infantry, a regiment of cavalry, and two guns, made a detour to the eastern height of San-tao-Kou, eight miles east of Chang-Tu, and from the vicinity of a coal mine ten miles east of Chang-Tu at 11:30 A. M. commenced a bombardment.

"Subsequently another Russian force with four guns appeared on the northern height of Chin-yan-Pao, and at 4 P. M. two battalions of the enemy advanced from the eastern side of the village, but were repulsed.

"Another mixed force of the enemy entered Erh-shih-li-Pao. They set fire to the village and retreated.

"A body of the enemy's cavalry, dismounted, attacked Tang-She on the right bank of the Liao River, thirteen miles southwest of Fakoman, on the morning of May 20. After an engagement lasting two hours the enemy retreated in disorder toward the southwest, abandoning 300 men killed and wounded.

"Except for these collisions between small forces the situation is unchanged."

ST. PETERSBURG, May 22.—There are some indications that Gen. Linevitch has taken a leaf out of Marshal Oyama's book at the Sha River and Mukden, and that he is about to advance and undertake a counter-offensive, meeting the Japanese pressure against his left by advancing his right.

It is too early, however, to determine whether the moves thus far are more than feints.

PASSPORT FRAUDS ALLEGED.

English Sympathizers with Russian Liberals in Trouble.

LONDON, May 22.—An Englishman named McCulloch, who, it is understood, is an actor and who procured the passport found on the body of the bomb manufacturer killed by the explosion of one of his bombs in the Hotel Bristol, St. Petersburg, on March 11, will be one of those who will be arraigned in Bow Street Police Court to-morrow on the charge of conspiring to obtain passports for unlawful purposes.

Another defendant will be H. N. Brailsford of Hempstead, a writer for The Fortnightly and other reviews on Balkan and Macedonian questions.

The officials here are most reticent. They decline to furnish the names of others implicated. It is said that the trial will disclose the details of a regular system by which foreign sympathizers with the Liberal movement in Russia furnished to political propagandists passports in the names of subjects of other powers, thereby enabling the propagandists to enter Russia.

VERDICT AGAINST JAPAN.

She Loses Her Case in the House Tax Arbitration Proceedings.

THE HAGUE, May 22.—The Arbitration Tribunal to-day issued an award upholding the appeal of Great Britain, France, and Germany against Japan for levying the house tax on buildings in the old foreign concessions.

The tribunal holds that the buildings are exempt.

No Change of Venue for J. A. Lee.

Special to The New York Times.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., May 22.—Circuit Judge Martin this afternoon declined to grant a change of venue to ex-Lieut. Gov. John A. Lee, indicted for bribery and perjury in connection with the Alum Baking Powder scandal. Lee's plea was that the citizens of Cole County were prejudiced against him, and that therefore he could not get a fair trial.

FIND ST. LUKE'S NURSE SAFE AT NIAGARA FALLS

Miss Jalonick Went There Alone Last Thursday.

SHE IS EXTREMELY NERVOUS

Appealed to Preacher for Aid, Saying She Had Lost Pocketbook—Father Goes to Her.

Special to The New York Times.

NIAGARA FALLS, May 22.—Miss Margaret Jalonick, who has been missing since last Wednesday from the training school for nurses at St. Luke's Hospital, New York, where she was a pupil, has been here since Thursday. She came here alone from New York.

Some three years ago she was in this city, and when she returned Thursday she went to a boarding house on First Street, where she visited at that time. This forenoon she called upon the pastor of St. Paul's Methodist Church and told the pastor, the Rev. O. H. Poland, that she was a stranger in the city, and had had the misfortune to lose her handbag, which contained her money. She said she would be thankful if he would assist her in getting money from her father in Dallas, Texis. Mr. Poland led the way to a telegraph office, where she wired for money.

Before the money came the Chief of Police of this city was requested by telegraph to see the young woman when she received the money and have her held at a first-class hotel until her father arrived from New York, where he was looking for her. She was very indignant upon being questioned by the police, and demanded of her father by telephone that she be allowed to proceed as she willed. She is extremely nervous. She declares she was not a prisoner at St. Luke's and was at liberty to leave at her will.

Miss Jalonick's father, George W. Jalonick, who is one of the best known citizens of Dallas, Texas, where he is President of the Board of Education and of the Southwestern Insurance Company, arrived in this city yesterday morning to search for his daughter, who had so mysteriously disappeared. Soon after his arrival here, and after a conference which he had with the police he received a telegram from his brother in Dallas saying that Miss Margaret had telegrapned to that place saying that she was with some friends in Niagara Falls. Mr. Jalonick did some long distance telephoning from the Hotel Earlington, where he was stopping, and in the afternoon went to see Superintendent Clover of St. Luke's Hospital. When he got back to the hotel he said:

"My daughter is very highly strung and of a nervous temperament. She was a probationary nurse at St. Luke's, and the time was approaching for her to take her examinations. From what I can make of the affair at present, she was seized with a sort of 'stage fright,' fearing, perhaps, that she might not be able to pass, and this worked on her so that she ran away. She has visited Niagara Falls before, and the people she is now with were the same with whom she stayed before.

"According to what I have learned from Superintendent Clover and from Miss Wilson, the chief nurse at the hospital, there was no reason at all for any nervousness on my daughter's part. They say she was a good student, clever and painstaking, and would have passed without trouble.

"As soon as she knew of the commotion she had caused she wired to her uncle in Dallas, thinking doubtless that I had already left there, which was the fact. I passed through Buffalo last night, and at the time had no idea I was so near to her. Since then I have talked with her on the telephone.

"I cannot say now what I will do when I get to Niagara Falls. That depends entirely on my daughter. If she elects to come back here and go on with her work I shall place no obstacle in her way, and should she prefer to go back to Dallas I will take her home with me."

Mr. Jalonick left over the New York Central at 8 o'clock last night for Niagara Falls.

POSTUM.

COFFEE CONGESTION
Causes a Variety of Ails.

A happy old lady in Wisconsin says:

"During the time I was a coffee drinker I was subject to sick headaches, recurring every 2 or 3 weeks, and sometimes lasting 2 or 3 days, totally unfitting me for anything.

"To this affliction was added, some years ago, a trouble with my heart that was very painful, accompanied by a smothering sensation and faintness.

"I would be unable to lie down, but was compelled to sit gasping for breath until I was perfectly exhausted.

"Dyspepsia, also, a few years ago came to make life harder to bear. I took all sorts of patent medicines as well as doctor's prescriptions, but none of them helped me for any length of time.

"The doctors frequently told me that coffee was not good for me; but without coffee I felt as if I had no breakfast. I finally decided about 2 years ago to abandon the use of coffee entirely, and as I had read a great deal about Postum Food Coffee, I concluded to try that for a breakfast beverage.

"I liked the taste of it and was particularly pleased to notice that it did not 'come up' as coffee used to. I had only hoped that the Postum Food Coffee would help my digestion, but I soon found that it was doing much more than that. The bad spells with my heart grew less and less frequent, and finally ceased altogether, and I have not had an attack of sick headache for more than a year. My digestion is good, too, and I am thankful that I am once more a healthy woman. I know my wonderful restoration to health came from quitting coffee and using Postum Food Coffee." Name given by the Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason," and it is this. Coffee has a direct action on the liver with some people, and causes partial congestion of that organ, preventing the natural outlet of the secretions. Then follow biliousness, sallow skin, headaches, constipation and finally a change of the blood corpuscles and nervous prostration.

CHICAGO'S BIG STRIKE MAY SOON BE ENDED

Employers and Men Again Meet to Discuss Terms.

PROSPECT CONSIDERED GOOD

Unions Threaten to Withdraw All Children from Schools Because of Arrests of Parents and Pupils.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 22.—After a conference to-night between Attorney Mayer, representing the Employers' Association; President Shea of the Teamsters, and Business Agent Reid it was declared by Shea and others that the prospects for the settlement of the strike are excellent, and that the end of the trouble may be looked for any time within the next forty-eight hours.

The only stumbling block in the negotiations is the declaration by the express companies that none of their striking drivers will be taken back under any conditions. All other terms submitted by the employers to the strikers have been accepted. The express company managers said, however, that they had no intention of keeping a blacklist. This phase of the strike was the only matter discussed at the conference to-night, and, in the opinion of all present, the absence of a blacklist opened a way for a settlement, and the negotiations will be continued to-morrow.

Mayor Dunne telophoned to Springfield to-day to ask Gov. Deneen what he could do about the militia. He received word that all the companies in Chicago could lie in readiness two hours after orders for them came.

The Lumber and Wood Trades started to deliver their orders to the strike-bound houses, but did it gradually, with the result that only 125 teamsters struck.

Another batch of employers will try to-morrow. If this continues there will be 2,500 men out by Friday night. Already work has been stopped on several large buildings, and if the policy goes on all construction will cease. Those who struck to-day were lumber drivers, but all the planing mill and sash, door, and blind teamsters will refuse to make deliveries, if asked.

A conference was held to-day between Mayor Dunne and the Council committee with the general managers of the express companies. It was the firm action of the latter which broke off peace negotiations on Saturday night, and the Mayor asked them to meet him and discuss the question. They all declared that their striking employes had been discharged, and that they would under no circumstances take them back. They denied establishing a blacklist, and said that if any company wished to hire the striking employes of another company there would be no objection. That was the only concession they would make.

The arrest of parents and children connected with school strikes has aroused bitter feeling among labor unions. The Federation adopted resolutions as follows:

"That the Federation pledges itself to stand by these children, and, if necessary for their vindication, to hold ourselves ready to withdraw all our children from the corporation-controlled schools.

"That if these victims of servile and misdirected zeal are not immediately released we pledge the services of this organization to both children and parents who have been arrested or prosecuted by officials who are so easily blinded to the doings of sweatshops and trust factories, but who are so ready to cast a stigma upon the highest type of childhood to-day, and we promise to secure their freedom and their rights even if it be necessary to go to the Supreme Court of Illinois to accomplish it.

"That a committee of five be appointed by the President of the Federation with power to take such steps as may be necessary to give effect to these resolutions."

THE CHILDREN ENJOY

Life out of doors and out of the games which they play and the enjoyment which they receive and the efforts which they make, comes the greater part of that healthful development which is so essential to their happiness when grown. When a laxative is needed the remedy which is given to them to cleanse and sweeten and strengthen the internal organs on which it acts, should be such as physicians would sanction, because its component parts are known to be wholesome and the remedy itself free from every objectionable quality. The one remedy which physicians and parents, well-informed, approve and recommend and which the little ones enjoy, because of its pleasant flavor, its gentle action and its beneficial effects, is—Syrup of Figs—and for the same reason it is the only laxative which should be used by fathers and mothers.

Syrup of Figs is the only remedy which acts gently, pleasantly and naturally without griping, irritating, or nauseating and which cleanses the system effectually, without producing that constipated habit which results from the use of the old-time cathartics and modern imitations, and against which the children should be so carefully guarded. If you would have them grow to manhood and womanhood, strong, healthy and happy, do not give them medicines, when medicines are not needed, and when nature needs assistance in the way of a laxative, give them only the simple, pleasant and gentle—Syrup of Figs.

Its quality is due not only to the excellence of the combination of the laxative principles of plants with pleasant aromatic syrups and juices, but also to our original method of manufacture and as you value the health of the little ones, do not accept any of the substitutes which unscrupulous dealers sometimes offer to increase their profits. Please to remember, the full name of the Company—CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO.—is printed on the front of every package. In order to get its beneficial effects it is always necessary to buy the genuine only. For sale by all reliable druggists.

Simpson Crawford Co. May Sale. Simpson Crawford Co.

One hundred and sixty-seven used pianos, including

Steinway, Knabe, Weber, Hardman--Twenty Others

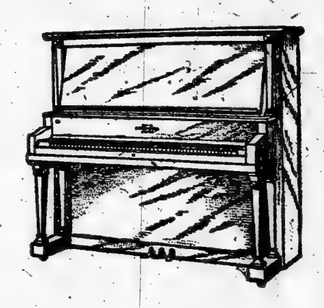
ready for a five-day sale beginning to-day at $10 down.

THE beauty about the Simpson Crawford Co. used piano sales is that we take back the instrument you buy at full amount paid to date of return at any time within one year from date of purchase when you may desire to exchange for one of the dozen famous new pianos for which we are sole agents in New York City, including:

Packard, H. & S. G. Lindeman, Schubert, Hobart M. Cable, Smith & Barnes, Radle, Price & Teeple, Laffargue, Bailey, Cecilian Piano Player and Cecilian Piano.

Hundreds of country home and Summer cottage furnishers yearn for a piano to enliven the hours spent indoors, but they do not care to invest in a new piano, and not being familiar with the original Simpson Crawford Co. plan, they are compelled to forego the pleasure they would seek, figuring that to buy a used instrument would tie up a certain amount of money at the risk of leaving it unattended during the Winter season, or, if sold, they would realize a comparatively insignificant sum.

The Simpson Crawford Co. plan eliminates all of these disagreeable features. When you want to get rid of your used piano you receive dollar for dollar paid on it, to be applied on a new instrument of highest character. The amount paid acts as a substantial first payment on the new piano. If you are going to remain in the city, this plan is equally as important to you.



Hobart M. Cable pianos are judged by pianists as containing a wealth of tone qualities and beauty of case construction that makes them one of the most popular pianos we sell.

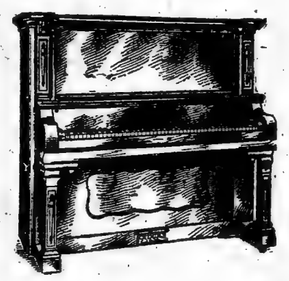
It would take you a week to go around to all the Piano Stores and examine the tone qualities of the various meritorious pianos. You can examine practically all of them in an hour or two in our spaciously and finely appointed piano rooms—we have ten of them, besides the main wareroom, on the fourth floor. Our pianos are displayed in ample light to show them off effectively.

Ever think of that?

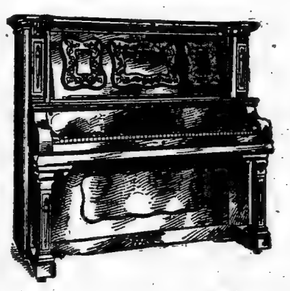
Hundreds of people are always ready to buy a piano, all but making up their minds what instrument to select—there are so many good ones. Nearly every piano sold in New York is included in this five-day list, and out of the one hundred and sixty-seven a surprising number are as good as new. They are all in excellent condition, and have been used sufficiently to prove the quality of their tone, but not long enough to impair in any way the response to the pianist's touch.

We will adhere strictly to the original plan in this sale—no piano will be sold until the day for which it is advertised—the plan that is fair to all and so successful.

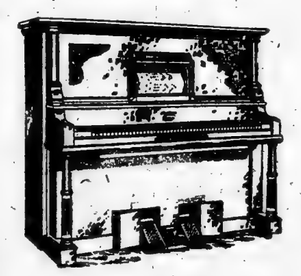
Smith & Barnes—over 60,000 now in use—a Piano sought for its tone quality, its beautiful case. We will sell you one on agreeable payments—small amount down.



The Packard Piano is an instrument that reminds you of a finely toned concert grand for which you would pay a small fortune. Many acknowledge this the best piano manufactured.



The H. & S. G. Lindeman is a Piano we are proud to represent. For years the name has been synonymous with the highest development of the Piano.



8:30 is the opening hour of this sale every day.

Schubert Pianos are among the foremost of the day in the estimation of the skilled artists who are capable to judge.

The Price & Teeple is considered a wonderful value by those who know a really worthy instrument. Let us show you one and explain the terms.

Our piano department is the largest in New York. Fourth floor.

The Cecilian piano is a piano with a player within.

THE price—$600—is $200 less than the combined price of a piano of equal merit and a separate player. It doesn't take up near the room occupied by a piano and piano player, and the owners of the fifty or more we have sold recently, pronounce it ideal for the small apartment.

It is more easily manipulated than most piano players, as it exemplifies the ease of the Cecilian player, of which we are selling so many. It can also be played by the fingers, the pedals and music roll being concealed, so you cannot tell it from a piano.

It is a gem in the world of music—a wonder in the world of invention, and the simple words—"anybody can play"—describe the Cecilian piano. You need not have touched a piano in your lifetime, yet the fastest piece of popular music or the most impressive classical composition may be rendered at will, with the skill of the finished artist, by simply and gently rocking the pedals.

Send for booklet—it will give you a desire to come and see this marvelous instrument.

IMPORTANT—For the convenience of those who attend this sale we have arranged to offer very special values in SEWING MACHINES AND OIL PAINTINGS—FOURTH FLOOR.

LORDLY STOPS SITTING OF HOUSE OF COMMONS

Howls Last Over an Hour and the Speaker is Helpless.

LYTTELTON SHOUTED DOWN

Opposition Demands Fiscal Statement by Balfour—May Move a Vote of Censure To-day.

LONDON, May 22.—The sitting of the House of Commons to-night was marked by scenes of the wildest disorder, growing out of a motion by Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, the Liberal leader, to adjourn the House in order that he might discuss a charge against Premier Balfour of having violated his pledge not to deal with the subject of Colonial preference without first appealing to the country.

Alfred Lyttelton, Secretary of State for the Colonies, was put up to reply to the Liberal leader, but the members of the Opposition shouted down his every attempt to speak, even after the Premier had demanded a hearing for the Secretary.

Finally the Speaker, after he had exhausted every effort to quell the turbulence, put into force for the first time a new rule empowering him to adjourn the House in case of grave disorder.

The trouble originated at the afternoon sitting, when Premier Balfour, replying to questions on the subject, said he did not consider himself pledged to inaction in regard to colonial preference except so far as Parliamentary action was concerned. The matter might be submitted to a colonial conference in 1906, even though the country had not previously had an oportunity to express an opinion on the subject.

Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman charged Mr. Balfour with violating the pledge he had made in his Edinburgh speech, and moved the adjournment of the House to discuss the matter.

The debate on Sir Henry's motion came up at the night session. The Liberal leader demanded a plain answer from Premier Balfour, but Alfred Lyttelton rose to reply.

The members of the Opposition drowned the efforts of the Secretary with cries of "Balfour!" "Balfour!" After continuing for about ten minutes, Mr. Lyttelton sat down.

Winston Churchill then attempted to speak, but the Ministerialists drowned his efforts, the Nationalists joining in the din and shouting for the police.

After a number of members had failed to secure a hearing the Premier rose to a point of order and a temporary lull followed. Mr. Balfour said he thought it highly improper that he should be expected to follow immediately the leader of the Opposition. He had never before known the Opposition to refuse to hear a Minister, and he insisted that the House should hear Mr. Lyttelton, as otherwise the dignity of the House could not be maintained.

Mr. Lyttelton again made an attempt to speak, but the uproar was renewed.

Finally the Speaker said it was obvious that the scene could not continue and he would, therefore, adjourn the House under the rules empowering the Speaker to take such action in case of grave disorder.

The Speaker had been unable to secure even a semblance of order after howls and counter-howls lasting over an hour.

The action of the Speaker and the scenes in the House created a tremendous sensation in the lobbies. They were crowded with members discussing every phase of the evening's occurrences, which, it was said, were unprecedented.

The galleries were filled with peers and other distinguished persons, who had gathered in the hope of hearing an interesting debate on the fiscal question. They took part in the cries for their favorites, thus adding to the din, and afterward joined the excited crowds in the lobbies.

To-night's scenes grew to some extent out of the Balfour-Chamberlain controversy. The members generally were in feverish expectation that the debate would indirectly indicate the terms of Mr. Balfour's answer to Mr. Chamberlain's compromise proposals. Then, when Mr. Lyttelton was put up to speak instead of Mr. Balfour, the storm burst.

Except when Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman taunted him with being the sole cause of the disorder and Mr. Balfour flashed rather an angry reply the Premier was most composed throughout the sitting. Mr. Lyttelton also showed the greatest self-possession in his difficult position. Standing at the Treasury table, flushed but immobile, times out of number he essayed to speak, always beginning: "The Prime Minister," and always being shouted down with cries of "Balfour!" "Balfour!" "Let him defend his own honor," "Let him fight his own battles," &c.

Whenever the storm showed signs of subsiding the Irish members joined in, renewing the hubbub.

The Liberal leaders after the adjournment of the House held a conference, and it is expected that a vote of censure on Premier Balfour will be moved to-morrow by Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman.

ROYAL ENGAGEMENT OFF.

Prince Victor Napoleon Not to Marry a Belgian Princess.

TURIN, May 22.—Prince Victor Napoleon to-day received the Bonapartist leaders at Castle Moncalieri and informed them that his projected marriage with the Princess Clémentine of Belgium had been abandoned.

JAPANESE STRIKERS AWED.

Hawaiian Troops and Police, with Field Piece, Occupy Court House.

HONOLULU, May 22.—The steamer Kinau, which yesterday carried a company of militia and a force of police to Lahaina, on the Island of Maui, where Japanese strikers had become violent, returned to-day.

The situation at Lahaina has quieted down. The soldiers and police, with a field piece, are occupying the Court House in readiness for action. Sixty special deputy sheriffs are also on duty.

The Japanese have forced the Korean laborers to strike, threatening to kill them if they continue to work.

It is stated that the Japanese objected to the head overseer because he is a Russian.

High Sheriff Henry intends to occupy the camps of the strikers and to arrest the ringleaders.

KAISERIN'S ANKLE SPRAINED.

Her Fall Downstairs More Serious Than at First Reported.

WIESBADEN, May 22.—The accident to Empress Augusta Victoria, who fell downstairs yesterday, appears to have been more severe than was at first reported. It is announced that the Empress will not leave Wiesbaden for Berlin until Thursday.

An unofficial version of the accident says the Empress sprained her right ankle besides sustaining a cut on her forehead, which will probably leave a slight scar.

Her Majesty suffers from occasional attacks of vertigo, and to this is attributed her loss of balance on the stairs.

Will Not Consult Her Regarding New Abyssinian Plan.

Special Cables to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 22.—The information which I cabled to you on Saturday to the effect that negotiations were proceeding between France, England, and Italy to conciliate their respective interests in Abyssinia is published here to-day, but the erroneous statement is added that France will submit the text of the agreement to Germany.

The French Government will not consult Germany on the matter at all, more especially as Germany has taken independent measures for safeguarding her interests in Abyssinia.

FOR PRINCESS ROSPIGLIOSI.

Martinelli Reports in Favor of Annulling Her First Marriage.

ROME, May 22.—The Congregation of the Propaganda to-day discussed the report presented by Cardinal Martinelli, formerly Papal Delegate to the United States, on the case of the Princess Rospigliosi, who was Miss Marie Jennings Reid of New Orleans and Washington, D. C., and who asks for the annulment of her first marriage with Col. F. H. Parkhurst of Bangor, Me. The report is favorable to the Princess.

The Princess, who is a Catholic, was divorced in 1898 from Col. Parkhurst, who is a Protestant, and in 1901 was married here to Prince Rospigliosi, brother of the Commandant of the Papal Noble Guard. The ceremony was a civil one, and the Catholic Church refused to recognize the marriage.

When the Prince first applied to the Congregation of the Propaganda for recognition of his wife's divorce in the United States the Church declined to recognize it, but Mgr. Chapelle, who married Miss Reid to her first husband, afterward testified before the Congregation that the first marriage was irregular according to the laws of the Church.

Last March Cardinal Gotti, Prefect of the Propaganda, instructed Cardinal Martinelli to report on the case.

CHOATE'S GIFT TO ENGLAND.

Memorial Window to John Harvard in London Church Unveiled.

LONDON, May 22.—Ambassador Choate this afternoon unveiled a memorial window to John Harvard in St. Saviour's Church, Southwark, in the presence of a large gathering, including the members of the American Embassy, Mrs. Joseph Chamberlain, and Henry Norman, M. P.

The Ambassador, in presenting this, his parting gift to Great Britain, said he desired to signalize his long residence and work in Great Britain and thought there was no more fitting manner than, as a loyal son of Harvard, to dedicate a window to John Harvard in a church so closely identified with the founder of the great American university.

The Archbishop of Canterbury, in accepting the gift, said that when the story came to be told to future generations it would be recorded that no one had done more to knit the strands of friendship between the two countries than Mr. Choate. He was happy to think that all the work done for American colleges was done as well for Great Britain, and that all the work of British colleges was done as well for Americans.

This was Mr. Choate's last public function in England.

The American flag floated over the Southwark Church during the ceremony.

McMANUS VS. PLUNKITT.

Assemblyman Says He Will Lead Fight Against the ex-Senator.

Assemblyman Thomas J. McManus, "The" McManus, has decided to fight for the leadership of the Fifteenth Assembly District against ex-Senator Plunkitt. He said so last night at the meeting of the Business Men's Association of the Fifteenth Assembly District, when he denied that he was under any obligations to ex-Senator Plunkitt, and that, if anything, ex-Senator Plunkitt was under obligations to him. It was voted to form a permanent organization and to elect officers at the next meeting.

An invitation had been sent to Assemblyman McManus to attend the meeting, in which it was said its purpose was "to bring back into the fold many of our neighbors, who have gradually drifted from our ranks, until the dissension is now the source of common gossip. The district has always been a Democratic stronghold, but its late performances indicate a growing dissatisfaction in our quarter."

There was some dissatisfaction even in the meeting. Some one shouted out when McManus's name was mentioned as their champion:

"He's Plunkitt's man."

The Chairman and others hastened to deny this, and Assemblyman McManus took the floor.

"I am no man's man," he said. "It is charged that I am under obligations to Senator Plunkitt. So far from being true is that that I can even say that Senator Plunkitt is under obligations to me. If you select me as the man to make the fight there is no reason why I should not fight to the fall of the hammer."

Leaves Customs Service at Eighty-four

It was announced yesterday at the Appraiser's Stores that James W. Fowler, a clerk in the Second Division, had resigned. Mr. Fowler was a Police Justice in this city about twenty years ago, but he had been in the customs service for ten years or more. He is eighty-four years old, but is still in vigorous health. He recently broke an arm, however, and decided to retire from active life.

Apologists for "mercerized cotton" in clothing claim that such fabrics wear as well as all-wool of similar weight.

It is not true. They may wear as long; if the proportion of cotton is large, they may wear longer; a pair of cotton jeans trousers will probably outwear your all-wool, two to one. If you want mere durability, buy jeans.

But don't expect all-wool looks from cotton "mercerized" or any other. Whatever cotton your clothes contain will show; you won't need an expert to point it out to you after a month's wear.

You'll get out of your clothes just as much wear, and just the kind of wear, the maker puts into them, and no other.

We put all-wool and silk into ours; the label is the sign of it; a small thing to look for, a big thing to find.

HINDU PLAGUE VICTIMS 750,000 IN FIVE MONTHS

Official Figures Given by Indian Secretary Brodrick.

THE DEATHS ARE INCREASING

Those in April Numbered 215,961—Twenty Thousand Died in the Punjab in a Week.

LONDON, May 22.—Three-quarters of a million people have already died from the plague in India this year, according to figures furnished by Indian Secretary Brodrick in the House of Commons this afternoon.

The mortality from Jan. 1 to April 1 was 471,744, while 215,961 more succumbed in the four weeks ending April 29.

It is evident that the mortality this year will far exceed even the appalling figures for last year. In a recent editorial article The Lancet said:

"In 1903 the number of deaths from plague in India was 853,009; in 1904 it was 1,040,000. Of that number, more than 850,000 occurred in the Province of Punjab, from which some of our best Indian soldiers are recruited. Consider the possible significance of a fact like this upon the efficiency of our Indian Army.

"The Punjab is not a large province, its actual population being about 20,000,000, or only two-thirds that of England, and yet the deaths in the Punjab during 1904 from plague amounted to over 250,000 in the course of twelve weeks only.

"We believe that these figures, which have been published before, have never ben contradicted, though they seem incredible."

The Lancet strongly urged the necessity of more effectual efforts to cope with this calamity. In one week in the Punjab this year the mortality was 20,000.

17 BURIED IN TUNNEL.

Firedamp Causes Explosion in Work Under Styrian Mountain.

VIENNA, May 22.—Seventeen men are believed to have been killed this morning by an explosion caused by firedamp in a railway tunnel being bored under Bosruck Mountain, Styria.

The explosion occurred in the lower galleries on the southern side of the tunnel. There were seventeen men in the tunnel at the time, and it is feared that all have perished.

Several attempts at rescue were made, but all of them failed, the rescue parties being overcome by the fumes of the gases. The completed portion of the tunnel was not damaged.

POWERS TO WARN GREECE.

She Has Been Secretly Supporting the Bands in Macedonia.

VIENNA, May 22.—It became known to-day in diplomatic circles that the powers signatory to the Berlin treaty of 1878 had decided to protest in a collective note to Greece against her proved secret official support of the aggressive Grecian bands in Southern Macedonia.

Greece will be decisively warned.

BAD BREAK IN MARKET; SELLING WELL HIDDEN

Some Attribute It to Lawson, Others to Northwest Situation.

LOWEST PRICES OF YEAR

Great Northern Preferred Off 10 Points, Northern Pacific 7½, Amalgamated 3 Under Saturday.

There was a bad break in the stock market yesterday, with the selling sources hidden enough to arouse a good deal of interest. When Amalgamated Copper was forced three points under Saturday's figure Thomas W. Lawson's friends asserted that his "panic" advertisement of yesterday morning had had its effect.

Some observers declared that the abandonment of belief that a successful plan of harmony could be worked out for the Northwest railroad systems was responsible in large part for the break. They pointed to such breaks as 7½ in Northern Pacific, more than 10 points in Great Northern preferred, 4 points in Northwestern, and so on. Meanwhile United States Steel preferred came down 2 points.

The trouble came in the afternoon, after a rather uneventful morning. Almost every stock on the list reached the lowest prices of the year, and there was absolutely not a ray of light to guide the perplexed speculators out of the darkness. The selling was generally accounted to be persistent liquidation, even though a good deal of the business was done by prominent members of the bear party. Traders, however, had a lurking suspicion that the selling of the bear leaders did not originate with them, but rather represented orders from other quarters and that the stock thus sold was really long stock.

In the first morning hour it looked as if the market would have a substantial rally. Prices advanced with ease and the trading element thought it would last, and took the bull side. "This," they said, "is the answer to Lawson." The meaning was that the Bostonian's advertisement would be met by the rich group of capitalists called by him "The System" by the placing of strong support in the market in order to make Lawson appear ridiculous. But it soon turned out that the buying had been mainly for London account, where shorts were covering contracts put out last week. London had been closed on Saturday and their sales of Friday showed a good profit. When the London buying was over the market once more developed a heavy tone and soon was again swayed by a new wave of liquidation.

Much mystery surrounded the origin of the selling orders. Even the floor traders, who are generally very quick to "size up" the character of the market, were puzzled by it. The selling orders seemed to come up like mushrooms. Specialists in the early morning had few orders to sell on their books, but later in the day these orders seemed to make their appearance from everywhere.

MAY WHEAT HAS 4-CENT JUMP.

Closes at $1.01—Corn Up 6 Cents on Scare for Shorts.

CHICAGO, May 22.—Covering by frantic shorts to-day caused a sensational advance of 6 cents a bushel in the price of corn for May delivery and of 4 cents in the price of May wheat.

Rumors of an attempt to corner all corn for May delivery started the advance. Part was lost on profit taking. At the close May corn was up 4½ cents, May wheat 3 cents, and July oats ½ cent.

The wheat market opened extremely strong, with active demand for the May delivery. The weather was again disappointing. In addition, wheat prices at Liverpool were higher.

The May option appeared to be in strong hands, and efforts of shorts to dislodge offerings failed until the price had been bid up to $1.03. Meantime July advanced to 89¾. On the four-cent advance in May there was enough profit taking to cause a considerable reaction. The market, however, closed firm, with May at 1.01. The final quotations on July was 88¾.

The volume of trading in the cornpit, while the price was making the upward leap of 6 cents, was extraordinarily small, it being estimated at not over 100,000 bushels. There was no apparent pressure put on the May shorts, who seemingly had convinced themselves that they were in a bad predicament. All that the leading longs had to do was to refuse to sell until the price had jumped to 59 within half an hour of the start. Then the liberal profits in cash started moderate liquidation, and a reaction followed. May closed firm at 56⅞. July closed at 48, a net gain of ¼ cent.

EQUITABLE MEETING, MAY 31.

Directors Will Then Receive Report of Frick Committee.

The call was sent out yesterday for a meeting of the Equitable Life Directors to be held on May 31. This is the regular quarterly meeting of the board, but special interest attaches because the report of the Frick investigating committee will be made at that time.

Superintendent Hendricks of the State Insurance Department came back to the city yesterday to begin again the taking of oral testimony from Equitable Life officers. It is expected that Gage E. Tarbell, the Second Vice President of the society, will be the next witness. There was no session in either investigation yesterday, and because of the continued silence of the attorneys of the various warring factions, the peace talk that has been in the air for a couple of weeks became more definite. It was said that William Nelson Cromwell, who came into the Equitable affair last week as a general mediator, was well in control of the negotiations for a settlement. No confirmation in official quarters was obtained.

DODGE-MORSE CASES OVER.

Nicoll to Plead for Dismissal of Hummel Indictments To-day.

A postponement until this morning, at the request of counsel for both sides, was granted by Justice Davy in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court yesterday when the cases against ex-Judge Edgar L. Fursman, Jr., Abraham Hummel, and Benjamin Steinhardt were called. All three defendants are under indictments in connection with the Dodge-Morse divorce tangle.

To-day De Lancey Nicoll of counsel for Hummel will move for a dismissal of the three indictments pending against his client on the ground that they have been rendered illegal by the fact that Hummel was compelled to testify before the Grand Jury after the District Attorney had already filed charges against him with the Bar Association with a view to his disbarment.

SCHOOLGIRL ILL FROM WINE.

Aged Twelve, She Is in Bellevue with Alcoholic Gastritis.

Suffering from alcoholic gastritis, a twelve-year-old school girl was admitted last night to Bellevue Hospital. The girl is Christina Hafziger of 212 East Twenty-eighth Street.

John Hafziger, her father, said his daughter entered the house shortly after 8 o'clock. She was dazed, and told him she had been out with some friends who had given her wine. She became hysterical and her mother and brother held her in bed.

Detectives and agents of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children are trying to find the person who gave the girl the wine. The hospital authorities believe that she will recover.

CROWD AT REVIVAL AT CITY HALL STEPS

Heads Bared and Hands Raised at Preacher's Call.

CHEERS FOR THE PRESIDENT

Tribute to Roosevelt, Named as God-Fearing Man—Many Who Go to Scoff Stay to Pray.

Before the steps of the City Hall yesterday afternoon during the luncheon hour, when the skyscraping offices were being emptied of their busy occupants, 1,500 persons gathered to witness the beginning of the Summer campaign of religious revival. This has been long planned by the United Protestant ministers of New York.

Many who were attracted by the strange sight, and stopped to look and then scoff, later stayed to pray. There were all sorts in the crowd—well-dressed men of evident prosperity next to park benchers who seldom have a dime; young women, who earn their living in the neighboring offices, clerks, young and old; even the shrill-voiced newsboy, who forgot his proneness to tumult, understood that it was not a circus, and was still interested.

There were two striking incidents in the services. One came when the crowd was asked to show its belief in the Saviour. Nearly all of the men lifted their hats and the women their hands. The second came when President Roosevelt was referred to as a God-fearing citizen. The crowd greeted this with cheers, and the newsboys whistled ear-splittingly.

The meeting was held by permission of Borough President Ahearn, on the steps of the City Hall, where he and the municipal authorities were thanked and praised for their good-will for a good cause. It was called to order by a bugler of the Salvation Army, who attracted the audience by playing on a cornet "Nearer, My God, to Thee." The Rev. Dr. C. L. Goodell presided. Other clergymen present were the Rev. Drs. R. F. Schoffler, D. Asa Blackburn, W. C. Bitting, J. B. Ely, Frank Mason North, W. W. White, Mottet, and J. Ross Stevenson, and A. J. Fitkin, Chairman of the committee in charge of the Tent Mission.

The services began with the singing of the two hymns, "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name" and "Never Weary." The Rev. Dr. Stevenson of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church led in prayer, and was followed by Miss Blanche Hollingshead and the Rev. F. H. Jacobus, who sang a duet. The Rev. Dr. C. L. Goodell of the Calvary Methodist Church was the first speaker. He said in part:

"We begin this series of meetings in the city for the comfort of men's hearts. Nearly all of the Protestant churches are interested, and nothing in late years has brought the churches so closely together. Yet we have not lost our characteristic faith. We stand shoulder to shoulder in a great cause. Looking out at the needs of this surging city and looking again into each other's faces we say, 'If what is in my heart is what is in my heart give me thy hand.'

"We meet on historic ground. Here Washington gathered his forces and read the Declaration of Independence. He thought he was founding a Christian country, and I venture to say for the manly man now in the White House that nothing gives us more confidence in him than the knowledge that he is a godly man, ever ready to speak out for God.

"Up these steps have come many to honor, or to shame, but we are never so safe as when the Mayor and the Board of Aldermen are acting on Christian principles. Especially in this place we should realize the honor that lies in God's service and the shame in turning away from Him. Some say the clergy are not interested in the masses. God help us if this is true, help us to change. Those behind me are profoundly interested in the saving of human souls. We don't ask you to join any particular church, but to give your hearts to God."

Dr. Carson of the Central Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn, said that Roosevelt had been wise enough to see the trend of the times. He was cheered when he said:

"If he had stayed Secretary of the Navy he might still occupy that office. But he placed himself in the current that led him up San Juan Hill, the Capitol at Albany, and the White House at Washington.

"As a result of it all he is, by all except the bosses he abhors, the best loved President since Abraham Lincoln.

"We must get into the line of divine tendency. From these steps many men have been honored. I ask you to honor the Man of Nazareth. Hats off for Jesus Christ."

Nine out of ten men took off their hats at once, the women raising their hands.

SMALL FIRE ON FERRYBOAT.

Bales of Jute Ablaze on Board the Tuxedo.

Bales of jute on a truck belonging to the Fuller Express Company of 188 Chambers Street, which was on the Erie Railroad ferryboat Tuxedo, caught fire yesterday morning while the Tuxedo was on her way from Jersey City to Chambers Street. The crew quickly laid lines of hose, and the fire was held in check until the ferryboat was run into her slip. There the flames were extinguished.

As the ceiling and sides of the compartment in which the truck was are sheathed with metal the damage to the Tuxedo was slight. A match, carelessly thrown, is supposed to have caused the blaze.

There was little excitement among the passengers.

Fixes Staten Island Ferry Salaries.

Mayor McClellan has signed the resolution of the Board of Aldermen fixing the salaries of the Superintendent and Assistant Superintendent of the Staten Island ferry when its operation shall have been begun by the city. The Superintendent is to get $4,000 a year. The Dock Commissioner has power to increase this to $5,000. The assistant is to receive $2,500, which may be increased to $3,500. Both places are to be outside the classified civil service.

SECRETARY SHAW AIDS ECLIPSE EXPEDITIONS

Instruments to be Returned to Country Free of Duty.

LAW SET ASIDE TO HELP

No Unpacking of Apparatus Bound Abroad for Observation of Eclipse of Sun in August.

On the ground that the expeditions to be made this Summer under the auspices of American universities and scientific societies to view the eclipse of the sun on Aug. 30 are for the purpose of advancing knowledge, Secretary of the Treasury Shaw has issued a special ruling to help the observers. Collector Stranahan received instructions in the matter yesterday.

W. W. Campbell, director of the Lick Observatory, recently sent a communication to Secretary Shaw, asking that permission be given to the Collector of this port to examine and document a large amount of scientific apparatus to be used in observing the eclipse. Under the auspices of the Lick Observatory, three expeditions are to be made to parts of the world where the eclipse will be total, namely, to a point near Cortwright, Labrador, to Northeastern Spain, and to a point near Assuan, Egypt.

Included in the apparatus to be taken out are tenses, prisms, mirrors, telescopes, clocks, photograph apparatus and materials, tents, mechanics' tools, and other necessaries. Some of this apparatus is to be taken from the United States Naval Observatory at Washington, some from Harvard University, and some from Princeton.

The director said that he would ship some of this late in May, and two expeditions will start on July 6 from this port. He asked, also, that upon the return of the expeditions the instruments might be shipped in bond direct to various destinations, because an examination in New York, on account of the unpacking and repacking, would involve great danger to the sensitive apparatus.

Secretary Shaw has instructed Collector Stranahan to make the request of examination and documentation, in order that the instruments may be brought back without a payment of duty.

The Secretary says that under ordinary circumstances a duty would have to be charged, because the goods were manufactured abroad, and the laws require the collection of duty at every importation, whether the goods have ever been collected for before or not. But inasmuch as the expeditions are for the purpose of advancing knowledge, the department makes a special ruling and permits their certification and subsequent re-entry free.

The Collector has also been notified that Prof. John A. Miller of Kirkwood Observatory, Bloomington, Ind., assisted by Prof. W. A. Cogshall, will take out an expedition to Spain to observe the eclipse, and the necessary instruments are to be documented in a like manner for this party. It is expected that application will be made by many institutions and private observers for the same privileges.

BRIDEGROOM OF AN HOUR FREE

Sentence on Stewart, Charged with Abduction, Is Suspended.

Sentence was suspended yesterday by Judge Crane in the case of Edward W. Stewart, the "bridegroom of an hour," who was convicted in the Kings County Court last week of abducting Madeline Gildersleeve, the sixteen-year-old daughter of the late Sylvester Gildersleeve, a lumber merchant. Judge Crane adopted this course only after the young man had promised that he would not interfere with annulment proceedings instituted by the young woman's family.

Stewart, who came from Ottawa, had boarded in the house with Miss Gildersleeve and her mother in Clinton Street, near Pacific Street, Brooklyn, for more than a year. He made love to Miss Gildersleeve, and asked Mrs. Gildersleeve if she would permit him to marry her daughter. Mrs. Gildersleeve said that if he would wait a few years she might give her consent.

One Sunday night Miss Gildersleeve, who had gone for a walk to Prospect Park with a friend, vanished. She and Stewart were found at the house of a mutual friend in Flatbush an hour after they had been married. Stewart was arrested.

SHIPBUILDING SUIT OFF.

Mayer's Case Against Commonwealth Trust Is Settled.

An order was entered in the Supreme Court yesterday afternoon by Justice Dugro, by which the suit of Charles W. Mayer against the Commonwealth Trust Company of New York was settled, the action dismissed and discontinued. The stipulation was signed by Clifford W. Hartridge, as attorney for Mayer, and by Francis S. Hutchins, as attorney for the Commonwealth Trust Company. In answer to a question as to the terms of settlement Mr. Hutchins said:

"As to what Judge Mayer received or failed to receive as to what the Commonwealth Trust Company gave or did not give—that is a matter I will not discuss, but am willing to be quoted as saying that the negotiations resulted in an adjustment and satisfaction of Mr. Mayer's claim against us."

It appears from the papers that the suit involved more than a million dollars. It was based upon certificates issued by the Trust Company of the Republic to the order of John W. Young and others called for the United States Shipbuilding Company's bonds, stocks, and other securities. When these certificates were not honored Mayor sued the Commonwealth Trust Company (formerly the Trust Company of the Republic) for their market value at the time of the presentation of the orders and the refusal of the trust company to honor them. The market value of the securities at this time was some $977,500, which amount was claimed, with interest.

MAGISTRATE McAVOY SAYS:

He Has Not Talked About Lawyer Levy's Corruption Charges.

City Magistrate McAvoy said yesterday that he had expressed no opinion on the testimony given in the present investigation into Lawyer Henry Levy's charges of irregularities in the Harlem Court. Mr. McAvoy will have nothing to say until the investigation is completed. He denies particularly that he has charged any police officer, lawyer, or any other person, before or since the investigation, with wrongdoing.

ALL-STEEL CAR BUILT TO PROTECT MAIL CLERKS

President Underwood of the Erie a Leader in Movement.

DEATH LIST HAS BEEN LONG

Persistent Agitation Brought Some Improvement and Car Now on Exhibition Is Next Step.

A fifty-ton all-steel car for the railway mail service—the first one ever built—is on exhibition in the yards of the Erie Railroad Company in Jersey City. Frederick D. Underwood, President of the Erie, brought about the building of it and is much pleased in consequence.

Mr. Underwood, who is greatly interested in the mechanical problems of the railway, took a personal interest in the mail car matter out of a desire to make safer the transit of valuable mail and the work of the devoted band of Government employes who perform such valuable service while flying over the rails. Incidentally it was necessary to take a hand in a controversy that had raged in the Post Office Department for many years.

Executive heads of the Railway Mail Service have long united in a demand for better conditions for the employes, pointing out appalling lists of death and injuries due to railway wrecks, in which oftentimes the mail cars were either demolished or burned. They were supported by the families and friends of the employes, but have always found a strong opposition from railway lobbyists, who have opposed various plans for strong cars on the grounds of unwieldiness and expense of building.

Heavy losses in 1903 and 1904, however, finally brought the long fight to a crisis. In ten years, including 1895 and 1904, according to figures furnished yesterday by Victor J. Bradley, Superintendent of the Railway Mail Service, 102 men were killed, 590 seriously injured, and 2,040 slightly injured in the mail cars. In 1903, 22 were killed, of whom eight were burned to death, and in 1904 21 were killed, of whom three were burned to death.

Demands that could not be ignored were made upon the Post Office Department, and it was decided that in the specifications for cars thereafter to be built would be included provision for steel plates running the length of the cars to reinforce heavy wooden girders and for other improvements that would make for safety. Improvement had reached this point when Mr. Underwood became interested.

He wrote to the postal authorities, expressing the conviction that steel cars should be demanded for the mail service, and that they could be built of sufficient strength without being much heavier than the present cars. He based his ideas on deductions from the use of all-steel cars in the freight service and offered to make the experiment in order to demonstrate his theories.

The car was built. It has been thoroughly inspected by Mr. Bradley at the Jersey City yards, and the Superintendent declared his belief yesterday that it proved the contention of the men in the service that their work could be made safe without undue expense to the companies, which build and own the cars, and without making trains too heavy.

In the new car heavy steel work at the ends, a strong steel canopy overhead, and a heavy steel underbody make it certain that the car will stand the shock of almost any collision. All the woodwork inside is fire-proofed.

HACKMAN'S DEATH A MYSTERY

Police Detain Two Lodgers in the Standard Hotel.

Under circumstances that the police regard as suspicious James Fennell, a hack driver, forty years old, met his death last night at the Standard Hotel, 449 West Forty-second Street. The police are holding Thomas White and John Moore, lodgers, until after the autopsy and examination to-day.

According to the story of John Smith, the watchman in the house, at 6 o'clock he found Fennell sitting in a chair intoxicated in the office on the second floor.

At about 6:15 Thomas White rushed up the stairs crying: "There's a dead man at the foot of the stairs!" Manager Thomas W. Pallanche found Fennell lying in the narrow hallway with a wound on his head.

To Detectives Donohue and O'Neill of the West Forty-seventh Street Station and to Coroner Scholer, White said that he was sitting on the porch when Moore came out and told him a drunken man was lying in the hall; that he had gone in, found the man was dead, and had notified Pallanche. At the station house later White denied that he had told any such story.

SHOOTS FLEEING MAN.

Policeman Wounds One of Three Accused of Attempting Burglary.

Patrick Smith, twenty-four years old, of 360 St. Nicholas Avenue, was shot early yesterday morning in West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street by Patrolman Bernard Feist of the West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street Station. Smith, who is in J. Hood Wright Hospital, probably is mortally wounded.

John Farrell of 617 West One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Street and William Jones of Philadelphia, as they described themselves, who were with Smith, were held by Magistrate Baker in $2,000 bail each on charges of attempted burglary.

Feist says that he saw Farrell and Jones enter Gunersen's saloon at 114 Manhattan Street by a rear door. Smith remained outside. Smith saw Feist, and gave a signal. His companions hurried from the saloon and the three ran. Feist followed, and shouted that he would shoot if they didn't stop. The men jeered, and Feist fired, wounding Smith.

SITTER BORROWED WATCH.

Photographer-Jeweler Has Asked Police to Find Him.

Morris Levit has a combined photograph gallery and jewelry store at 806 Tenth Avenue. Yesterday a stranger entered and said he wanted to be photographed.

"I am about to be married," he told Levit, "and I never saw the girl I'm going to marry. I want to send her my picture, and I want you to make me look as fine as you can."

The stranger asked if he could wear one of Levit's watches and chains to enhance the effect of the photograph. Levit was willing, and put the watch and chain, which he says were worth $75, on the stranger's waistcoat. Then the picture was taken.

Levit went to the back of the shop for a moment. When he returned the stranger was gone. Levit took proofs of the photograph he had taken to the West Forty-seventh Street Police Station.

CITY FATHERS PLAY BALL,

Manhattan Aldermen Beat Brooklyn in Annual Game at New Dorp.

The Aldermen of Manhattan and Brooklyn journeyed to New Dorp, Staten Island, yesterday, where they played their annual baseball game on the diamond of Alderman John Gillies of the Borough of Richmond. After five innings had been played the game was called, with the score 10 to 9 in favor of the Manhattan representatives.

Staid old Staten Island looked on aghast at the antics of the players. New and original plays were executed in every inning, and the spectators were continually thrown into spasms of delight. Alderman James Owens of Brooklyn and Alderman Patrick Kiely of Manhattan were announced as the umpires, but they frequently called on the spectators to decide the close plays. Alderman Richter of Manhattan was the life of the game. Donning a catcher's mask and perched on a beer box he essayed to cover second base. Whenever the ball came his way he immediately hid behind his beer box, which served as a breastwork. Alderman Culkin broke all records for going the bases. As he was unable to make the circuit on foot, the Brooklynites agreed to let him use a bicycle, and once he made a hit he was good for a home run every time, but unfortunately the hit was not forthcoming.

Among the interested spectators were J. J. Timlan of the Board of Buildings, C. V. Fornes, President of the Board of Aldermen, and George Cromwell, President of Richmond Borough. Mayor George B. McClellan was unable to be present, but sent his secretary, John J. O'Brien, as his representative.

After the game about 200 Aldermen sat down to a dinner served in the Phoenix Hotel. Several speeches were made, and the affair did not end until late in the evening. The score:

LAY FLAT UNDER AUTO.

Little Girl's Presence of Mind Saved Her Life on Street.

With rare presence of mind, four-year-old Rose Murphy saved herself from probable death yesterday morning when she was run down by an automobile in front of her home at 552 West Forty-ninth Street, by flattening herself, face downward, between the wheels of the car, and in this way escaping with a few scratches and a torn dress when the machine passed over her.

Rose was skipping a rope with other children in front of her home, when a big touring car, driven by Harry Graff, 33 years old, of 11 West Sixty-fifth Street, ran along. In running to get out of the way Rose's feet got tangled in the rope and she fell directly in the path of the automobile. Before Graff could slacken speed the big car was upon the girl. In the second or two that elapsed from the time she fell till the automobile was upon her, Rose stretched herself flat with her face pressed into the pavement. The radiating coil, in front of the hood of the automobile, which was within eight inches of the ground, caught Rose's shoulders, and tore her dress down her back and inflicted a few scratches and bruises on her body. When the car had passed over she jumped up as alive as ever, although badly scared. An ambulance took her to the Roosevelt Hospital, but after her injuries were treated she was able to return home.

MAN GOFF FINED IS ILL.

Arrested for Intoxication, Taken Sick in Cell, in Serious Condition.

Clarence Belden, the real estate man, of 71 East One Hundred and Sixtieth Street, who was fined $50 last week by Recorder Goff for alleged intoxication while serving as foreman of a jury, is very ill in the Harlem Hospital.

Belden was arrested on Eighth Avenue on Saturday night and locked up on a charge of intoxication. In the Harlem Court on Sunday morning he was sentenced to six months in jail by Magistrate Baker. The man's identity was not then known.

Later in the day Belden became violently ill in his cell in the court prison. Dr. Burns responded to an ambulance call that had been sent to the Harlem Hospital, and with the Warden and several attendants worked hard over Belden for a long time. He was at last brought to semi-consciousness and was removed to the hospital.

At the hospital yesterday it was said Belden's trouble was not altogether due to drink, that he had heart and other ills. Although the chances were said to be in favor of his recovery, the hospital officials would not admit it was assured.

Monkey Born in Central Park.

For the first time in five years a monkey has been born in the Central Park menagerie. The monkey is now about four days old, and was exhibited for the first time yesterday. It is of the mocaque breed, and is one of the rarer species. The new animal has been named Jacob, after Jacob Cook, keeper of the Primate House.

POLICE NEED SYMPATHY OF CITIZENS, HIS PLEA

Lack of It If Politics Controls, Says Washington Chief.

HOW PREACHERS CAN HELP

Ought to Teach Obedience to Law—New Identification Bureau Plan Offered to Chiefs' Conference.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—A plea for more cordial public support for the police as an aid to efficiency was a feature of the address of Major Sylvester, Chief of the Washington police, as President, before the International Association of Chiefs of Police, in twelfth annual convention here to-day. About 200 delegates attended.

Where politics influence police control, he said, there is want of appreciation on the part of the citizens, so desirable and necessary to maintain good police management.

Among the recommendations he made was one that the National Bureau of Criminal Identification, which is operated at private expense, be conducted by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, who have indicated a willingness to assume charge of the bureau and afford identifications and information to legally constituted Police Departments free of expense, provided the plant as it stands is turned over to them and the Police Departments of the various cities will contribute photographs and measurements in return for the service rendered.

Major Sylvester declared:

"Those least informed, the ignorant and revengeful, glory and delight in attempting and encouraging the downfall of the police, in a large measure cherishing the idea that the police glory and delight in interference and arrests."

The police, he contended, were not seeking trouble, but if they found it their sworn duty was to stay it by fairness, firmness, and force if necessary. He argued that if the citizens would do their part in assisting and encouraging the members in rendering a proper duty, it would go a long way toward elevating the standard of efficiency and increasing the happiness and comfort of all.

He charged parents with being largely responsible for the mistakes of children, and the preacher, he said, was neglectful who did not teach obedience to the law and respect for its proper enforcement. As far as the policeman was concerned he was wanting in good qualities if he failed to consider the undeveloped mental capacity of the child or the frailty of the mind diseased.

On motion of Chief Whitaker of Dayton, Ohio, Major Sylvester's recommendations were referred to a special committee.

ROBBERY AFTER SUICIDE.

Man Took Revolver from Dead Saloon Keeper's Hand and $25 from Till.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, May 22.—Frederic Hanness, twenty-one years old, when arrested to-day admitted that he had taken $25 from the till in Albert Schillig's saloon just after Schillig had committed suicide by shooting himself in the saloon early yesterday morning.

Hanness was leaning against the bar when the saloon keeper killed himself, and while Mrs. Schillig ran to summon her son, who was asleep in a rear room, Hanness took the revolver from the dead man's hand and ran. An investigation showed that the till had been rifled and that there were bloody finger prints upon it. Suspicion of theft at once fell upon Hanness.

When he was arrested and confronted with the blood-stained money drawer to-day he broke down and admitted his guilt. He said that he had spent the money on clothes. Mrs. Shillig saw her husband commit suicide.

TOWNSEND DIVORCE SUIT UP.

Wife Suing in Rhode Island Alleges Non-Support and Intemperance.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., May 22.—The divorce suit of Mrs. Pauline Onativia Townsend against John R. Townsend came up in the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court to-day. The case was presented on deposition, in which it was asserted that the petitioner was married to respondent on Oct. 9, 1889, and that he had neglected and refused to provide for her since 1902.

The trouble, it was alleged, grew out of the husband's intemperate habits. There is a fourteen-year-old son, supported by the mother.

Jose Onativia of New York, brother of Mrs. Townsend, and Robert W. Taylor, an uncle of Mr. Townsend, testified as to his intemperate habits. The court reserved decision.

HARLAN CHAMPIONS NEGRO.

Chides Presbyterian Assembly—Vote for Cumberland Union.

WINONA LAKE, Ind., May 22.—Justice John M. Harlan of the United States Supreme Court came out strongly as champion of the negro in a debate to-day which was started by the report on missions for freedmen to the Presbyterian General Assembly this afternoon. He said:

"The glib talk about growing criminality among the negroes comes from people who want to keep up race prejudice. In proportion to numbers there are no more negro criminals than white.

"Let us find nowhere in the reports or deliberations of the General Assembly anything of the 'criminality of the negro.'"

In the report it was shown that the freedmen had contributed $106,155.63 to the support of their own churches and schools during the year.

The Rev. W. A. Alexander, negro, of Brooklyn, declared that much of the criminality among negroes was due to taking them into police courts and prisons for trivial offenses. The negro race was growing in its power to deliberate.

The Resolutions Committee report on marriage and divorce was adopted. Fourteen denominations are united in the movement to have preachers refuse to perform the marriage ceremony for any divorced person except the innocent party to a decree on scriptural grounds.

The rule, as adopted, forbids the marriage of even the innocent party to a divorce until a year has passed. Dr. Charles Dickey of Philadelphia said that when men and women rushed from the divorce court to the marriage altar they were not innocent.

The resolutions of the committee were adopted with no reference to criminality.

The Cumberland Presbyterian Church was voted into the General Assembly amid a storm of applause, without a speech and without a dissenting vote. The action restores to the denomination a branch that went out because of the agitation against negro slavery.

The proposition to allow the formation of seperate presbyteries in the boundaries of old presbyteries was adopted with but one dissenting voice. This is to allow separate presbyteries for negroes and foreigners.

Special to The New York Times.

FORT WORTH, Tex., May 22.—At the General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church to-day the Committee on Sunday Observance reported facts submitted by fifty-two of eighty-two presbyteries, showing that disregard for the Sabbath is on the increase. Sunday travel and Sunday newspapers were deplored, and disregard of the day was cited as the cause of disastrous railroad wrecks. A conference looking to a remedy of the matter was proposed.

ASK SENATE TO EXPEL SMOOT.

Baptist Society Calls Upon Congress to Act Against Mormonism.

ST. LOUIS, May 22.—At to-night's meeting of the American Baptist Publication Society the report of the Committee on Resolutions, which contained a strongly worded resolution denouncing Mormonism and asking for the expulsion from the United States Senate of Reed Smoot of Utah, was adopted. The resolution was as follows:

"Whereas, The recent Congressional investigations have shown that the Mormon hierarchy is openly defying the laws, both State and National; therefore, be it resolved, That we urge upon Congress the necessity of radical action for the removal of the manifest evils of Mormonism; Resolved, That we call upon the United States Senate to expel Reed Smoot of Utah from that body as unworthy of membership."

JURY FOR DUNCAN YOUNG.

His Third Trial for the Eberhardt Murder Begins.

A jury was secured late yesterday afternoon in the Supreme Court, Criminal Branch, to try Duncan Young for the third time for murder in the first degree. He killed George Eberhardt in 1897.

The first trial ended in a conviction, but a new trial was granted on a technicality. On similar grounds Young's second conviction was set aside.

Justice Davy is presiding at Young's third trial; Assistant District Attorney Ely is prosecuting, and Lewis S. Chandler defends Young.

Eberhardt, the wardman, was in exile, working up the case against the prisoner, and was an important witness at the previous trials. His testimony will be lacking this time.

Strang's Triple and Ames's Single Wins Twelve-Inning Game.

For twelve innings yesterday the New Yorks and Pittsburgs struggled in a neck and neck race for supremacy, and the honors finally went to the champions by a score of two to one. No more exciting contest has been witnessed in this city for a long time, and the unusually large Monday's attendance was highly enthused over the stubbornness of the play and the fact that the victory had gone to the team that fairly won it.

The end came in a surprising manner, and many believe that New York's success was due to a well-designed plan of Manager McGraw. Gilbert was the first man at the bat, but after a strike had been called on him by Umpire Klem he objected strenuously to the decision and took his position immediately on the plate. Of course, Gilbert was not only removed from the game, but ordered off the field. Strang succeeded him and the second ball pitched he hit to the "bleachery" fence at left field for three bases. The spectators at once rose in their seats and all seemed to shout at once. Ames then appeared at the bat, but he gave but little encouragement to either the "rooters" or his team mates that he would connect with the puzzling delivery of Flaherty. He had secured his base once on called balls, but in his other attempts he was thrown out at first. Furthermore, he had participated in six full games and had not made a safe hit. This time, however, he made a fine hit to right field, scoring the winning run amid the wildest excitement. Then it dawned upon the minds of many of the experienced "rooters" that the substitution of Strang for Gilbert was nothing more than a finely executed coup, which was instigated by the astute manager of the champions.

Ames scored his seventh successive victory of the season, but notwithstanding his brilliant efforts he was mainly responsible for the solitary run scored by the champions in the first inning. Manager Clarke reached first base on a poor throw by Dahlen, and got to second on Beaumont's sacrifice. A wild pitch sent him to third, and quite surprisingly Ames made another wild pitch which allowed the runner to cross the plate. After this, however, the men who secured their bases were few and far between. Only four safe hits were made off his delivery, and he gave but one base on called balls. Eleven men struck out, Wagner failing twice. Little Flaherty, the left-handed pitcher of the Pittsburgs, also did excellent execution, but the bunches of hits in the fifth and twelfth innings saved the game for the New Yorks.

The New York players were inclined in the early part of the game to question Umpire Klem's decisions on balls and strikes, and Mertes and Gilbert went so far as to step away from the plate. Flaherty quickly pitched good balls and in each instance the batsmen were declared out. There were few exceptions taken to the same umpire's decisions after this.

Hogg's Pitching Enables New York to Shut Out Detroit.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, Mich., May 22.—Detroit was shut out by 3 to 0 to-day, through the good work of Pitcher Hogg, who was hit safely but twice in eight innings, and who struck out eight men in the same length of time. Hogg replaced Griffith, who was removed after pitching one ball to the first batter in the second inning for protesting when the umpire called it a ball. It was just as well for New York that Griffith went out, as Mullin pitched finely for the locals, while the veteran did not look very good in his one inning.

New York scored a run in the fourth on singles by Anderson and Chase, the latter's drive putting Anderson at third, and a long fly by Yeager. The other runs were made in the eighth. Keeler singled and Fultz and Williams struck out. Anderson went to first on called balls and Chase was safe on Coughlin's error. Yeager then hit to left field, scoring two men.

Detroit had but five men at first base during the game. Schaefer singled in the first on Griffith. Hogg passed two men with two out in the fourth, and was touched for two hits in the fifth, a bit of reckless base running preventing any chance of scoring in this latter inning. Frank Farrel, owner of the Greater New Yorks, was a spectator at the game. The score:

Buffalo Secures Early Lead Over Jersey City and Wins.

Special to The New York Times.

BUFFALO, N. Y., May 22.—Milligan pitched good ball up to the sixth inning for Buffalo to-day, and by that time the locals secured a lead big enough to win the game from Jersey City. The contest was marked by phenomenal fielding. In this respect Brockett, Halligan, Keister, and Gettman showed. A double play by Keister and Cassidy was another feature of the game. Pfanmiller pitched well in all but the second inning, when four hits for two runs were bunched on him. Wild pitch and stolen bases gave Buffalo three runs in the fifth, and a hit being made off the visiting pitcher in this inning. The score:

Special to The New York Times.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., May 22.—Eighteen hits off Fertsch and Walters to-day yielded Providence but seven runs, owing to Rochester's gilt-edged fielding. Many men were caught off bases. Rochester made nine runs off eight hits by good base running and considerable luck. The score by innings:

Special to The New York Times.

MONTREAL, May 22.—The Newarks touched up Hammond, the Montreals' junior pitcher, to-day for thirteen hits and one home run, and walloped the locals by 6 to 2. It was the thirteenth game on local grounds, and every one expected direful results. Bad luck extended to Shortstop Wiedensaul, who had a finger broken trying to catch Gatins at second. The visitors batted Hammond heavily in the second. O'Hagan kept the fans busy, as usual. Score:

OXFORD WON STAKES IN A HARD FINISH

Only II., with Mr. Ewart Up, Took the Amateur Cup in Easy Style.

FOUR CHOICES WERE FIRST

Favorites Failed in Only Two of the Six Races on a Fast Track at Belmont Park.

From the betting men's standpoint, the best racing of the meeting was provided at the Belmont Park race course yesterday, when, on a fairly fast and safe track, favorites were first in four of the six events. The success of the best-backed horses atoned for many shortcomings in the earlier days of the inaugural meeting on the new course, but another source of extreme satisfaction to the horsemen as well as the betting visitors was that in this, the sixteenth day of racing at Belmont Park, the jockeys seemed to awaken suddenly to the fact that it was not necessary to send a horse one hundred feet extra across the track, to the outside rail, to win races. The weather was sunny and pleasant, and the attendance good.

The most important race of the day was the Van Cortlandt Handicap, at seven furlongs, for three-year-olds and upward, with seven starters, including the added runner Palette, from the Boston stable. Every horse was backed, with Sparkling Star of R. T. Wilson, Jr.'s, stable the post favorite at 11 to 5, after Oxford opened first choice, with Cairngorm the next in favor. Off to a perfect start, the field hung together, heads apart, for nearly a furlong, Sparkling Star then showing in the lead, with Cairngorm at his throatlatch and Oxford a close third. The order remained the same to the bend into the stretch, where Sparkling Star fell back, and Oxford, running close to the rail, and saving a lot of ground, shot to the front, with Cairngorm then his closest competitor. In the run through the stretch Cairngorm's effort to keep pace with Sparkling Star in the first half mile told on him, and Oxford drew out to the front, and, ridden hard through the last quarter, held the lead to the end, winning by three parts of a length from Cairngorm, who beat Sparkling Star a neck, in the fastest seven furlongs of the meeting. The time was 1:26 2-5.

Another race which aroused great interest on the part of the public, though it made only modest appeal to the betting men, was the contest for the Amateur Cup, at one mile, with high weights and selling allowances prevailing. The eight starters had as riders well known and successful amateur jockeys from every point in the East where hunting and cross-country racing are popular. The presence in the saddle of Edward Ewart, attaché of the British Embassy at Washington, gave the contest added interest, Mr. Ewart being accounted one of the best gentlemen riders of England. He had the mount on W. M. Scheftel's horse, Orly II., which was the favorite throughout the betting, and which started at 6 to 5. Mr. Ewart, quite as much as Orly II., justified the betting, for the Englishman took to the "wrong way" of running in admirable style, and after trailing with Orly for a half mile made the last turn close on the rail, and, saving much distance there, sent Orly to the front as he pleased, the horse winning easily.

THE ADMINISTRATION'S "AMUSEMENT."

No little amusement has been created in the Administration at Washington and among its friends," says the statement given out from the office of the Secretary of War Sunday evening, "over the attempt to distort the facts about the Panama purchase, and especially in the attempt to show that under pressure there has been an alteration in policy."

It is a pity that appreciation of the Panama joke is confined to Administration circles. The Pittsburg steel manufacturers were not "amused" when they read the first announcement of the President's determination to buy ships and material for the canal in cheap foreign markets. Speaker CANNON did not hold his sides when he made a brief statement about the matter for publication. Senator GALLINGER was not rioting in a fit of laughter when he told a newspaper correspondent that the result of this announcement of Administration policy would be a law passed early in the next session requiring all canal supplies to be bought in this country. The leading high-tariff men and the influential advocates of the "stand-pat" policy were never more serious in their lives than they were when they learned of this new move of the Administration. They were alarmed and they showed it.

How easy it would have been for the Administration to spare these gentlemen a most anxious and unpleasant period of doubt and fear. It would have been natural, too, for Mr. ROOSEVELT to take such important men somewhat into his confidence. A reassuring word in advance, a little hint that if anything got out about the purchase of canal supplies abroad they must pay no attention to it, as nothing would really be done until Congress had a chance to tie the President's hands, would have averted the distressing consequences of an announcement of Administration hostility to the tariff for which the country and the protected interests were unprepared. It was only after the echoes of the White House proclamation began to reach Washington, it was only when the outcries and angry protests of the chiefs of the tariff-built combinations and Trusts fell upon the Executive ear that the explanation was publicly made that the order to the Panama Canal Commissioners meant nothing at all; that they would not load up with supplies bought abroad; that at most ships would be chartered, not bought. And then, when the only natural and possible inference from this modifying interpretation of the White House decision had been drawn the country over—the explanation, that is, that the terrible hubbub among the protected interests had frightened the President into a retreat—the Administration and its friends were dissolved in ecstasies of "amusement."

To say that this statement from the office of the Secretary of War is about the most transparent humbug ever handed out from any Government office would be inconsiderate. The Administration got itself into an unpleasant situation, and in the act of running away from the storm it has raised it does not cut a very dignified figure. Charity and kindness command that a reasonable latitude be allowed to the President's friends in their attempts to exhibit the incident in the most favorable light the circumstances permit. If the whole affair can be treated as a joke it will be forgotten as soon as the country has had its laugh. The trouble is, that up to the present time nobody but the Administration has seen the joke.

Evidence is not wanting that the President's decision to find a way for the Canal Commission to escape the extortions of the protected home market was not suddenly reached at the White House luncheon table on Monday of last week, but had been formed at some earlier day. The President had returned from his holiday and was at the White House on the morning of Friday, May 12. It was on the morning of May 14 that there appeared in The Ohio State Journal, a stanch Republican paper published at Columbus, a special dispatch dated "Washington, May 13," which must have excited a good deal of astonishment among the Republican readers of that newspaper. We quote the first paragraph of the dispatch:

"Tariff revision must be undertaken. It no longer can be put aside, and there is a strong probability that at the next session of Congress the Republican leaders will face the situation squarely and set about the enactment of a new law that will meet the new conditions.

At the head of this dispatch stand the words "Staff Special," indicating, we suppose, editorial correspondence. In the editorial columns of The State Journal of May 16 there appears an article with the title "Brighter Prospects for Tariff Revision," in which the editor declares that "the revival of the discussion in favor of tariff revision is a hopeful sign of the times." Tariff schedules have been made by the great protected interests, he declares, and "the protective theory has degenerated into a bulwalk for Trust aggression and extortion." Many of the Dingley rates are unnecessary for protection, he continues, and the men who control Congressional action, if they are wise, will prepare themselves to comply with the popular demand for revision. "They have reposed in fancied security so long that it may require something of an earthquake to arouse them to their real duty," says this Republican tariff reformer. "But events are shaping themselves in a way that seems certain to compel the consideration of tariff revision whether the Aldriches, Forakers, and Grosvenors like it or not."

This is pretty stiff doctrine for a Republican newspaper printed in the State of Ohio. It shows genuine courage. Those who consider the circumstances of the publication may conclude that it shows something else. The Washington dispatch of the 13th and the editorial article of the 16th contain pretty strong internal evidence that the editor of The Ohio State Journal had antecedent knowledge of the Panama proclamation of Monday night, published in the newspapers all over the country on the 16th. At any rate The Journal, printed at the Ohio State capital where the Ohio Republican Convention is to be held this week, was the first Republican newspaper in the country to announce that a campaign for tariff reform was at hand. In the news sense The Ohio State Journal of the 13th has a great "beat" upon its party contemporaries. Its exclusive news was no less valuable and interesting because one week later the Administration saw fit to take the heart and soul out of it by abandoning its position and canceling the startling Panama Canal proclamation.

A PRINCIPLE AT ISSUE.

The confident hopes expressed by Chicago officials that the strike would end in twenty-four or certainly in forty-eight hours which were wired over the country during the past week do not appear to have been well founded. However, it is by no means certain that the recent outbreak of violence does not indicate that all hope of winning the strike or of making satisfactory terms has been abandoned by the strikers, and this may very well mean that wholesale desertions are imminent. The chief obstacle to "peace" at the moment appears to be the determination of the express companies to keep their promise and refuse to reinstate strikers who have remained out until this time. They will not discharge the men who, at great personal risk, have stood by them in this emergency, to restore men who have done all in their power to destroy their business and whose loyalty cannot be counted on in the future any better than it could have been in the past.

In maintaining this position the express companies are perfectly right. They should adhere to it even though the strike spread to the stopping of all business handled by union men in any branch of teaming. There is a principle involved in this conflict which the employers cannot afford to surrender for the sake of a temporary and precarious peace. We had the same issue raised in the Subway strike in this city, and the value of the example of determination set by the Interborough Company was invaluable in its moral effect. Men who leave their employments, not peacefully, but as mobs determined to maim or destroy any who venture to fill their vacated places, who maintain a reign of terror in a city, entail heavy burdens upon the Commonwealth, put all classes of citizens to grave inconvenience, and encourage, if they do not with their own hands commit, high crimes against the public peace, must understand that they are no longer useful as employés of those they have labored to destroy.

CURRENT RAILWAY EARNINGS.

The statistics of railway earnings for the current year make a very satisfactory showing. The Commercial and Financial Chronicle has made a calculation of gross earnings, operating expenses, and net earnings from Jan. 1 to April 1 which may be tabulated as follows:

MARCH.
(One Hundred and One Roads.)

	1905.	1904.	Increase.
Gross earn's..	$120,507,724	$110,277,421	$10,230,303
Operating exp'ses.	83,629,497	78,623,019	5,006,478
Net earnings ...	$36,878,227	$31,654,402	$5,223,825

JAN. 1 TO MARCH 31.
(One Hundred and Eighteen Roads.)

	1905.	1904.	Increase.
Gross earn's..	$361,025,970	$345,876,504	$15,149,466
Operating exp'ses.	268,080,973	257,085,806	10,995,167
Net earnings ...	$92,964,997	$88,810,698	$4,154,299

Our own estimates for the four weeks of April and the first week of May, given in our financial review on Sunday, show the gains in gross earnings, expressed in percentages, over the corresponding weeks of last year, as follows:

	1905.
First week April	9.87
Second week April	9.24
Third week April	9.05
Fourth week April	5.14
First week May	6.04

The reasons for the relatively low percentages of increase in the last week of April and the first week of May may be looked for in the teamsters' strike in Chicago, the backward Spring, and like causes which, it is safe to assume, are essentially temporary in their operation. However, taking everything into consideration, the railroad earnings reflect a very satisfactory condition of general prosperity. The pessimists are not without pegs upon which to hang gloomy predictions, but those optimistically inclined have the satisfaction of knowing that statistics are all in favor of a hopeful view of the immediate future and of a continued National progress.

MR. SHAW'S DECLARATION OF WAR.

We pointed out the other day that the views of Secretary SHAW, if adopted by Congress, would land us in an indefinite number of tariff wars. It is now announced by the Washington dispatches of The Sun that this is precisely the way in which these views are regarded by the President, and that he approves the views. It is even reported that

Mr. SHAW read his speech to President ROOSEVELT before leaving Washington for his Western trip, and the President made certain suggestions which led to material changes in the original draft.

Logically the ruction will begin with Germany, which has framed its tariff policy and announced it. It is the policy of a maximum and minimum tariff, the latter for the benefit of the countries that will reciprocate, the former to be enforced against all that will not grant lower rates. Our trade with Germany is larger than with any other nation except England. We tax imports from Germany very heavily, more heavily than our own goods will be taxed under the new tariff. Naturally we sell to her a good deal more than we buy from her. Most of our exports are such as cannot be "protected" at home by tariff duties on competing products of foreign countries, which is especially true of our agricultural products. If, therefore, we enter on a tariff war, it is the farmers who will suffer most. If, on the other hand, we had the sense to obtain the best terms from Germany on our exports by reducing the duties on her goods, large interests in our country would be promoted and none would seriously be injured. For the most part this reduction of duties would simply lessen the profits of industries which are now to a considerable extent in the hands of partial monopolies. It is a pity, a great pity, that the President cannot see that here is an admirable chance for him to urge his famous "square deal."

THE ROLE OF THE PEACEMAKER.

The diplomatist who tried to pick a quarrel with Lord LANSDOWNE would be a curious crank [laughter] because he would have to pick it all himself. Lord LANSDOWNE would be no party to it. Happily, so it was with Mr. HAY. Never were two statesmen more happily matched for the noble game that was intrusted to them.

These are the words in which Mr. CHOATE, at the remarkable farewell dinner given to him by the Lord Mayor, referred to the heads of the Departments of Foreign Affairs of Great Britain and the United States. The tribute to Mr. HAY appeals to all his countrymen, who are following with affectionate hope the Secretary's journey in quest of renewed health and strength. The tribute to Lord LANSDOWNE, though its justice may not be so generally recognized in our own country, is addressed to a statesman whose position at the present moment is one of immense importance, in which he may exercise decisive influence on the future of his country.

To begin with, it may be said without exaggeration that the impending election in England, the challenge of the "opinion of the people," which a short time since seemed to be immediately impending, may be deferred until the Summer of 1906 rather than incur the risk of displacing Lord LANSDOWNE in the Foreign Office. The difficulties that have presented themselves, or have threatened to arise, over the question of French neutrality have been obviously serious in themselves, and have involved considerations of policy of the utmost gravity. The whole body of the relations of Great Britain with the European Powers is affected. Great Britain has quite recently formed an alliance with Japan and arrived at a most important understanding with France, the ally of Russia. When the Japanese press made not unnatural but very heated complaint of the favors accorded to the Russian fleets at French ports, a part of the English press took up the complaint in a still more heated manner, which the French press resented, and that portion of the French press opposed to M. DELCASSE resented with especial acridity. Unquestionably, the position of the British Government was thus made difficult. Fortunately neither the French nor the Japanese Government was inclined to aggravate the difficulty, but it required all the skill, tact, and authority of Lord LANSDOWNE to handle the situation as successfully as, so far, he has handled it.

To realize how important a service this is, and how strenuous may be the need for such service in the immediate future, it must be remembered that Germany, or the official conception of German interests, so well as the weakening of the alliance of France with Russia and the aggravation of the always plentiful differences between Russia and Great Britain. Soon or late this may come about, but it is the policy of the present Government of Great Britain to defer it as long as possible and to prevent it if practicable. Peace and the greatest possible freedom of commerce are the essential aims of this policy. The alliance with Japan directly served these aims. The understanding with France also served them. A serious quarrel between Japan and France would obviously interfere with them. If it were followed by a quarrel between Great Britain and Russia, in which France was forced to take part with Russia, the injury would be immense and inevitable. If, on the other hand, in the attempt to avoid such a complication, France were alienated from Russia, and the latter were, so to speak, thrown into the arms of Germany, the mischief would also be great. The steady purpose of the British Government has been to keep the peace and to allow the present arrangements to develop gradually the pacific results of which they are believed to be capable. And to this the rare gifts and the patiently accumulated influence and authority of Lord LANSDOWNE are extremely necessary.

Were the Balfour Government to be overthrown, the Liberal Party could supply no statesman for the Foreign Office who would command the sure confidence attained by Lord LANSDOWNE. In a quiet way, it is certain that this view of the effect of a political overturn in England is having decided weight. The sober leaders of opinion in that country are not eager, to whichever party they may belong, to take with a light heart the risk of even Lord ROSEBERY in Downing Street, and he is probably the very best that could be hoped for if the Liberals came in. All of which goes to show that the rôle of the peacemaker is one success in which is worth much to a statesman and to his country.

It is interesting to learn, on the authority of so competent an observer as Prof. LOWELL, that the planet Mars experienced a heavy snowstorm on May 18 and 19. Evidently Mars is not the place where one would care to go if he found the conditions on earth intolerable. We have had no May snowstorms of consequence in this neighborhood, but if we had it would have made no great difference. The weather has been nearly as uncomfortable as the addition of snow would have made it, and our only conspicuous advantage in exemption from snow has been in the matter of greater comfort in walking. However, we have had dust in plenty, and it is open to discussion whether snow would have been as dangerous or any more uncomfortable.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Sunday Golf in Connecticut.

Greenwich is hardly a typical Connecticut town, nowadays, but still it is in the State, and its divergence from the Connecticut type is no further than would have to be to permit that any organized attempt at Sunday golf playing should be made there. The fact, therefore, that the once flourishing North Valley Golf Club of Greenwich has had its membership so reduced by the enforcement for three years of a rule against Sunday games that there are scarcely men enough left to fill the club offices comes close to demonstrating that golf cannot exist anywhere if the use of the links is not permitted throughout all seven of the week's days. It would certainly be more likely to be possible in Connecticut than in any other part of the country, for a large majority of the people there are still rather regretful that the famous "blue laws" they never had are not in force to-day. The few of them who know that those laws are the modern fruits of a humorous imagination hate to admit the fact, and the other Connecticut people cherish the legend of that precious code as a proud possession—as one proof of their noble and pious ancestry. But the North Valley Club dwindled and waned from fifty to fifteen members after the Sunday rule was adopted, and now is considering the advisability of dissolving, for the club expenses have not diminished in proportion to the loss of membership, and there are vague rumors that each of the faithful remnant has private doubts if there has been a corresponding and compensating improvement in the quality of golf played or of the golfers playing. That is sad, indeed. We do not at the moment recall whether any one of the innumerable histories of golf tells whether or not Sunday playing was the custom of its originators and their immediate followers, but in recent years it certainly has been, and at present it seems to be as nearly impossible to maintain the pleasant sport without a technical breaking of the Sabbath as it is to have horseracing without providing convenient opportunity for the spectators to make bets on the accuracy of their judgment as to the speed of the different horses. This is very saddening to some of us, while others look at it with a shocking calm.

How Japan Feeds Her Heroes.

Upon just what food the Japanese soldiers do their marvelous fighting and the exact method of its preparation and preservation can be learned from a letter which appears in London Truth. The regular ration, it says, consists of rice and dried fish. The rice is boiled until quite thick and glutinous. Next it is placed on a ceramic slab, rolled out, and cut into squares. The squares are then placed in the sun to dry and often turned. When hard as sea biscuit and greatly reduced in weight they can be stored. A certain number are allowed each day to the soldier. All he has to do is to break up a square in boiling water and to add the dried fish. In a few minutes he has what seems to him a delicious thick soup. If he cannot procure boiling water he simply eats his rice cake dry. In the fruit season he substitutes fruit, when he can obtain it, for the fish. According to the same authority, the Japanese soldier has muscles like whipcord, is a sure shot, and has an eye for landmarks and a memory for locality. He can do with three hours of sleep in a day, he is naturally cleanly, ness and intelligence, is ardently patriotic, holds his life cheap, and runs up hills like a goat. He costs the Japanese Government 10 cents a day and thinks himself well treated and well off. From all this one can learn something about the Japanese soldier, but the suggestion that it gives valuable hints as to the best way to feed white soldiers is nonsense. To thrive on a diet like that is possible only for those whose ancestors have lived in much the same way for countless generations. The American, so fed, would simply starve to death, partly because of the insufficiency of the ration to meet his needs, which are not the less real because they are the results of the long enjoyment of a more generous fare, and partly because distaste for an unmitigated diet of rice and dried fish would prevent him from getting out of those substances such nutriment as even for him they would contain. And yet, in commenting on the description, American Medicine says with entire truth that "in buckling down to discipline and philosophically accepting the hardships of war in the way of rations and sanitary requirements, the armies of the world can learn from the Japanese. Their military and medical records in this war are proof of such statement. Thousands of cases of typhoid fever among our volunteers in 1898 could have been prevented by a discerning acceptation of the stern realities of campaigning."

An Easy Road to Harmony.

To put an end to what is left of the sectional bitterness caused by the civil war, it is only necessary, according to the letter of the well-intentioned correspondent, whose letter we published yesterday, for the Southerners to admit that the cause for which they fought was wrong. That is certainly a simple plan, and nothing in the world stands in the way of its immediate execution except one little thing—the way that human beings, all of them, are built. The South, as a whole, has admitted a good many things in detail. Nobody in that part of the country has much more to say for slavery than that it was in several rather important respects advantageous to wild African savages. That it had come, or was fast coming to be, an economic fallacy is confessed by most of the Southerners; they are not disposed to vaunt the merits of slaveholding as preparation for competition by white men with other white men under modern conditions of life; they do not deny making a fatal mistake in judging both the fighting abilities and the fighting inclinations of the Northerners. What they will not do is to sum it all up in a confession that the cause was wrong. Of course, they will not, and, of course, the often-mentioned but very rarely seen "bitterness" will fade away and vanish in due time without the fulfillment of any such unreasonable expectation. The "bitterness" is now, on both sides of the old line of separation, very much a matter of good manners and bad manners. The latter, unfortunately, know no geographical limitations. Each kind of manners has been illustrated in Brooklyn within a week by Northerners whose war memories are particularly vital, and each kind had its usual result. The same thing happens in the South, with the same general significance.

FLAGS AND TOLERATION.

Contrast Between British and American Attitude Pointed Out.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your correspondent, "J. S. G." tells us that "the tribute paid in London to the Stars and Stripes is paid to the good American dollars that our tourists leave in the British capital, and not to any exuberance of friendship for Americans." This is probably true, for most of the American flags displayed in London by Englishmen appear on hotels and boarding houses, and few private British citizens trouble themselves more about these United States than they do about—for instance—Brazil, "where the nuts come from."

But is no tribute due on this side to the good British pounds sterling that come this way in payment for the merchandise which the British buy in the United States, and which forms by far the greatest part of your export trade? I have no statistics by me at the moment of writing, but I have no doubt that the excess of this country's exports to the United Kingdom over her imports from there would come to very much more than what is spent by American tourists in the British Islands.

It would, then, be quite in order for your merchants to occasionally raise a British flag as a tribute to the good British pounds, shillings, and pence which help to make them rich. But if they did they would have to raise it where their fellow-citizens could not get at it, or they would be minus a British flag before nightfall. And that is the whole matter in a nutshell. An American flag is tolerated in any part of the British Empire, and protected by law, the same as any other property, but on American soil the British flag is neither tolerated nor protected.

Bad Teeth as a Cause of Appendicitis.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In a recent article in THE NEW YORK TIMES, quoting from The London Mail, I notice that Dr. E. S. Thompson, in a lecture at Gresham College, claims that appendicitis is caused by bad teeth.

While decayed teeth may in many cases interfere with proper mastication and digestion, it is extremely doubtful if they are the cause of the alarming increase of appendicitis.

It is well known to physicians that appendicitis, in simple language, is merely a stoppage of the bowels, arising from either their sluggish condition or from impacted feces, or both.

When this occurs, fermentation is speedily set up, which leads to many bowel complications, only to be relieved by removing the obstruction, either by medication or by the use of the knife.

The above theory can be more easily understood when we reflect that nature provides but one way to nourish the system, while she has provided four ways to remove the waste material, namely: The bowels, kidneys, pores of the skin, and lungs.

I contend that sufficient instruction in the care of both the teeth and the health should be taught the children in every school, so that they could properly care for themselves, which is quite as important to both body and mind as some of their present studies, and would do much to make them more healthy men and women.

A Fifty-Ton Piece of Bronze in the Bible.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Having read recently in THE TIMES about the largest pieces of bronze cast in American foundries, I beg to call the attention of your esteemed readers to a basin of bronze cast in one piece about two thousand and nine hundred years ago. I mean "The Molten Sea," for the Solomonic temple, which had a capacity of 2,000 baths or 17,000 gallons, and measured 30 ammahs in circumference, 5 ammahs in height, and 1 taphach in thickness. Considering that one ammah equals .574 yard and one taphach equals 2.9 inches, and that the specific weight of bronze is 8.6, we find that the enormous weight of that casting was about 100,000 pounds, or 50 tons.

There may also be mentioned the two columns of bronze for the same temple, which measured 31 feet in height and over 20 feet in circumference, and weighed (as they were solid) about 40 tons each. (See the Hebrew text of First Kings, vii., 15, 23, and 24.)

The Man with the Scissors Tells of His Gleanings from The Times.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am the scissors editor of a number of out-of-town journals whose editors-in-chief are personal friends of my own. They value most highly the newspaper clippings I send them, and almost invariably reprint them.

One publication is devoted to archaeology, another to religion; one is scientific, one literary, and another medical.

I take all the New York morning and evening papers, and seldom find that I can utilize more than two or three articles published in any one, and often none.

A short time ago I found that in clipping from THE TIMES I had cut out every article on the editorial page, with the exception of some small notes and paragraphs.

As this was the most singular phenomenon that has occurred during the years that I have indulged the clipping habit I was very much surprised at my discovery. Yet the same phenomenon occurred in THE TIMES about a fortnight afterward.

I think these incidents so remarkable that I cannot refrain from informing you how in this unique respect THE TIMES is forging ahead of its competitors, but no doubt you already "know how it is yourself." And all this literary wealth for only one cent daily! I wonder how you do it!

BOWEN ASKS FOR RUSSELL.

His Successor to be Heard on Loomis Charges—Investigation Held Up.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Herbert W. Bowen, formerly Minister to Venezuela, after a conference with Secretary Taft to-day, asked that William W. Russell, the Minister to Colombia, who has been designated for the post at Caracas, be called home from Bogota as a witness in regard to Bowen's charges against Assistant Secretary of State Loomis.

As Secretary Taft cabled Mr. Russell last Wednesday to come to Washington in making the transfer to his new station at Caracas, he started to-day from Bogota, and is expected within ten days. Mr. Russell was Secretary of Legation at Caracas during the greater part of Mr. Loomis's service as Minister. He was also Secretary of Legation there during a considerable part of Mr. Bowen's residence at Caracas as Minister. The investigation is suspended until his arrival.

It is understood that Mr. Bowen will ask the privilege of cross-examining Mr. Russell. Secretary Taft said to-day that the President desired to hold the case open for all testimony thought to be essential by either side, so that when the matter was finally closed and decided there might be no question as to the final character of the finding.

John G. Dater, a New York newspaper man, who was sent to Caracas to investigate the asphalt scandal, appeared before Secretary Taft to-day. Mr. Bowen had talked, he said, not making a request that Mr. Dater publish the charges, but stated that some day he hoped to be able to get the case before the public.

ROOSEVELTIAN STANDARDS.

Strange License Accorded to Both the Words and Deeds of the President.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I should like to add my protest to that of the gentleman who objects to one ethical standard for a section of New York and another for Mr. Roosevelt. Personally I can't understand the impulse which leads any human being to find pleasure in hunting or killing animals, wild or domestic.

I consider it unethical not only to hunt animals but to eat their flesh. I can't see any justice or right in one creature using the flesh or another creature for food, nor do I believe it possible for people who eat animal food to have correct ethical ideas.

But to return to the point taken by the gentleman referred to above. Let him observe closely and he will see that the standard of which people generally are judged is not often applied to Mr. Roosevelt. Both in word and deed he is given license accorded to no one else. No matter how absurd an idea may be when expressed by another when he expresses it it becomes brilliant, wise, sacred; no matter how atrocious an act may be if done by another, when done by him it becomes permissible, commendable, just.

It is an undeniable fact that Mr. Roosevelt and his worshippers and apologists are doing more to lower the standard of the National life than any other force or agency now existing in the United States.

Vanity.

From The Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Miss Frances Keller of the Women's Municipal League of New York illustrated admirably at a recent dinner party a point which she wished to make in reply to a man who had said: "Women are vainer than men."

"Of course," Miss Keller answered, "I admit that women are vain and men are not. There are a thousand proofs that this is so. Why, the necktie of the handsomest man in the room is even now up the back of his collar."

There were six men present, and each of them put his hand gently behind his neck.

PRESIDENT WAS FIRM TO CHECK ALIEN INFLUX

May Ask Congress to Raise Head Tax from $2 to $25.

LIMIT ON NUMBER TALKED OF

This Method Considered Impracticable Because Countries Might Object to Quota Alloted Them.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—President Roosevelt is considering the idea of presenting the immigration problem to Congress as containing a serious peril and urging drastic action. Immigration this year is breaking all records. The figures indicate a total immigration for the year of over 1,000,000, or one-eightieth of the population, and most of it comes from Italy, Hungary, and Russia.

Two methods are under consideration, the limiting of the number of immigrants who can be landed in a month, and the increase of the head tax to a prohibitive figure. The latter is the proposed remedy that will likely be recommended by the President.

Immigration from Great Britain, Ireland, Sweden, Norway, Germany, and other countries furnishing desirable citizens is vanishing, and is being replaced by an enormous immigration of the least desirable class from the three countries named above.

The plan for placing an arbitrary limit on the number of immigrants who can be landed in a month is regarded as admirable if it could successfully be put into practice. The difficulty would come with the apportioning of the number of admissible immigrants among the different countries. To permit one country to send more immigrants than another would give rise to charges of discrimination, and perhaps be regarded as unfriendly by the country discriminated against.

It looks as if the immigration from each country would have to be limited to the same number, so that, for instance, Great Britain could not send any more immigrants than Italy. This is not regarded as an ideal arrangement, for the immigration from the northern and western parts of Europe is welcomed.

The increase of the head tax is looked upon with much favor by the Administration. At present it is $2, and out of the fund thus raised the expenses of the immigration inspection service are paid. The plan under consideration is to raise the tax from $2 to $25, which would be practically prohibitive in a great number of cases, and would undoubtedly reduce the immigration of the poorer classes.

A combination of both propositions is considered, and there is also talk of an educational test, but, as a high official of the Commerce Department pointed out to-day, the immigrants who can pass the educational test are frequently of the very worst class, while many immigrants who have little education are honest and intelligent.

BLUE INVADES VICKSBURG.

Ohio and Mississippi Join in Dedicating Union Monuments.

VICKSBURG, Miss., May 22.—Forty monuments erected by the State of Ohio to its soldiers who fell in the siege of Vicksburg were dedicated in the National Military Park here to-day. Gov. Herrick and his staff were present.

Gov. Herrick and Gov. Vardaman of Mississippi reviewed a procession of the Ohio and Mississippi National Guard and afterward, at the park, the dedicatory programme was carried out. Gov. Herrick delivered an address. Among other things he said:

"This great family of States, as is too often the case with other families, became estranged because of divergent opinions in regard to something inherited from the fathers—the institution of slavery—but, family like, were finally brought together around the open graves of their loved ones.

"The high standard of our citizenship will continue to be upheld and carried forward if the father of to-day does not permit the bequest of his dollars to submerge the 'spirit of '76'—a marvelous asset, which warms the blood of his boy.

"There are instances too numerous of individual, corporate, and organized oppression, but we can rely upon their correction through peaceful methods. In seeking to right the individual wrong, and there should be no delay in righting these wrongs, we should be careful to do nothing that will impair the general welfare."

DEATH RATE NEAR LOWEST.

Health Department Records Show Only One Smaller Percentage.

A death rate within 13-100ths of the low record for the city since the Health Department has kept records on the subject is shown by the returns to the department for the week ending last Saturday noon. The rate for last week was 16.87 per 1,000 of population. The lowest rate in the records of the department was in the first week of May, 1900, when the figures were 16.74.

Deaths from cerebro-spinal meningitis for the week ending on Saturday noon numbered 72. For the week before there were 88 and in the week before that 110.

There were 171 deaths from pneumonia in the week ending on Saturday noon. In the corresponding week in 1904 there were 247 deaths from the disease.

Duke of Sutherland at White House.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—The Duke of Sutherland was presented to President Roosevelt to-day by Hugh O'Beirne, the British Chargé d'Affaires. Later the Duke was the guest of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt at luncheon.

Apprehensive.

From The Washington Star.

"Do you favor Government ownership of railways?"

"No," answered the man who travels. "Some of the porters are haughty enough now. I don't know what they would be if they were to loom up as Government officials."

A DAISY.

I am a shining daisy
Of beauties manifold;
In short, a silver pinwheel,
Whose heart is purest gold.

Oh, I am very happy,
And I am very gay,
For in her airy shirtwaist
I languish all the day.

And when the dancing moonlight
Athwart the garden streams,
Upon her blue pincushion
I find the land of dreams.

For I'm no meadow daisy,
With dewdrops all aglow;
I am a dollar scarfpin

Fedora.....Mme. Bertha Kalich

Bertha Kalich, who for a number of years has enjoyed the reputation of being one of the east side's best-liked artistes, and who has played in Yiddish all of the virtuoso rôles usual to emotional actresses, and a few, such as Hamlet, unusual even to the best of them, made her first appearance speaking English on the English-speaking stage at the American Theatre last evening.

The audience which assembled for this début was in some respects remarkable, for in addition to a great host of the actress's friends and admirers from the region east of the Bowery it included a large sprinkling of the regular Broadway first-nighters. And the two elements united in making the occasion memorable.

At the end of the third act the stage was banked with floral tributes, there were nearly a dozen curtain calls, and Mme. Kalich was obliged to express her appreciation in a short speech before the curtain.

So much for the general aspect of an occasion which resolved itself into an ovation.

As regards Mme. Kalich's claims to consideration as a great artiste—and that is the claim her friends make for her—it is not possible, with justice to either affirm or deny them at the present time. She revealed last night a somewhat remarkable emotional power and a capacity for much mimetic variety. But there was little or no evidence of the artistic restraint which, on the stage, should govern that which is to appear as altogether an expression of impulse, passion, or emotion. In other words, there seemed to be no choice of means, no variety of method to suit the variation of the scene, the mood, the action.

In the big passages—the scene of Ipanoff's confession of guilt, that of Fedora's prayer for mercy, and in the final gruesome one of the woman's death, Mme. Kalich played with tremendous natural force. Her voice, her facial expression, and gesture all combined in a luminous expression of overpowering mental excitement. But—contrary to the general opinion—these bravura passages do not provide the best tests of an actress's claims.

And there was little evidence of the reserve, repose, and thoughtful discrimination necessary in the subtler, more subtle, but no less important essentials of what is best in acting.

When Mme. Kalich is sure of her English—which, by the way, is by no means unpleasant—it is not impossible that she will be able to demonstrate the fact that what now seems like a lack of poise, is in reality only the nervousness incident to a very unusual and very trying experience.

Mr. Arden is a very capable Loris, and the rest of the cast is a creditable one.

Mme. Prudence.....Lizzie Goode
Nichette.....Edla Bothner
Nanine.....Elena Rossiter Powers
Olympe.....Lillian Clayes

If an enthusiastic welcome is prophetic of a prosperous season, Adelaide Keim's venture at the Harlem Opera House in establishing a Summer stock company, with herself as the particular star, ought to prove to be a most happy undertaking for the young woman. The large lobby of this uptown playhouse was fairly crowded last night with floral tributes, and on the stage when Miss Keim first made her entrance, these material evidences of good-will had many additions. Applause, too, gave testimony that the star had many friends in the audience.

To start the stock company, Miss Keim selected "Camille," the drama that seems so essential to every emotional actress. This portrayal of the ill-starred young woman with a past was a mild one, and quite lacked the affectation and an overstress of emotion that often accompanies the rôle. Nor did Miss Keim make poor Margurite's distressing malady unpleasantly evident; in fact, it was a little hard to believe that anything was the matter with the girl, for the actress is most unromantically robust, and gives no physical suggestion of consumption. In the support of the actress, Martin A. Alsop appeared as Armand, giving an acceptable rendering of the rôle. Of the other members of the company, Lizzie Goode as Prudence and T. N. Heffron as Gaston appeared to win favor with the audience.

The setting of the piece was satisfactory, and many of the gowns of the women, especially those of Miss Keim, were pleasing. Next week the company will present "Heartsease," the romantic drama in which Henry Miller won success.

DAMROSCH ROOF CONCERTS.

First "Symphony Night" on Top of the New York Theatre.

The first symphony night of the series of roof garden concerts that Mr. Damrosch is giving on the glass-inclosed roof of the New York Theatre was last night. The symphony was Dvorak's "From the New World," which was listened to with much appreciation by an audience that reached considerable numbers before the evening was over. Among the lesser pieces was a "pastorale mystique" from Massenet's recent opera "Le Jongleur de Notre Dame," which, not penetrating into any of the recondite depths of mysticism, is flowingly melodious and gave evident pleasure to the listeners.

On the programme to-night there will be a solo for M. Adolphe Dubois, the new solo trumpeter of the orchestra; Litolff's "Scherzo" overture, Smetana's overture to "The Bartered Bride," and symphonic movements by Beethoven and Goldmark. On Tuesday evening some movements from Fauré's incidental music to "Pelléas et Mélisande" will be performed for the first time, and M. Barrère will play flute solos. On Wednesday night Delibe's ballet suite "Sylvia" will be given.

Elaborate Programme for Aerial.

Klaw & Erlanger have completed their programme for the opening of the New Amsterdam Aerial Theatre and Gardens Monday evening, June 5. The opening bill will be a very elaborate Gilbert and Sullivan revival. This will be followed by the latest Parisian novelty, an automobile race, and a two-act musical farce by John J. McNally, to be called "Lifting the Mortgage." The cast will include, among others, Fay Templeton, Louis Harrison, and Virginia Earle.

SHUBERTS' LONDON THEATRE.

The Waldorf Opened—One of the Handsomest Houses in the City.

LONDON, May 22.—The beautiful new Waldorf Theatre in Aldwych was successfully opened to-night, under the management of the Messrs. Shubert of New York, with a performance of "Il Pagliacci" by an Italian operatic company. Mme. Duse will appear to-morrow night, grand opera and Italian drama alternating at the theatre under the plan outlined by the management.

The audience to-night included many people of note in the theatrical and literary worlds, packing the house to its capacity.

The theatre, which is at the junction of the Strand and King's Highway, is one of the handsomest in London. It is not a large one, but has been cleverly designed to afford great holding capacity.

The general scheme of decoration in the auditorium is fleur de pêche marble of a violet color, with a good deal of gilding, rose du Barry panels, cream and gold tiers and boxes, and large ornamental gilt mirrors. The style throughout is Louis XIV., and the details have been consistently carried out, including some handsome bronze chandeliers, and a wrought-iron balustrade to the central staircase, all copied from good models. There are only two boxes on each side.

Above the proscenium is a bold bas-relief in cream and gold representing Apollo in his chariot. The ceiling is painted in the style of Le Brun, and a deep cornice runs all round the house. The crush-room and main staircase are covered in alternate stripes of dove-colored and brèche-violet marble, the capitals of the pilasters being gilt.

CHANGES AT HIPPODROME.

Bessie McCoy Returns and New Specialties Are Presented.

The performance at the Hippodrome this week includes added novelties in the circus department, and new specialities throughout "A Yankee Circus on Mars." "The Raiders" continues in popular favor.

DARKNESS INTERRUPTS CITY LIGHTING TALK

The Reform Club Was Debating Municipal Ownership.

HERRICK SAYS IT HAS FAILED

Pleas For and Against Municipalization of Public Utilities at an Interesting Dinner.

While the question, "Shall New York City Own and Operate Its Transportation, Light, and Other Public Utilities?" was being discussed at a dinner given by the Reform Club's Committee on City Affairs in the National Arts Club in West Thirty-fourth Street last night, the diners, strangely enough, had trouble with their own lighting.

Several times the electric lights flickered and went out, leaving the tables, save for the cigar lighters, in darkness. Some of the diners seemed annoyed by the coincidence.

There were many women present. The entire group of diners numbered about 300 persons. The speakers included the Rev. D. Lyman Abbott, the Hon. D. Cady Herrick, Louis F. Post of Chicago, and Frederic W. Hinrichs.

With the exception of ex-Judge Herrick, the speakers were in favor of municipal ownership. Mr. Herrick raised the question whether we had yet reached the point where we were ready for municipal ownership, and said he believed we ought to emphasize control for the present—elect men who were capable of controlling all the corporations in a proper way and without detriment to city or State.

The text of Dr. Lyman Abbott's speech was: "The Cure for the Evils of Democracy Is Always More Democracy." He explained at some length the three stages of Government through which, he thought, this and other nations had passed. The first form, he said, was a Government under which the governing man, or body of men, assumed that the common people were sheep either to be sheared from time to time or slaughtered; the second, a Government in which citizens could act much as they pleased with proper watching, and the third what he would call the fraternal form of Government.

"This third stage," Dr. Abbott went on to say, "assumes that he that is greater than all should be the servant of all. The trouble with undeveloped governments, as well as undeveloped individuals, is that they have not the power of combination. You know a few men can govern hundreds of insane persons.

"The trouble with ignorant as well as insane persons, is that they lack the power of co-operating with one another. The question which seems to me to confront us is whether we have reached that stage of development where we can unite in a common enterprise for the common good. I believe that we have."

Ex-Judge Herrick explained that he believed that many of the evils in this city would long ago have been corrected if the citizens had been allowed to smother in their own infamy, had they not always been able to rush to Albany to dicker temporarily with the existing evil and to temporize with them. "The respectable citizen," said Mr. Herrick, "is too deeply engaged in making money in this city to care much for the general good.

"There are many persons just now who look to municipal ownership as the panacea for all ills. Now, governmental functions are gradually growing. The same conditions which surround them are not those of years ago. You know there was a time when providing water for a municipality was not thought of, decisions were rendered against it.

"But it was discovered that a supply of water was necessary for the public health; that it was necessary to provide clean drinking water, necessary to provide water for sewer purposes, cleansing, and so on. When this was discovered it was also discovered that the city ought to supply it, and it did.

"There was a time when it was considered none of the public's business to supply illumination for the streets. Every man supplied his own light. Then it was discovered that the safety to the citizen depended upon the proper lighting of the streets, and when this thought occurred to our forefathers it was also decided that the streets would have to be lighted.

"This question of municipal ownership of franchises has come up before in other forms. I remember a Mayor who thought that the Government ought to control all the bakeries because bread was a public necessity. He also thought the city ought to control all the coal yards because coal was a public necessity.

"To me it seems as if we ought to control those things which are necessary to protect life and property, and that we ought not to go far beyond that. When we consider how all the cities have gone beyond that in our present stage of development it seems to me you go to a very great extreme.

"Municipal ownership up to now has proved a great failure with us. We have not been able to manage the few interests we do manage without corruption. You confess every year when the Legislature meets that you were unfit to do many public things.

"And then who is going to manage these great interests for you? The Board of Aldermen? The Legislature has been limiting the powers of the Board of Aldermen from time to time because it has found that they could not do this or that duty properly. Then who? The Mayor? Your Mayor here has governed you very well indeed, but could you tell how he would manage these large enterprises? Could you even tell how he will serve you during the next term?

Mr. Post began by saying that the general argument in this and other cities against municipal ownership was to ask the citizens to wait until Chicago's venture had been fully tried. By that time, rest assured," he went on to say, "the same men who now argue that way will argue that the conditions in Chicago are not the same as they are in your city here. More—they will have built a legal wall against your scheme which will be hard for you to scale."

He quoted figures to show that Chicago had proved municipal ownership profitable and a success.

Mr. Hinrichs argued that even here in New York municipal ownership had proved a success. John G. Agar presided.

GIRDNER ON FRANCHISES.

Universalist Club Still in Doubt About End of Eagles Feast.

Dr. John H. Girdner, friend of William J. Bryan, and Thomas Watson, appeared as an advocate of municipal ownership of public utilities before the New York Universalist Club at its annual meeting in the Hotel St. Denis last night. He left the club in doubt as to just what method he would follow in taking over the property of the great corporations.

"In every city there is the franchise carcass," he said, "and over it hover the eagles—the political eagles, and the corporation eagles. The political eagles organize to get their share of the carcass and call themselves by whatever names they think will attract the independent voters who carry the elections. The corporation eagles deal with them to get their share of the carcass.'

The doctor predicted that in view of these conditions a party will soon arise which will sweep the city over to the plan for municipal ownership. It was after this that the club members began quizzing the speaker.

"How would this party take over the property of these corporations?" asked Dr. Frank J. Davey.

any property under its right of eminent domain," triumphantly said Dr. Girdner.

"as it would take a house that stood where a street was to be made."

"But the right of eminent domain would not apply, where we have made a contract, so as to enable us to break that contract just because we wanted to get the profits we found could be made," said Dr. Davey, decisively.

"There may be something in that," said Dr. Girdner.

"It looks as though the corporation eagles might feed longer," interjected another member.

H. Austin Tuttle was elected President of the club for the next year.

SWORD DANCER STICKS.

Get I Love Husband, She Says—Mistrial on Abduction Charge.

The second trial of James E. Mason on the charge of abducting young Beatrice Rosalina Harding, who was performing at Huber's Museum last January, when Mason met her and whom he married in Canada, resulted in a disagreement of the jury yesterday. The jury in the first case also disagreed. Mason will now probably be discharged.

The girl's father, Walter A. Harding, does a fire-eating act, her mother charms snakes, and Beatrice, before she became Mrs. Mason, performed a dance on swords. Her parents opposed the wedding.

The girl took the stand before Judge Cowing in General Sessions yesterday. The lawyer for the prosecution asked her this question:

"Do you love your husband?"

"You bet your life I do," said the girl.

"Did your husband induce you to run away with him?"

"No, sir."

"Did you induce him to run away?"

"I induced him; he didn't have to induce me."

"Did your mother ever give her consent to your marriage?"

"Yes; but she didn't want me to leave her and my father till we finished our engagement at Huber's. I made more money than papa, and mamma made more money than either of us. They wanted to keep my services.

"I want to go back to my husband. I took him for better or worse, and I'm willing to take a chance with him. I want to quit the show business. I'm tired of walking on swords."

ANTICIPATIONS.

Mr. Corrigan of Kildare, Come to be a Policeman, Muses on What May Be.

Detective John D. O'Connor took to the East Fifty-first Street Police Station last night a stalwart Irishman whom he locked up charged with causing a crowd to collect. The prisoner said he was James Corrigan, thirty-five years old, newly arrived from the County Kildare. He stood unsteadily before the rail looking at O'Connor, who was in citizen's clothes.

"Ar-re yez a cop?" he asked.

"I am," replied the detective.

"Well, thin, I'll remember yez. Five years from now you'll be salutin' me as yer super-rior officer. I came over here to be a cop. In five years I'll be a Captain. Then look out."

"I will," said the detective, "when the time comes."

CHICAGO'S PURCHASE PLAN.

If City Defaults on Notes Lines Will Revert to Owners.

R. R. Govin of the banking house of H. H. Hollins, & Co., who has been in Chicago in connection with the negotiations over the proposed acquisition of the Chicago traction companies by the city, returned here yesterday. He announced that the relations now existing between the banking interests which have heretofore dominated the Chicago traction situation and the present city administration were such that there was a good prospect of having the deal arranged within a comparatively short time.

"It is our desire to meet the city half way in the matter," he said, "and apparently the Chicago authorities are of a like mind. I may say for the bankers that without regard to our opinion on the feasibility of the municipal ownership proposition in itself, we are determined to aid the city in carrying out the programme determined by the overwhelming vote at the last election.

"The terms on which the transfer will be made are very simple and may be outlined at this time. The first thing will be to have the value of the various franchises and properties determined by arbitration. The franchise values, of course, differ materially according to routes. Then the city will issue notes for purchase purposes, these notes having the properties themselves as security. The city can then undertake its experiment. If it makes the roads pay, it will be able to handle the notes in the usual way; if not, and there should be a default, the roads would revert to their original owners."

OAKLEY S. BARKER'S WILL.

Grandson of Cornelius Vanderbilt Leaves All to His Son and Widow.

The will of Oakley S. Barker, grandson of the late Cornelius Vanderbilt, was filed for probate in the Surrogates' office yesterday. The petition accompanying the will does not state the value of the estate, but sets forth that the testator left a personal estate in this State of "more than $10,000."

The estate is bequeathed to the widow, Mrs. Henrietta Emily Barker, and the testator's son, Harold Oakley Barker, both of whom reside at Stamford, Conn., where Mr. Barker died on April 18. The Union Trust Company and Mrs. Barker are named as executors.

Under the will of Cornelius Vanderbilt $300,000 was set apart for the benefit of Mr. Barker's mother, who was Mme. Catherine Lafitti. Mme. Lafitti had a life interest in this $300,000. On her death it was to go to her children. When there were four children Mr Barker was entitled to $125,000 of the sum left by Mr. Vanderbilt, in addition to $50,000 which his mother bequeathed to him.

Morris-Waterbury Wedding.

Miss Elsie Waterbury was married yesterday in St. Peter's Church, Westchester, to Gouverneur Morris, Bishop Potter performing the ceremony. There was only one bridal attendant, Miss Dorothy Pierrepont Edwards, a cousin of the bride. The wedding was one of the most brilliant socially of the season, the church being crowded with the friends of the bride and groom.

The floral decorations were elaborate, the altar itself being massed with roses. There was a reception of the friends of both families after the ceremony in Spencer House, the home of the parents of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. James Waterbury.

The bride was known as one of the most accomplished horsewomen in Westchester from her childhood until her début, but after a severe fall a few years ago gave up cross-country riding.

Gouverneur Morris is a graduate of Harvard and a descendant of one of the old Revolutionary families. Since his graduation he has devoted himself largely to letters, being the author of several novels and many short stories.

The wedding yesterday marked the first appearance of Bishop Potter at St. Peter's Church since the memorable controversy between himself and Dr. Greendith, the rector, over the question of the ordination of Dr. Briggs.

SUNDAY WASH-DAY SAVED MICKOLOVSKY'S NECK

Fell Six Stories and Landed, Still Asleep, on Clothes.

BROKE MANY LINES ON WAY

Came to This Country for Niece's Wedding and Had Been Celebrating Joyous Event.

If Sunday hadn't been wash day in Madison Street, Vladisto Mickolovsky wouldn't be alive.

Full 5,000 miles he had traveled that he might give away his pretty niece, Antoinette Jalonowsky, when she was married to Wenzel Sokiotowsky. Six stories sheer he fell when the wedding was over, from the roof which had given him shelter since his sojourn here, to the courtyard below. He severed more than two score clotheslines in falling, and on the week's wash of seven-and-thirty households, by actual count, he cushioned himself when he reached the ground, still slumbering and unhurt.

Antoinette Jalonowsky was one of the prettiest girls in the Russian colony. When Wenzel began courting her he was envied by every gallant for blocks around. Miss Jalonowsky would not consent to a wedding, however, until one of her relatives should arrive to give her away. She had not a kinsman in all these United States, and things looked dismal for Wenzel. News of his plight was wafted across the seas, and to the ears of Uncle Vladisto Mickolovsky.

Mickolovsky, a tailor of renown, counted his store of rubles and decided to hasten to the rescue. He was welcomed when he arrived at the flat of Joseph Kuzowsky, on the top floor of the tenement 105 Madison Street.

He ordered that the wedding should take place at once. The ceremony was solemnized at the Greek Church, and celebrated, at its conclusion, in Apollo Hall, 126 Clinton Street.

Uncle Vladisto Mickolovsky did his share of the celebrating.

His room was just around the corner from the hall, but he declined to walk. A cab was called and he was driven in state to his abiding place. It was almost 2 A. M.

After the expanses of Apollo Hall his bedchamber seemed cramped and he decided to climb to the roof and get some fresh air. A few minutes later the air shaft between 103 and 105 was filled with sundered clothes lines and rough laundered garments. A muffled thud completed the awakening of both houses. There was a procession of tenants to the ground floor to find out what had happened.

At the bottom of the air shaft, on a pile of clothes, they found Vladisto Mickolovsky—sound asleep.

A policeman called an ambulance from Gouverneur Hospital. Dr. Hammil, who was in charge, felt Mickolovsky from head to foot.

"No bones broken," he announced. "Slight abrasion of the left cheek where it evidently struck a clothesline. Good night." Mickolovsky, at last aroused, clambered back to the Kuzowsky flat and went to sleep. He was busy yesterday telling everybody who inquired how it all happened.

WORE BLANKET IN STREET.

Sailor Regan Thought His Clothes Had Been Stolen.

The human tide from the factories and shops along East Twenty-third Street was flowing toward the Williamsburg Ferry shortly after 6 o'clock last night when a little man, with hair standing up straight, dashed from the doorway of the Columbia lodging house, near First Avenue. He wore a blanket wrapped about him, Indian fashion.

Sprinting around the corner into First Avenue, he headed toward the East Twenty-second Street Police Station. Men and boys from the docks followed, hooting and throwing things.

"I was-a takin' a bath," he explained, breathlessly, to the Sergeant.

"You look it," interrupted the Sergeant.

"Yes," continued the little man, "my name is Pat Regan, and I'm a sailor. While I was bathing some one took my clothes from my room."

The Sergeant summoned the doorman, and the doorman dug up a pair of trousers owned by a policeman known as "Ferryboat," who weighs 300 pounds.

"Sail into those," commanded the Sergeant, handing out the fat trousers. And when the little man had reefed his canvas fore and aft, he was towed back to the hotel by the doorman. There Regan's clothes were found.

"The drinks are on me," said Regan, and the crowd in the hotel sailed up to the bar, where they unloaded several schooners.

Fond Adventures

"Passages singing the song of the sword and scenes wrapped in soft suggestions of the lute," in the words of one critic, aptly describe these wonderful tales by Maurice Hewlett. Since the publication of The Forest Lovers Mr. Hewlett has written nothing so palpitating with the full and splendid life of the middle ages. Each of these four glowing love tales has a beauty and charm distinct from the others. All are romance of the rarest quality.

Sanna

"An ideal summer resort, restful, original, with a peculiar charm of its own." —N. Y. Times. In other words, a delightful romance of Nantucket and an ideal book for vacation hours. "The author of The Wood Carvers of 'Lympus has clustered around her theme in this new volume a series of scenes of pathos and humor with the most captivating human interest. Sanna is altogether bewitching in her girlish coquetry and charm."—Pittsburg Press.

ISSUE OF $10,000,000

THE WASHINGTON TERMINAL COMPANY

FIRST MORTGAGE 3½% GOLD BONDS

Guaranteed jointly and severally as to principal and interest by

THE BALTIMORE AND OHIO RAILROAD COMPANY

PHILADELPHIA, BALTIMORE & WASHINGTON RAILROAD COMPANY

(PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD SYSTEM)

by endorsement upon each bond.

Dated February 1st, 1905. Principal due February 1st, 1945.

Interest payable February 1st and August 1st, in the Cities of New York and Washington.

UNITED STATES TRUST CO., OF NEW YORK, TRUSTEE.

Total Authorized Issue $12,000,000.

Principal and interest payable in gold coin of the present standard of weight and fineness without deduction for any tax or taxes which The Washington Terminal Company may be required to pay thereon or retain therefrom under any present or future law of the United States of America or of the District of Columbia.

The bonds are of either coupon or registered form. The coupon bonds are of the denomination of $1,000 and the registered bonds are of the denomination of $1,000 or such multiple thereof as the Board of Directors of The Washington Terminal Company may authorize.

It is stipulated that the $2,000,000 bonds reserved in the treasury of the Company are to be used only for the enlargement, betterment, extension of and additions to the property covered by the mortgage.

The bonds are secured by a First Mortgage not only upon the Terminal Station but upon the tracks and approaches thereto as is more particularly described in a letter from A. J. Cassatt, Esq., President of The Washington Terminal Company, who writes us under date of April 26th, 1905, as follows:

"In respect to the $10,000,000 The Washington Terminal Company First Mortgage Forty Year 3½ Per Cent. Gold Bonds sold to you, I beg to state that The Washington Terminal Company, a corporation incorporated under Acts of Congress, approved February 12th, 1901, and February 28th, 1903, respectively, is engaged pursuant to these Acts in constructing a Union Terminal Station near the United States Capitol, at Massachusetts Avenue and Delaware Avenue, together with a double-track railroad from a connection with the Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington Railroad, near D Street and New Jersey Avenue, to a connection, at the north side of Florida Avenue near Third Street, with The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad and with the new branch of the Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington Railroad Company, now being built across to Magruder Station on the Main Line of the Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Washington Railroad. This terminal railroad and station furnish a through passenger connection between the lines north and south of Washington, and take the place of the present stations of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company and the Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington Railroad Company in that city, and will, therefore, be used by all the railroads reaching Washington from the north and south which formerly used the old stations, as follows:

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company.	Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company.
Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington Railroad Company.	Richmond-Washington Line.
Southern Railway Company.	The Chesapeake and Ohio Railway Company.
	Seaboard Air Line Railway Company.

These Companies are to use the new station under contracts permanent in their character, and covering the payment of an amount which will fully provide for the interest on the bonds to be issued by The Washington Terminal Company, and also a fair return to The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company and the Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington Railroad Company on the additional capital invested therein. The payment of the principal and interest of the bonds is also guaranteed jointly and severally by The Baltimore and Ohio and the Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington Railroad Companies.

The terminal Station and Railroad are being built in accordance with the recommendations of the authorities of the District of Columbia, and with the approval of the Congress of the United States, and will cost about thirteen millions of dollars. The work of construction is being pushed forward actively, and will be completed before the end of 1906. The legislation authorizing its construction also provides for such a revision of the grades of the steam railways passing through Washington as will eliminate the grade crossings of the highways, and thus aid materially in the effective and economical movement of the traffic.

This legislation also requires that the station building shall be monumental in character, in order that it may harmonize with the Capitol and other public buildings in its vicinity. It will be one of the largest passenger stations in this country and will be the only passenger terminal in Washington, as the Acts of Congress under which the Company was incorporated require the abandonment in due time of the existing stations and of the tracks approaching thereto. It will be used for passenger, mail, and express service only.

The Washington Terminal Company has an authorized capital stock of $5,000,000, of which $2,500,000 has been issued and fully paid in cash, and is owned equally by The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company and the Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington Railroad Company. Further necessary issues of stock will be subscribed for in equal amounts by these Companies.

The bonds are part of an authorized issue of $12,000,000, are dated February 1st, 1905, run for forty years, bear 3½ per cent. interest, and are payable in gold free from any deduction for taxes which The Washington Terminal Company may be required to pay thereon or retain therefrom under any law of the United States of America or of the District of Columbia.

They are in either coupon or registered form. The coupon bonds are of the denomination of $1,000, and the registered bonds are of the denomination of $1,000 or such multiples thereof as the Board of Directors of the Terminal Company may authorize.

The principal and interest of the bonds are payable in either of the Cities of Washington or New York.

Application will be made to list these bonds on the New York Stock Exchange."

Copies of the Acts of Congress above referred to as well as of the Mortgage itself, and of the opinion of our Counsel, John G. Johnson, Esq., may be obtained at the offices of the undersigned.

Having sold a large amount of the issue, we offer the remaining bonds for subscription at 97½ and interest. The subscription lists will be opened at the offices of the undersigned at 10 o'clock A. M. on Tuesday, the 23d day of May, 1905, and closed at 3 o'clock P. M. or earlier on the same day, the right being reserved to reject any application or to award smaller amounts than applied for.

Allotments made upon subscriptions are to be paid for on Friday, May 26th, 1905, against the delivery of the engraved bond.

Application will be made to list these bonds on the New York Stock Exchange.

Stocks Weak; Call Money Easy, 2¼@2½ Per Cent.

A Better Opening Than Expected and a Worse Closing—Reasons for the Fall Obscure.

Stocks were weak yesterday, as had been anticipated, but not in the manner expected, and for no especial reason so far as the day's events developed. It had been anticipated that London might be alarmed by the disinterested advice of the gentleman from Boston, who is urging his followers to organize a run upon the banks, and might embarrass this market by the volume of its offerings. As it turned out, buying by London was the most encouraging feature of the day, its takings of much over 50,000 shares sufficing to give the market all the support it received. When these orders were filled nobody seemed to want any more stocks except at concessions, and prices faded away, chiefly because more stocks were offered than the market would take. That is to say, there was no other reason so far as was publicly known, and that very circumstance lent weight and mystery to the selling, which was not understood.

There was crop news to suit every taste, that closest to the produce market being gloomiest, and that supposably most disinterested—Secretary Wilson's—being at the other extreme of optimism. The inference regarding the crop outlook was of the weakest, the chief strength being in the near and speculative options, and the smallest in the distant options covering the new growth. The traffic reports and weekly résumés of railway conditions were as favorable as for any recent period. The Chicago strike showed some exacerbation, but that is a continuing factor and nothing new nor worse than on previous occasions, when the market chose to ignore it. The money market showed no reflection of last week's enlargement of loans and loss of surplus. A sufficient explanation was the softness in foreign exchange and the premiums upon domestic exchange, high enough in some cases to bring currency here by the express package. To give revival of old stories regarding the embarrassment of a local institution place among the day's influences is unduly to dignify them. The proportions of the institution's commitments are inadequate for any large effect, and its condition was known—among the few who knew anything on the subject—to be improving rather than deteriorating. However, while the facts are not disturbing, rumors regarding facts at a time when some journals print advertisements of a certain character are unsettling. When the truth becomes known, it in turn becomes supporting.

There was not much discrimination in the day's price movements. Consolidated Gas had a trifling advance, worth mention only as a touch of comic relief in a gloomy day. The Northwestern group was the weakest of all, and Steel ran off with a consumption of its products on an increasing ratio. For a stock to be strong on a day like yesterday is to offer itself as a target, and invite suggestions that it was stronger than it ought to be.

The only bulls that are left in the Street, especially after the very bad break of yesterday, are what might be called contingent bulls. That is, they are men who say that conditions are good and that they see no reason for a decline, but expect prices to go up again "if" such and such a thing does not happen, or "provided" that such other things come true. Most of the conditions on which these contingent bulls base their ideas concern the crops. If these should turn out good they expect a bull market "later on." What the grain trade thinks of the chances of the crops is shown by the strength in the wheat and corn markets, the latter of which scored a sensational advance yesterday on reports of bad weather. The same was true of the cotton market, where prices rose on reports of crop damages by unfavorable weather.

Amalgamated Copper.

Amalgamated Copper held well for a time, but finally went off with the rest of the market. There are still some bulls left on this stock, and one of them, a man in a prominent position, stood yesterday for the assertion that "there are good prospects of the stock selling at 90 before it sells at 70." One of his friends heard of the remark and wanted to place a bet on the statement, but the author did not have the courage of his convictions.

Bucket Shop Tickers.

There have been rumors current for some time that the Stock Exchange would cut off all sources of news which might give to bucket shops information as to the price movements on the Exchange. The assertion was made that the ticker service would be removed from all places which could be used by bucket shops to gain information. It was yesterday authoritatively stated that the Governors have not yet considered that action and that they will not consider any such movement until after the influence of the stock transfer tax law on the business of the Exchange has been observed. If it is found that bucket shops, being exempt from the law because they neither buy nor sell real securities, take away business from the Exchange, it is very likely that supervision over the ticker service will be even more strict than it has been heretofore.

HAIGHT & FREESE WIN.

Pennsylvania Won't Sue Firm—Federal Court Asks $10,000 Bond.

PHILADELPHIA, May 22.—Attorney General Carson to-day decided not to apply for an injunction to stop the Haight & Freese Company, brokers, doing business in this State, nor ask for a receiver. The petition was presented on Saturday by counsel for Ridgway Bowker, who charged that he had lost $5,000. Permission to apply for quo warranto proceedings was granted.

Judge McPherson in the United States District Court to-day handed down a decision that the Haight & Freese Company file a bond of $10,000 to cover the claim of Bowker, and that, upon doing so, the temporary restraining order granted a few days ago shall be dissolved and the receivership vacated. Counsel stated that the $10,000 bond would be filed on Wednesday.

THE BOND MARKET.

Liquidation Causes General Reaction in Prices.

Bearish Attitude of Traders—Interborough Falls Below 200—Seaboard Air Line Ruling.

Prices in the outside market yesterday declined almost without exception. In all the active stocks there was steady liquidation throughout the session, and in very few cases was there any substantial recovery from the lowest prices reached. The list included a larger number of active issues than on any recent day, a fact due, apparently, to the disposition on the part of many holders to dispose of their stocks because of the unsatisfactory character of the general market. Traders as a whole were decidedly bearish, and in some cases stocks bought by them on the theory that the reaction had gone far enough were quickly thrown overboard. This was particularly true of Northern Securities, the rallies in which were very feeble. Among the sharp reactions was that in International Mercantile Marine preferred. This stock had advanced abruptly on Saturday to 28¼, and it looked then as if a movement was being made either to discomfit some traders short of the stock or else to afford it support. Neither influence was at work yesterday, for the opening sale was made at a recession of a full point, and this was followed by a further decline of more than 2 points.

***

SEABOARD AIR LINE.—The Baltimore Stock Exchange, it was announced yesterday, has ruled that the transactions in the new Seaboard stocks under the original plan of reorganization are annulled by the fact that a change had been made in the plan. This ruling appears very much to weaken the case of the New York traders who have been maintaining that the old transactions should stand. It is not now considered probable that an attempt to carry out the transactions would meet with any success for the reason that the way is open to either side to object to the fulfillment of the contracts, and the chance is likely to be availed of by those who stand to lose by the trades that were made under the old plan.

***

INTERBOROUGH RAPID TRANSIT declined below 200 and closed at 198½, within a small fraction of the lowest, and with a net loss of 5½ points. No large stop orders were uncovered at 200, despite the impression in some quarters that at that price an effort would be made to dispose of stock that had been held for a long time.

***

The principal transactions reported in the outside market yesterday, with high, low, and last prices, were as follows:

WOULD PASS GAS BILL IN SPECIAL SESSION

Senator Stevens for Reviving the Defeated Measure.

GOV. HIGGINS NOW HESITATES

He Is Being Urged to Include Mortgage and Savings Bank Tax Repeal in the Call.

Senator Stevens, Chairman of the legislative committee which investigated the gas situation in this city, came out squarely yesterday for the resubmission of the eighty-cent gas bill to the Legislature in special session. He also frankly avowed that the responsibility for the defeat of the bill was on the Republicans.

"I unhesitatingly declare that the Legislature ought to be called upon by Gov. Higgins to take action on the eighty-cent gas bill at the special session," said Senator Stevens. "To accuse Tammany of being responsible for the defeat of the measure at the regular session is all poppycock.

"The Legislature is Republican by a large majority, and we have a Republican Governor. On the Republican Party, therefore, must rest the responsibility for all legislation that failed, just as to the Republican Party belongs the credit or discredit of all legislation that was passed. The party that has the power to do a thing is the party that the people will hold responsible for not doing it if it be not done. That has always been the case. Any other line of reasoning is specious."

"Do you think the bill could be passed at the special session?" the Senator was asked.

"I think so. I believe there are some Republican Senators who voted against it at the regular session who since then have experienced a change of heart. But even if we made another effort to pass it and failed we would be no worse off politically than we are now. The responsibility, of course, would still be ours, but the attitude of Tammany would be further emphasized."

"What do you think of the argument that it is unnecessary for the Legislature to take up the question of cheap gas since the State Commission of Gas and Electricity will have the power to give the people relief?"

"I don't think much of it. In the first place there is no question about the authority of the Legislature in the matter. The Legislature can pass any legislation it pleases affecting the gas companies, provided it stops short of confiscation. Since there is no room for doubt as to the ability of the Consolidated Gas Company to furnish gas for 80 cents in the City of New York at a profit, there would be no ground upon which the company could contest an act of the Legislature providing for such a reduction.

"The decision of the courts in the franchise tax case, as well as the decision of the Massachusetts courts in the litigation growing out of a reduction in the price of gas in Boston, clearly show that the Legislature would be entirely within its powers in passing an eighty-cent gas bill. I do not believe the Consolidated Gas Company would think of disputing the authority of the Legislature in the matter.

"With the State Commission it would be different. I am inclined to think that the Consolidated Company would contest the authority of the State Commission at every point. In saying that I do not mean to give the impression that I have any doubt as to the constitutionality of the act creating the commission. I am convinced that the act is absolutely constitutional. We had the very best of legal advice on that point before we introduced the bill.

"If the State Commission, though, were to undertake an investigation of the gas question it would be much longer at it than was the Legislative Committee, because the company would throw every possible obstacle in its way. It might take years to get relief through the action of the State Commission, while through action of the Legislature relief would be immediate. That is why I am in favor of having Gov. Higgins re-submit the gas question to the Legislature at the special session."

"Have you read what agents of the Consolidated Company have said as to the dire results coming from an attempt to regulate the pressure according to the standard fixed by the Legislature?" was asked of Senator Stevens.

"Yes. What they say is nonsense. The standard fixed by the Legislature applies only to service mains, not to supply mains. It is perfectly feasible to regulate pressure in the service mains as the law provides without causing lights to go out or anybody to be asphyxiated."

Senator Stevens will go to Albany today to attend the hearing on the State Lighting Commission bill before Gov. Higgins to-morrow.

It was learned definitely last night that Gov. Higgins will not sign the bill providing for two additional members of the State Railroad Commission. His decision to veto that measure probably will have an important bearing upon the make-up of the State Lighting Commission.

George W. Aldridge, who was slated for one of the Railroad Commissionerships, is now understood to be fairly certain of being appointed a member of the Lighting Commission. The Buffalo candidate for the Lighting Commission is Max Senator Persons. William Halpin and Theodore P. Gilman are the two New Yorkers whose names have been most prominently brought forward as New York candidates. Senator Stevens said last night that Charles E. Hughes, who was the attorney for the Stevens Committee, could not be induced to take a place on the commission.

ALBANY, N. Y., May 22.—The proposed extra legislative session, which seemed a certainty from remarks let fall by Gov. Higgins at the opening of the thirty-day bill period, is the subject of increasing doubt and speculation. Senator Page, who called on the Governor this evening to urge that the mortgage tax and savings bank tax repeal be included in the Governor's call for such a session, was told that there might not be any call.

"I came here," said Senator Page, "to do what I could for a new mortgage tax bill and also to make one last attempt this year to accomplish what was contemplated in my Savings Bank Tax Repeal bill, which was defeated on the last day of the session. When I asked the Governor to make it possible for the Legislature to consider these matters at an extra session he replied that there might not be any extra session. We also talked about gas legislation."

$105,000 to Restore Church.

The congregation of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity of Brooklyn has decided to spend $105,000 for a complete restoration of the exterior of the church building, one of the most beautiful edifices of the kind in the city. The church, which is at Clinton and Montague Streets, has been standing for sixty years, and atmospheric conditions have caused much of the brownstone of which it is built to decay. The old stone is to be removed and more enduring material substituted.

NEW DETROIT THEFT MYSTERY

A Bellboy Gathered In on Suspicion of Being Concerned in It.

William Reno, an eighteen-year-old bellboy in the Seymour Hotel, at 50 West Forty-fifth Street, was arrested last night on suspicion that he might throw some light on the theft of part of the late Gen. di Cesnola's art collection, which was found in the hall bedroom of Frank McCarthy, the elevator boy at the Seymour, on Saturday night.

"We haven't been able yet to establish a connection between young Reno and the Cesnola case," said Detective Conroy who made the arrest, "but it is quite possible that he may be mixed up in it.

"In denying that he was guilty he said he had never stolen anything except a $500 brooch from a lady's handbag and some mail matter. The lady he refers to left her handbag on the desk at the Seymour last December. The brooch vanished from the bag and was recovered by Central office men in a pawnshop. It had been pawned by a car conductor who said he had found it in his car. The conductor was turned loose.

"The mail matter was stolen by Reno while in the employ of Recreation, a magazine, nine months ago. He was tried by the Federal authorities and freed on probation.

"We went through the boy's effects at his home, 884 Sixth Avenue, where he lives with his father. We found several stickpins and some other jewelry, but nothing that appears to belong to the Cesnola collection. He had some pawn tickets, which we will investigate to-morrow."

CHAUFFEUR BLAMED BRUSH.

Said Baseball Man Ordered Him to Speed on Broadway.

John T. Brush, one of the owners of the New York National League baseball team, was blamed yesterday in the West Side Court for the speeding of a chauffeur, John J. Galvin, who was arrested on Sunday night on Broadway, near Fifty-ninth Street.

When Galvin, who is employed at a garage, was arraigned yesterday in the West Side Court, he said that he was called to McGowan's Pass Tavern, in Central Park, by Mr. Brush, when the baseball man's automobile, which was being driven by H. Craig, his chauffeur, broke down. Mr. Brush had two women with him. Galvin soon repaired the Brush machine, and then started downtown with it. He said that Brush said:

"I have just fifty minutes to reach Toppan's Inn, at Sheepshead Bay; let her out."

Galvin says that he put on more speed under protest, fearing arrest, but that Mr. Brush kept demanding more speed. He was obeying, he said, although warning Mr. Brush, when Bicycle Policeman Guideman arrested him.

Mr. Brush and the two women, he declared, jumped out, Mr. Brush saying that they would take a train. Galvin declares that Mr. Brush said he didn't see why he should attend to bailing the chauffeur out. Mr. Brush, however, later sent his own chauffeur to give bail.

Galvin told his story with some warmth in court, blaming Mr. Brush for the whole trouble. He was held, however, in $100 bail for trial.

LOST 10 CENTS, FINED $10.

Police Court Sequel to Some Trouble in a Car.

"I wanted to get the worth of my dime," was the explanation offered to Magistrate Wahle, in the West Side Court yesterday, by Thomas Telford, a watchmaker, of 228 West Ninety-ninth Street, who was arraigned on a charge of creating a disturbance on an Eighth Avenue car on Sunday night.

According to William Roberts, the conductor, Telford gave him a quarter in payment of his fare. Telford says the conductor tossed him two dimes in change, and that one of the dimes fell to the floor and rolled to the street.

"I want that dime replaced," shouted Telford, according to Roberts.

The money was not forthcoming, and he started in to take it out of the car. First he seized the cord and started in to ring up fares. The conductor says he got to him in time to save part of his month's pay. Then Telford, according to the conductor, kicked him out of the way and broke a window. A railroad foreman then helped the conductor, and the two handed Telford over to a policeman.

"I don't like your method of collecting," said the court, when Telford made his excuse. "Anyway, your rate of interest is usurious. You are fined $10."

BLAST SPRINKLED GOLFERS.

Police Inspector McClusky, on the Links, Stops It.

When Police Inspector McClusky was playing golf on Saturday on the links of the Westchester Golf Club a blast was set off in a sewer excavation work for which J. P. Rogers is the contractor. Rocks fell like hail about the Inspector and other players. He thereupon directed two of his detectives, Brennicke and Mulrooney, to watch later in the day for further blasts, and to make an arrest if possible.

Before the afternoon was over there was a blast that hurled stones weighing as much as fifteen pounds for 300 or more feet upon the links, the police said yesterday in the Morrisania Court, when George Newton of 2,196 Third Avenue was arraigned there. He had been arrested by the two detectives. Newton, who said he was the engineer in charge, was fined $25, which was paid.

$15 New Value in MADE TO ORDER CLOTHING

WE'RE a stranger to you now, but not a stranger in the made-to-order field. We've been making clothes for a full dozen years before making appearance on Broadway. Just now we're going to be mighty particular about the clothes we make.

"Value-giving" is going to be our best ad.

We'll tailor a suit to your order, make it the best we know how and style it up to the minute for $15.00. We could say it's worth twice our asking price, but we'll say it's our idea of what $15.00 should buy in clothes.

FOUR-YEAR-TERM BILL APPROVED BY MAYOR

Also Favors the Rest of the Stevens Lighting Bills.

CRITICISES GAS MEASURE

Does Not Go Far Enough, McClellan Declares, and Breaks the Home Rule Principle.

Mayor McClellan has approved the legislative bill increasing the term of the Mayor to four years and also those of the lighting bills as recommended to the Legislature by the Stevens committee on which he had not already acted. With the four-year-term bill, which was sent back to Albany last night, there was no memorandum of reasons for the Mayor's action. The bill does not affect the present term of Mayor McClellan, but gives the first four-year term to the successful candidate at the coming November election.

The remaining lighting bills, of which there were three, fixed the price of electricity to the city and also to private consumers at a maximum of 10 cents per kilowatt hour, and also provided for daily test of illuminating gas under the supervision of the Commissioner of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity. Of this latter measure the Mayor in his memorandum said:

"The measure is good as far as its force goes, but it does not fully meet the needs of the gas consumers.

"A bill introduced at my request last year, and another offered this year, proposed a more effective means for the protection of the consumer, but neither one was acted on by the committee to whom they were referred.

"The present method of inspection and regulation of gas meters leaves the matter in charge of State officials instead of placing it, in accordance with the principle of home rule, in the hands of city officials.

"Under the circumstances the people may complain but practically they cannot punish the neglect of the public officers charged with protecting them against excessive charges due to irregularity of pressure and inaccuracy of meters."

Of the electricity bills the Mayor had little to say in his memorandum, which follows:

"These two bills will limit the power of the electric light companies to charge for service in excess of the prices fixed, which are, I understand, considerably less than the maximum charges heretofore made.

"They may therefore be regarded as of advantage to both public and private consumers, and because thereof I am justified in accepting them on behalf of the city."

Killed by Coney Island Express.

While trying to jump from a speeding Coney Island express train at New Utrecht Avenue and Fifty-eighth Street, Brooklyn, yesterday morning, Vincenzo De Lorenzo, thirty-eight years old, who lived on Fifty-eighth Street, fell under the wheels and was decapitated. The man had boarded the train at the bridge, mistaking it for a local train. Seeing that it was not going to stop at Fifty-eighth Street, he went out on the platform and was attempting to drop off, when he slipped and fell. He was a shoemaker.

Citizens' Union First Wants Opinions of Its Declaration.

The Nominating Committee of the Citizens' Union met yesterday at the office of R. Fulton Cutting. The meeting was executive. When it was concluded Mr. Cutting announced that a decision had been reached to send to the Democratic organization as well as to the Republican and other political and civic organizations the declaration of principles adopted by the City Committee of the Union.

"In sending this declaration of principles to the various organizations," said Mr. Cutting, "we do not invite the organizations to confer with us on the make-up of a ticket, but merely solicit from them an expression of opinion upon the principles upon which we think the municipal campaign should be conducted. After we get expressions from them upon that point it will then be time enough for us to decide to what organizations we will send invitations to confer with us. The decision of the committee to send the declaration of principles to the Democratic as well as other organizations was unanimous."

Frederick S. Lamb has retired from the Nominating Committee on account of ill-health. His successor has not been elected.

PHILADELPHIA'S MAYOR OUSTS TWO OFFICIALS

Weaver Dismisses Cabinet Members in Gas Fight.

DEFIES HIS PARTY MACHINE

Declares War to Finish Against the Gas Lease and Retains Elihu Root to Advise Him.

PHILADELPHIA, May 23.—In his effort to defeat the consummation of the plan to lease the city gas works to the United Gas Improvement Company for seventy-five years for $25,000,000, Mayor Weaver to-day dismissed from office the two principal members of his Cabinet, David J. Smyth, Director of the Department of Public Safety, and Peter E. Costello, Director of the Department of Public Works. In their respective places he appointed, ad interim, Col. Sheldon Potter and A. Lincoln Acker.

In his fight against the gas lease and the Republican organization the Mayor has called in as counsel Elihu Root of New York and ex-Judge James Gay Gordon of this city. Judge Gordon is a Democrat. The Mayor's stated purpose in going outside the city for his principal counsel is that he wants a man who is not identified with any faction in the struggle now on.

Simultaneously with the dismissal of the two Directors, Frederick J. Shoyer, Director of the Department of Supplies, by direction of the Mayor, suspended pending an investigation Arthur H. Morrow, the Assistant Director of the department.

The Mayor's blow was struck at the most vital spot of the Republican machine—its patronage. Practically all of the 20,000 place men in the city are directly at the mercy of the Director of Public Safety and the Director of Public Works. The men he has appointed to these positions are members of the Reform Committee of Seventy. Col. Potter is also a member of the Governor's staff, a stanch Republican, but regarded as absolutely clean in politics.

Mayor Weaver has made it known that any member of the City Councils who desires any share in the city patronage must take sides with him against the gas lease. He will summon early all the members of Councils before him to receive their pledges. The protégés of the Councilmen who agree to vote as the Mayor desires will be allowed to remain in office. The headman's axe hangs over the rest.

As a consequence, many of the organization leaders are extremely apprehensive. It is feared that many of the office holders will side with the Mayor and thus weaken the organization forces.

The removal of Directors Smyth and Costello did not come until after the Mayor had asked them to resign immediately. In reply each sent a letter offering his resignation, to take effect when his successor "shall be qualified." The Mayor answered them by demanding their immediate resignation.

The answers the Directors returned were to the effect that they had tendered their resignations "in the usual form and in accordance with the provisions of the city charter," and that they would stand by them as tendered. Mr. Weaver thereupon ended the correspondence by sending to each a letter in which he said:

"I feel that the best interests of the city require that our official relations shall terminate at once. You therefore place me under the painful necessity of immediately removing you from the position, as I feel that I must have some one in that office responsible only to the Mayor and to the city at once."

The fight over the form of the resignation was an important one, in that the new Directors can only be qualified by the confirmation of the Councils, which is controlled by the organization. It is not likely that the Councils will confirm the appointments. The Department of Public Safety has charge of the Police and Fire Bureaus, Electrical Bureau, prisons, Building Inspectors, Boiler Inspectors, city property, and Inspectors of Fire Escapes.

The bureaus of gas, highways, lighting, surveys, street cleaning, water, and city ice boats are under the supervision of the Department of Public Works. Each Director receives $10,000 a year.

The news of the Mayor's action spread quickly to every section of the city, and created consternation. The "Rialto" around City Hall, where politicians gather every day, was densely crowded with political workers and citizens. Every one wanted to know what the "organization" was going to do.

There was a wild rush to the ward leaders. The latter in turn hastened to find Israel W. Durham and his lieutenants, James P. McNichol and Charles Seger. Durham and all his more important followers were closeted together in a near by office. The blow to their organization came so swiftly that even they were temporarily stunned. They knew that the very life of their gigantic political machine was at stake.

The leaders, however, made no public announcement beyond the statement that the organization would "stand pat" on the lease, and that if the Mayor wanted a fight the organization was ready.

In reply to a question as to why he needed legal advisers other than those officially around him, the Mayor to-night said:

"I am going to fight this whole battle to the bitter end on the gas lease and all kindred matters."

The organization to a man was in favor of the lease, while the Mayor was unalterably opposed to it. He was utterly ignored in the transaction, and he has been urged by the newspapers and reform organizations to veto the ordinance passed by Councils last Thursday. This he has announced he would do. In the meantime he brought every influence to bear on Councilmen to sustain him in his veto. In this he had little success. The two Directors whom he has removed refused to use their influence to help him.

Every request of the Mayor for delay in the matter of passing the gas lease ordinance met with refusal on the part of Councils. In addition to this, when the gas lease was passed last week, both branches of Councils passed over the Mayor's veto eight bills of minor importance that he had returned that day. Ordinarily vetoes are laid over for at least a week.

The reform organizations of the city are continuing the plans to block the lease. Ward meetings were held to-night, the largest of which took place at the Bourse, where the principal address was delivered by Col. Potter, the new Director of Public Safety. Among other things, Col. Potter said:

"I have been suddenly taken from private life to take part in the administration of what I may term a new Government for the city of Philadelphia. This new Government will be for the people and not for a few contractors who handle our millions. We face the most unscrupulous men that ever undertook to plunder a community, and if we be men we will stand by our colors and fight them until we have driven them out of the city."

Resolutions were adopted to support the Mayor in his fight, inviting Councilmen to [illegible] opportunity now [illegible]

Germans Believe They Would Not Suffer in Case of a Tariff War.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, May 23.—Prof. Paasche, Vice President of the Reichstag and one of the best-informed men in Germany in regard to tariff questions, said to-day in discussing the recent speech of Secretary of the Treasury Shaw:

"The German Government desires to negotiate a reciprocity treaty with the United States, but it is not afraid of retaliation. German industry feels the same way. This is shown by the fact that while formerly anti-American speeches on the tariff led to uproar among the members of the Left in the Reichstag, such speeches are now favorably received.

"As a matter of fact, many industries would be delighted were American products shut out. This is true, for example, of the electrical industry, while some of the leading German banks are interested in Roumanian and Russian oil fields and would be glad to exclude the products of the Standard Oil Company. The Agrarians, of course, would be more than delighted were American grain kept out of this country.

"It is argued that Germany cannot get along without American food products, but we managed to do very well when we had a tariff war with Russia, which supplies us with a large proportion of our grain.

"Germany is tired of giving and not receiving anything in return."

At the convention of the National Liberal Party which has just been concluded at Dresden, the strongest language was used against what was described as America's grasping tariff policy.

PENSIONED FORGER AT WORK?

Skill Displayed in Raising Check Causes Pinkertons to Think So.

Information concerning the methods pursued in dealing with forgers of exceptional ability came to light at the hearing before Magistrate Crane, in the Tombs Court, yesterday, on the charge of trying to utter a raised check made by the Pinkerton Detective Agency against Frank Clifton, a bartender, of 160 West Fourth Street. It was said that five of the cleverest forgers and check raisers in this country are now pensioned on their promise not to do any work of the kind that banks most fear.

A feature of the case against Clifton is the skill displayed in raising the check which Clifton tried to cash. The Bankers' Association and the Pinkertons think that one of their pensioners has broken his word.

Clifton, who was arrested on May 17 while trying to get the check cashed at the office of Thomas Cook & Son, tourist agents, says he received it from an old man, who wanted him to get some European tourist tickets for part of the money. Clifton was held in $2,500 bail for trial.

Assistant District Attorney Kresel explained to the court the process used in raising the check. Originally drawn by Bloomingdale Brothers for $110.58, to the order of the Fenwick Hosiery Mills of this city, it had been stolen out of the mails. All but the signature was erased by the use of strong acids, whereupon the check was filled in again for $2,800 and made payable to "M. O. Hanlon."

The number of the check was also changed, thus making identification more difficult.

The forging was done so cleverly that a teller at the Second National Bank certified the check without hesitation. The disclosure was brought about by the caution of a clerk in the tourist office. The clerk called up Bloomingdale Brothers while pretending to go for change. The reply he received was that the check, whose number he gave, was only for $2.94. Then the arrest followed.

The police say that Clifton has a clear record.

SHOE AN INFERNAL MACHINE.

Dynamite in Heel—Pittsburg Woman Has Narrow Escape.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, May 23.—Mrs. Lulu Engle, wife of George Engle of Uniontown, returned from shopping this afternoon, and found on the rear porch a shoe box, neatly packed, as though it had just been delivered from a store.

She took it into the house, discovered that it contained a pair of new shoes, and concluded that her husband had bought them and sent them home as a surprise. She was about to try them on, when she discovered that they were several sizes too large. Examining them more carefully, she also noticed that something was wrong with one of the heels.

Mrs. Engle became suspicious, and called her husband home. He knew nothing about the shoes, and notified County Detective McBeth. The latter took them to the office of District Attorney Thomas H. Hudson. There the shoe with the suspicious-looking heel was taken apart.

It was found that the wooden part of the heel had been drilled out and the cavity filled with dynamite and paper soaked with nitro-glycerine. There was enough of it to wreck a building. Attached to four iron pegs were explosive caps. Had Mrs. Engle put on the shoe and placed her weight on it the caps would have exploded the dynamite.

STRIKE PARLEYS OVER, CHICAGO TROOPS READY

Last Peace Effort Fails and Sheriff Warns Against Riot.

TO INVOLVE MORE TRADES

Employers' Association Gains Support—Twelve Strikers Indicted for Assault with Intent to Kill.

CHICAGO, May 23.—Sheriff Barrett this evening announced that all negotiations for settlement of the teamsters' strike were at an end. A call for State troops was in the hands of Gov. Deneen, he said, and a telegraphic message making the call operative would be sent on the first outbreak of violence.

Sheriff Barrett remained on duty in his office until midnight. He said:

"At the first outbreak of trouble which in any way approaches the rioting we have had I shall call for troops. I will do everything in my power to maintain order, but the minute it gets beyond me I will appeal to the Governor, and the troops will be on the ground in less than two hours."

A large consignment of riot cartridges has been received at the local armories. They differ from the ordinary rifle bullet, in that they contain three buckshot each instead of the single steel bullet.

Special inspections were held this evening for all the Chicago regiments. At the First Regiment the Third Battalion was inspected in khaki uniform, and a battalion of the Second Regiment likewise was hurried into readiness.

The last conference looking toward a peaceable adjustment was held to-night between James B. Barry, business agent for the Express Drivers' Union, and the local managers of the seven express companies. The conversation was brief and pointed. Business Agent Barry opened the negotiations by saying:

"Our position is this: I want all the men reinstated except those who have been guilty of violence. I cannot do anything different. That is what the local union wants, and that is what the local officers have told me to demand.

"That is all that I can do. The men told me that all wanted to go back in a body or they would not go back at all. That is the position of the union and the union officers."

The reply of the representatives of the express companies was:

"Our opposition to the reinstatement of the men will be the same four years from now as it is to-day. We will not take them back under any circumstances."

This brought the conference to a close, and all parties concerned left the City Hall.

The spread of the strike to-day was not as large as was expected. Four hundred and sixty-two drivers, employed by twenty-eight firms belonging to the Lumbermen's Association, went out. In each case the men were ordered to make deliveries to boycotted houses.

Fifty-five other firms belonging to the Lumbermen's Exchange will make similar requests of their men to-morrow, and by night it is expected that the full number of 2,000 drivers employed by these concerns will be on strike.

At a meeting to-day of the United Employers' Association of Wood Industries, composed of five associations embracing 135 firms owning lumber yards, planing mills, sash and door factories, &c., it was decided to call on their drivers to make deliveries. This will force out 1,800 additional men.

Edward Hines, President of the Association of Wood Industries, said to-night:

"I am in this thing now to fight it out. We may just as well have it over once for all. The United Employers' Association of Wood Industries is affiliated with the Chicago Employers' Association, which has been fighting the strike thus far, and of course we will work in connection with them."

Unless the strike is ended within a short time the carpenters, stone masons, and other affiliated organizations are bound to become involved.

Judge Kohlsaat of the United States District Court ruled this afternoon that Cornelius P. Shea, President of the Teamsters' Union; James B. Barry, business agent of the Express Drivers' Union; Adolph P. Feil, a striking express driver; John H. Donahue, a striking express driver, and Bernad Mulligan, President of the Express Drivers' Union, must answer the questions put to them in the hearing on the strike before Master in Chancery Sherman. He issued orders summoning sixty-one men to show why they should not be punished for contempt in violating injunctions forbidding interference with wagons.

He handed down an injunction restraining the Goodrich Steamboat Company from discriminating against the carrying of Montgomery, Ward & Co.'s goods.

Twelve strikers were indicted to-day on the charge of assault with intent to commit murder.

The men indicted are the following: Charles Casey, business agent of the Carriage and Wagon Workers' Union; Henry J. Newman, Secretary of the Union; Edward Feeley, Marcus Looley, Charles Gilhooley, Edward Shields, George Mullin, George Meller, George Mueller, Frank Novak, George Deutch, and John Heiden, members of the Executive Board of the union.

Superintendent E. G. Cooley is investigating charges that public school teachers have in many instances incited the children to "strike."

"The teachers have been affiliated, I understand, with the Federation of Labor for a long time. While I know none of the details of the organization as regards the teachers, I know that they hold meetings in secret."

BARON A PRISONER.

De Ketchendorf Fought Policeman in Theatre Lobby.

"What, lay hands on me—me of the German nobility!" said one of a party of three—two men and a woman—to Policeman Strebel last night in the lobby of the Victoria Theatre. There had been a racket in the lobby.

Following the man's declaration he thrust his fist toward Strebel's eye.

The policeman dodged and countered. The woman screamed. This brought Policeman Goetzger and a crowd. Struggling and kicking, the man who said he was of the German nobility, was taken to the West Forty-seventh Street Station. His two companions went along. The prisoner gave his card to the Sergeant. "Baron Charles de Ketchendorf" it read. The man said he lived at 135 West Ninetieth Street and has no other business than that of being a "gentleman." The policeman said he wasn't acting like one when he saw him, and accused him of being disorderly.

His male friend, a tall, military-looking man, gave his name as Mr. Rose; [illegible]

GRAFT BILL A MILLION.

Philbin Says This City Pays That to Police Every Year.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., May 23.—Eugene Philbin, formerly District Attorney of New York County, lectured before the students of Cornell University to-day on the workings of the District Attorney's office in New York.

Mr. Philbin told how the District Attorney had to contend with a corrupt police force. He said that his conservative estimate of the annual sum paid to the police as graft or tribute was $1,000,000. Of his own knowledge, he said, the income of the Tenderloin precinct was $20,000 per month, and that some of the tribute paid in this district had been $500 per month for gambling houses, $500 for opening a disorderly house, and $30 per month for running it. Of this amount a large percentage had gone "higher up."

"Nevertheless," said Mr. Philbin, "the citizens of New York were much better protected against crime under Devery's administration of the police than they are now. Then there was respect and responsibility in the force. Now Headquarters can command no respect or confidence."

Mr. Philbin gave what he said was the District Attorney's theory of the Nan Patterson case. It was that the accused woman secured the revolver with the intention only of using it as a last resort to influence Young not to abandon her, but that in a fit of passion she shot him and put the revolver into his pocket.

ANTI-ROCKEFELLER BAPTISTS.

Boston Pastor Heads Movement to Reject Gifts from Him.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., May 23.—The Rev. Herbert S. Johnson, pastor of the Warren Avenue Baptist Church of Boston, one of the largest churches of the denomination in that city, declared here to-day that the Baptist clergymen throughout the country were in revolt against John D. Rockefeller's gifts to the Church. Asked if the Baptists were to continue to receive Mr. Rockefeller's money, he said:

"While the masses of the Baptists are not affected with the feeling of protest, nevertheless, to my personal knowledge, there are Baptist ministers in all parts of the United States, from Maine to California and North and South, who are ready to unite in a public protest. I believe this protest will be made.

"It is not a sporadic uprising, but part of a movement calculated to change the standard of ethics in the Churches of the United States. The movement will crystallize soon. These are facts which no newspaper has hinted at before this, because it was not known that such a plan was on.

"An interview with me on tainted money, along with the statements of others, was telegraphed all over the country. The result has been a flood of letters from every quarter of the continent, and they are all in the same strain. It is not the Congregationalists alone who are aroused over the disastrous moral effect of taking this money.

"I think Mr. Rockefeller should restore his wealth to the Government, or give it to philanthropy, but before doing so he should acknowledge publicly that he gives the money as a penitent. Under those circumstances the Church would be justified in accepting his money. It cannot accept it from one who claims to be in the spirit of Christ and who yet has laid the foundation of his wealth in outrageous injustice and oppression."

FRANKLIN, N. H., May 23.—The general association of Congregational churches of New Hampshire to-day voted to have copies of abstracts of an address by the Rev. Henry A. Blake of Rochester on "Defective Ethical Standards" printed and sent to the American Board of Foreign Missions. The Rev. Mr. Blake said in part:

"An unscrupulous man cannot wipe out his wrong by an act of generosity. It is not to be wondered at that protests against the acceptance by church institutions of such gifts should be made. The ethics of getting is quite as important as the ethics of giving."

WHY PRESIDENT HAS A TRAIN.

Saves Traveling Public Much Inconvenience, It Is Explained.

CHICAGO, May 23.—General Passenger Agent Lynch of the Big Four Road threw some new light to-day on the question why railroads run a President's special train.

"The railroads," he said, "do not carry the President of the United States in a special train over the country for fun, for glory, or for advertising purposes, but because the Chief Executive may not be carried on a regular train, as it would handicap the general operation of the road and work a hardship on the traveling public.

"No regular train could possibly adhere to its schedule were the President on board. The fact that he was a passenger could not be kept secret, and at every station and cross roads there would be a crowd demanding to see and hear him make a speech. There would be a delay of ten or fifteen minutes at every station, and every other passenger on the train would be greatly inconvenienced.

"The President's special train inconveniences no one, and the roads would rather go to the expense of running a special train free than subject the traveling public to the annoyances unavoidable if the President were carried on a regular train."

AUTOS RUIN BERRIES.

Throw Clouds of Dirt Upon Strawberry Beds—Grower Complains.

Special to The New York Times.

ORANGE, N. J., May 23.—Another crime has been laid at the door of the automobile. It is said to have ruined the strawberry crop in Hilton, which is part of South Orange Township. Henry Joralemon, who is one of the largest growers of the luscious berry in Hilton, has memorialized the South Orange Township Committee and asked it to save the crops of himself and his neighbors. Hilton is right on the beaten track to Bernardsville and other popular Summer places, and many big cars race through the place every day at top speed.

They throw up great clouds of dust, which settles on the berries. The beds are soon covered, and the crops are already seriously affected. Mr. Joralemon has asked the Township Committee to take some action to stop the trouble. He says that from early morning until night, on Sundays especially, a cloud of dust stirred up by the automobiles rises continuously from the roads and covers the berries with dirt. Chairman Smith of the committee said to-day that the complaint certainly was reasonable, and that steps would have to be taken in the very near future.

MRS. HOWARD GOULD'S AUTO BURNS IN 5TH AV.

Hose Wagon Horse Killed on His Way to the Fire.

TO SAVE WOMAN AND CHILD

After Waldorf Crowd Sees Car Destroyed, Tenderloin Children Honor Their Pet, Black Dick.

Mrs. Howard Gould's big blue touring car began to burn up last night at 6 o'clock on Fifth Avenue, at Thirty-third Street, where it was standing empty. Martin Keeley, driver of Hose Wagon No. 1, from the engine house at Seventh Avenue and Twenty-ninth Street, was urging his horses on to the place of the fire, when, as he turned his horses into Sixth Avenue, he saw an old woman leading a little child just in front of the animals. He swung the horses toward the elevated pillar on the left. His generalship was successful. The left horse, Black Dick, struck the iron post square with his head, and brought the hose wagon to a sudden stop. But Black Dick was dead. The old woman and the child disappeared in the crowd. While Black Dick was dying the guests of the Waldorf-Astoria were watching the automobile burn up.

The automobile had been sent to the carriage establishment of A. T. Demarest & Co., at Fifth Avenue and Thirty-third Street, for repairs. A workman had wheeled it into the street to give it a good sweeping preparatory to beginning work on it. The gasoline tank leaked, and underneath the big machine a pile of the inflammable stuff soon collected.

Then came along an Irishman with his pipe in his mouth. He was looking at the huge machine, with its leather top and its plentiful supply of baskets. He asked some one what such an automobile costs, and was answered, truthfully enough, "$10,000."

The Irishman dropped his pipe. It rolled into the pool of gasoline, this blazed up, and the tank exploded. The explosion shattered a good part of the woodwork into kindling wood that burned easily. Then the firemen came, and with their picks and axes tore off the tires and stripped away the leather top.

When it was all over there was a wide pool of water outside the Demarest establishment. Lying around in it were stray bits of leather and wood and rubber and iron. The firemen said the machine had been "very severely damaged." They were right.

Black Dick, the hose wagon horse, was nine years old, and had been in the service five years. He was a great favorite among the hundreds of children along Twenty-ninth Street, and the near by sections of Seventh Avenue. Many a youngster from the Thirtieth Street School has gone without the cakes given him for luncheon that he might see Black Dick eat them. When the body of the old horse was taken away to the Street Cleaning Department dock, the wagon was followed by a long procession of Tenderloin children.

One forward youngster started a collection among the boys for a floral offering for Black Dick. They got up 20 cents, and the florist at Thirty-fourth Street and Sixth Avenue, finding the destination of the flowers, gave them more flowers than the boys could have bought for ten times 20 cents.

DIAMONDS TO BE HIGHER.

De Beers Syndicate to Make Importers Take Larger Stones.

Diamond importers who buy rough stones from the De Beers selling syndicate in London have received notices in the last few days of new terms of sale which will advance the prices. The diamond-buying portion of the public will soon feel a little stiffening in the prices of gems.

The syndicate raised prices several times last year and on Jan. 1, this year—5 per cent. on each occasion—but the importation of diamonds has increased steadily each month.

After this the importer must take the series of stones in sizes up to the largest, as well as smaller gems, in whatever assortment they may be offered, or go out of business as far as the syndicate is concerned. With all of the jubilation that occurs when big diamonds are discovered, the large sizes are not regarded with favor by the men who cut and polish gems for the market. Previous to this the importer was required to accept only those stones that weighed from one to fifteen carats; above this he had discretion in accepting or refusing stones in any lot.

The stones weighing more than two carats are commonly cut down into one or two carat gems, and the splinters of gems left over in the process are then shipped back to Europe, where they are sold for $10 a carat or thereabout to firms that make a business of cutting gems smaller than any made in the factories of the United States. It is quite usual for the cutter to sell in the form of these pieces at $10 a carat goods for which he paid $40 to $60 a carat.

Nobody expects that any one of the nine importing firms in the United States that buy directly from the London syndicate will display any opposition to the new conditions. The penalty of refusal to accept a shipment would be the displacement of the importer on the syndicate's list of buyers in favor of another merchant, and as many are awaiting such an opportunity the syndicate which controls the diamond markets of the world is not afraid of losing customers.

THEATRE AT 65TH STREET.

Playhouse to be Built Next to the Broadway Arcade.

The northerly limit for the building of "downtown" theatres is to be advanced still further, according to an announcement made yesterday that a new playhouse will be built on the north side of Sixty-fifth Street, just west of Broadway, adjoining the Broadway Arcade, and between that structure and the High School of Commerce. The Broadway Arcade, as well as the plot at the rear, upon which it is proposed to build the new theatre, is owned by the Empire Square Realty Company, in which John L. Miller is the leading spirit.

There was recorded yesterday a mortgage for $350,000, given by the Empire Square Realty Company to the Title Guarantee and Trust Company, covering the holdings of the former at the northwest corner of Broadway and Sixty-fifth Street.

Plans for the theatre have been completed, and it is said that contracts will be let immediately so that the structure will be finished in time for the next theatrical season.

ALARM REGARDING KAISERIN.

But Report That She Is Worse Is Apparently Not Justified.

WIESBADEN, May 23.—The Emperor and Empress intended to leave here for Berlin to-night, but their departure has again been postponed.

Dr. Zunocker, physician to the Empress, has arrived in Wiesbaden to examine the injury to the empress's head caused by her fall downstairs.

Apparently there is no change for the worse in her Majesty's condition, and the latest news is that she is doing well. However, the square in front of the palace is closed to vehicles, so that the Empress may have perfect rest. This gave the public the impression that her Majesty's condition was worse.

BOY SAVED EXPRESS.

Long Island Lad Saw Heavy Wheel on Track—Had It Removed.

MINEOLA, L. I., May 23.—Five-year-old Theodore Biedinger of 37 Grand Avenue, Richmond Hill, whose father is in the Post Office service and is attached to Station E in Manhattan, averted what might have been a serious wreck at New Hyde Park early to-night by calling his mother's attention to a wagon wheel on the rails just before an express train was due to pass.

The boy saw the wheel and told his mother. She tried to get off the track, but it was too heavy. Then she called the station agent, who removed it. A few seconds later the express rushed by.

BABY GIRL'S LONG TRIP.

Traveling from San Francisco to Germany Without Relatives.

Special to The New York Times.

MOBILE, Ala., May 23.—Gertrude Eidelhoff, four years old, passed through here to-night on her way from San Francisco to Germany to join her brother and sister.

The child is unaccompanied by relatives, but is in charge of a nurse furnished by the railroad company. The nurse will leave her at New York, when the little one is safe aboard a liner.

It was announced yesterday at the Southern Pacific Railroad offices in this city that Henry Dengal, New York ticket agent of the road, would go to Washington to meet little Gertrude Eidelhoff. He will escort her here and keep her at his home until the North German Lloyd steamship Neckar sails on June 3. The child is traveling first class—parlor and sleeping car—and will occupy a first-class stateroom on the liner.

TOOK FOUR TO SAVE BOY.

Three Plunged Into River and Other Resuscitated Him.

Three men jumped overboard to rescue a boy six years old, who had fallen into the river at the foot of Coentis Slip yesterday afternoon, and it remained for a fourth man to save the boy's life by inducing artificial respiration.

Thomas Heafey of 137 Washington Street was playing on some narrow timbers fastened to pilings at the bulkhead of Pier 8, East River, when he fell overboard. He stuck fast in the mud on the bottom.

Thomas Simons, sixty years old, of 7 Park Row, was first to the rescue. He dived overboard, clothes and all, and brought up the lad, but was himself exhausted and lost his hold.

John Buckley of 292 Park Row jumped in and grasped the boy's clothing, but it slipped from his grasp as he tried to save himself. Eugene Butler, forty-eight years old, employed on the pier, then leaped in and brought Thomas Heafey ashore. He seemed lifeless, but William Leonard, driving past from his home at 29 Coentis Slip, jumped from his wagon and worked over the child until he opened his eyes.

BALTIMORE'S EX-MAYOR DISAPPEARS, SAYS WIFE

Davidson Sails for Europe, Taking All His Cash, She Thinks.

A REFORMER AND FINANCIER

Large Dealer in New York Stock Market—Had Succeeded as Trust Company President.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, May 23.—Robert C. Davidson, formerly Mayor of Baltimore, until a few months ago President of the Baltimore Trust and Guarantee Company, and for many years prominent in financial and mercantile circles, has left town. His wife says she has information that he sailed for Europe on a Hamburg-American Line steamship last week. A young woman, who formerly lived in Port Deposit, Md., was a passenger, Mrs. Davidson says, on the same steamship.

Mrs. Davidson declared that her husband had converted all his securities into cash to the extent of about $175,000. When he asked if she would apply for a divorce, Mrs. Davidson said, she replied that she would not, but would make every effort to compel him to support her.

Davidson is about fifty-five years old. His wife belongs to a well-known family. They have no children.

Davidson for a year had been a large dealer in the New York stock market. He was mixed up in the Nashville Street Railway deals and in this connection was defendant in several suits. Davidson was a leader of the municipal reform movement in this city about fifteen years ago, and in 1899 was elected Mayor on a strong independent Democratic ticket. He made a good record as the city's executive, which led to his becoming the head of the Trust and Guarantee Company.

For a number of years Davidson was prominent of the affairs of the Eutaw Place Baptist Church. Before he was elected Mayor of the city he was a member of the firm of Daniel Miller & Co., and was regarded as a successful business man. The death of Mr. Miller brought Mr. Davidson $25,000, which he received for settling the estate. This was the foundation of his accumulations. Davidson made large sums in stocks.

MEXICAN BROKER A SUICIDE.

M. F. del Valle Shoots Himself in His Office Downtown.

Manuel Fernandez del Valle, Jr., a Mexican broker, killed himself last night in his office at 32 Broadway, by shooting himself in the head. He thrust his revolver into his mouth and fired. Del Valle was a man of considerable wealth. He hailed from Guadalajara, Mexico.

An empty whisky flask was lying on the floor when the man was found. A letter, ready to be mailed, and addressed to Carr Brothers, 32 Broadway, was on one of the chairs.

The firm of Carr Brothers is composed of Herbert J. Carr and Walter J. Carr. The letter did not get to them last night, of course.

"I don't know anything about Mr. Del Valle personally," said Walter J. Carr last night. "All I know is that he was wealthy, and came from Guadalajara, Mexico. He brought a letter of introduction to us. I haven't the slightest idea why he committed suicide, and I suppose the letter was a business letter."

Del Valle, when he first came to New York a little more than a month ago, put up at the Hotel Savoy, and there he stayed about two weeks. The manager of the hotel said last night that nobody in the place knew the Mexican, and that he seemed to be alone all the time.

MR. ZIEGLER NEAR DEATH.

New York Specialists Have Been Unable to Aid Him.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., May 23.—William Ziegler is hovering between life and death. Dr. John Waite Avery, his family physician, is with him almost constantly. Dr. Avery has turned all his other practice over to an assistant and has called specialists from New York in consultation. It is said that they have been unable to do anything for Mr. Ziegler.

To-day relatives of Mr. Ziegler began to arrive at his home, where it was said to-night that the patient's condition was about the same as it was last night.

A member of the household said Mr. Ziegler had been in ill health for a long time, but his present illness began two weeks ago. When Mr. Champ, his secretary, left for England he was able to be about his estate.

It was added that there was an understanding between Mr. Ziegler and Mr. Champ that if anything should happen to Mr. Ziegler the expedition of relief for the arctic explorer Fiala should not be abandoned or postponed.

$5.75 FOR JAY GOULD'S BOOK.

Was Written While Financier Was Still a Surveyor.

A book written by Jay Gould was sold in the Anderson auction rooms, 5 West Twenty-ninth Street, yesterday for $5.75. It is "A History of Delaware County and the Border Wars of New York." The book was printed in 1856, and is the only contribution to literature left by the financier. The book was written when Mr. Gould was but twenty years of age and while he was engaged in making surveys in different parts of New York State. Yesterday's price is considered low.

It used to be said in Mr. Gould's lifetime that he endeavored to buy up all the copies of his book for the purpose of destroying them. When Jay Gould was alive there was spirited bidding for the history whenever it appeared.

A quaint almanac printed in Brooklyn in 1801 and containing a crude woodcut portrait of George Washington, sold for $3.75, and a slightly imperfect copy of a little book printed by Benjamin Franklin at Philadelphia in 1739 sold for $6. It was the journal of a voyage from Gibraltar to Georgia by the Rev. George Whitefield, the evangelist.

WHITELAW REID HONORED BY REPUBLICAN CLUB

Speechmaking Not Envoy's Chief Duty, He Says.

MUST KEEP OUT OF POLITICS

Golden Rule and Monroe and Dix Doctrines Make a Good Policy, He Tells 250 at Dinner.

Whitelaw Reid, the new Ambassador to the Court of St. James's, was honored last night by the Republican Club, of which Mr. Reid has been a member for eighteen years. Although there were 250 present, most of them knew Mr. Reid well, and this fact kept from the dinner anything of the perfunctory.

The dinner was held in the large dining room on the tenth floor of the club's new building in West Fortieth Street, the only decorations added for the evening to those ordinarily belonging to the place being two gigantic American and English flags, which were draped so that they entirely covered the wall back of the main guest table.

In introducing Mr. Reid and opening the line of speeches, Mr. Stern said:

"We have rarely assembled here to honor a more distinguished American citizen than the gentleman who is our guest to-night. Your career, Mr. Reid, has been so phenomenal from the first time you entered public life that one must believe you in possession of that magic wand the touch of which turns everything into success."

Mr. Stern then proposed a toast to the health of the new Ambassador, and this was drunk by all standing. Mr. Reid then arose.

Mr. Reid's Speech.

Mr. Reid began by saying that he would not carry his politics into his embassy. All American citizens, he said, would be "alike in their right to regard the American Ambassador as their public servant."

"When," he continued, "William Jennings Bryan expressed his thanks for treatment at our embassies which was plainly due to a man whom nearly half the American people had more than once approved for their highest office, and when the President responded that, if any Ambassador had failed to extend such treatment in such a case, his shrift would have been short, there was a fit recognition of what has been the uniform policy of our Government and what it should always remain. No Ambassador has the right to carry his politics on the outward voyage beyond Sandy Hook. From that moment he represents the President and the Government of the whole American people, and the service he is sent to render is due alike to all.

"Would it be trespassing on too delicate ground if I ventured to suggest that the converse ought to be true—that there ought to be no politics at home in dealing with the embassy's work. It is of course a matter of plain National interest, not to speak of National self-respect, that a diplomatic officer, like his colleagues of the army and navy, while engaged in active service is entitled to support from home and should be held secure from attacks in the rear. Is it not just as plain that his work should be passed upon solely on National grounds and held equally secure from mere partisan attack?

ATTACKS FROM FRIENDS.

"There have been a good many alarming reports recently as to other kinds of attack—attacks from the front and by friends—which one of your representatives at least may have to encounter. Here is a great London newspaper, describing in detail the trials of 'A Persecuted Ambassador.'

Why are we so brutal to the American Ambassador. We turn him into a sort of lecturer and demand from him at every turn speeches and yet more speeches, versatility and yet more versatility. We launch him on an oratorical tour from Land's End to John o' Groat's, in placid forgetfulness that he may after all have some business of his own or his country's to attend to. One can imagine Whitelaw Reid at this moment frantically preparing himself for the fray by rereading all the standard authors he has forgotten, composing character sketches of famous Americans by the bushel, working up local color, and dictating not less than one address a day. Only by thus arming beforehand will he be able, when he has settled down among us, to feel himself a free man.

"Now, gentlemen, will you please to observe under what sort of a cross-fire your hapless Ambassador is placed. You see the demands, and yet you are aware that all these expected speeches, and even the talk I am now inflicting upon you, are in violation of the fixed and long-standing rule of our own State Department. Here, if I may venture on the indiscretion of quoting it, here are its precise terms:

It is forbidden to diplomatic officers to participate in any manner in the political concerns of the country of their residence, and they are directed especially to refrain from public expressions of opinion upon local political or other questions arising within their jurisdiction. It is deemed advisable to extend a similar prohibition against public addresses unless upon exceptional festal occasions in the country of official residence. Even upon such occasions any reference to political issues, pending in the United States or elsewhere, should be carefully avoided.

"It is interesting to recall that when this sweeping prohibition first reached me in this identical language, sixteen years ago, it came included in and made a part of my instructions, in an official circular authenticated by the significant and notable signature of Thomas F. Bayard.

WILL SAY NOTHING.

"The only excuse I am able to make for this little speech to-night, the only excuse I shall ever be able to plead, here or on the other side of the water, for my similar lapses in the future, is that it shall clearly appear that, no matter how much I talk, I do not say anything.

"Really, gentlemen, however much appearances may sometimes tend to a contrary view, the work of speechmaking is not the chief duty for which the country sends out its Ambassador. There are graver tasks, and by the record as to them the final judgment is made up. We have long been admirably served in London. Nevertheless Reverdy Johnson and James Russell Lowell and Edward J. Phelps and Robert T. Lincoln and Thomas F. Bayard, and then the man who passed from the Ambassadorship to the front rank of modern Secretaries, John Hay, and now our laureled and radiant Choate, not to speak of others—all men I have been proud to claim as my friends, and the least of whom, if there is a least among them, I am grateful to be thought not wholly unworthy to follow; all, more or less in spite of themselves, drifted into becoming known as occasional and always successful speechmakers.

"Yet the brilliancy of the whole established array has not dimmed the fame of the silent Benjamin Franklin, Agent in London for the Colonies, or of those earlier Ministers for the Republic, John Jay and Charles Francis Adams—the one of whom by a great and unpopular act of statesmanship helped the tottering infant Nation to its feet, while the other guarded it with austere fidelity and splendid success throughout as great dangers as it has encountered since Valley Forge. And now, can any of you at the moment recall a notable public speech either of them ever made in the whole course of his diplomatic career? Verily, I say unto you, an Ambassador cannot live on speeches alone."

THREADBARE PHRASES.

"Hands across the sea," "common blood," "supremacy of the Anglo-Saxon race," and so on, Mr. Reid said, were good phrases, but had served their purpose. There was a more important duty to be done than that of "jollying the English." "An Ambassador is sent to look after the interests of his own country," Mr. Reid said, emphasizing the last four words. The Ambassador, he said, who found that the interests of the country he represented and the one to whom he is sent did not conflict was fortunate. If they did conflict no Ambassador ought to sacrifice the interests of his own country through allowing his judgment to be warped or in the sordid hope of remaining persona grata.

Also, Mr. Reid said, the Ambassador who won the praise of the nation to which he was sent could hear no echo of that praise in the secret records of our State Department. John Jay and Charles Francis Adams retired with the sincere respect of both countries, although neither, Mr. Reid said, was a "jollier."

"It was a happy and illuminating phrase of our great Secretary of State when in a humorous vein he told us that our foreign policy consists chiefly in the Golden Rule and the Monroe Doctrine. It requires but another word, in fact, to make it completely comprehensive. To the Golden Rule and the Monroe Doctrine we need only add the Dix doctrine to sum up the whole body of State Department instructions for our dealings with foreign nations. No one here—no New Yorker, no American ever forgets the Dix doctrine: 'If any man hauls down the American flag, shoot him on the spot.' Neither that nor the Monroe Doctrine is international law, but both are sure to remain indefinitely fundamental parts of American international policy, and when you illumine both by the Golden Rule you have set forth what I firmly believe is the sincere and devout wish of the United States with regard to all its foreign relations and the work of all its representatives in the Diplomatic Service.

"Our use for the big stick is much the same as that of the quiet citizen—to keep off footpads and the dogs. We covet no nation's lands or other possessions. We seek only to preserve and protect our own. We have a passionate preference, manifested on all suitable occasions through more than half a century, for doing this whenever practicable by international arbitration rather than by war. We sincerely wish the prosperity and advancing freedom of all; and I fully believe we are to-day, from Atlantic to Pacific and from President to humblest citizen, as peace-loving a nation as exists in the world."

The next speaker was Sir Percy L. Sanderson, British Consul General to this port, who appeared as representative of the head of the English Embassy, Sir Mortimer Durand, now absent on a visit to his own country.

SENATOR DEPEW.

Senator Depew followed Sir Percy Sanderson.

"We have been magnificently represented abroad," the Senator said after a few jocular remarks, "but it has been at a cost and a sacrifice to our representatives which they ought not to be called on to bear. We should not have a situation where these honors cannot go to, and be carried off satisfactorily by the poor man, however superbly he be equipped. I know personally of two American representatives abroad who, too proud to resign and to poor to stay, in order to meet in the most modest way all that is expected in their position, spent the small fortunes which they had accumulated in a lifetime for the support of their families. The Government of the United States ought not to expect that."

Senator Depew then made a plea for the equipment of suitable residences for the principal representatives abroad of this Republic.

The other speakers were Charles Emory Smith, Edward Lauterbach, and John Barrett. Grace was offered at the beginning of the dinner by the Rev. Dr. MacArthur. The menu was as follows:

SUIT INVOLVES MILLIONS.

Foxhall Keene and Other New Yorkers Defendants.

Special to The New York Times.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., May 23.—Mr. and Mrs. Foxhall Keene, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Alexander, and a number of other New Yorkers were made defendants in a bill filed to-day by Georgia heirs to the estate of Ker Boyce, Sr., asking for an accounting of the property in Tennessee. Similar bills will be filed in all other States in which property is located.

Ker Boyce, Sr., died in Charleston, S. C., in 1854, leaving an estate valued at several million dollars. The estate has never been divided, although at various times the proceeds of the sale of the lands belonging to the estate have been divided among some of the heirs.

Real estate belonging to the estate is said to be located in all parts of the country. The heirs are scattered from Vermont to California, and there is a large number of them, all, with one exception, being grandchildren of the testator. Mrs. Foxhall Keene, is one of the grandchildren. H. T. Olmstead, trustee and administrator under the will of Ker Boyce, Sr., and the older heirs of the testators are made defendants to the suit. James A. Whiteside of Chattanooga, was one of the original trustees.

Valuable papers and records pertaining to the estate, which were in Hamilton County, were either lost or destroyed during the civil war.

STRANGLED IN CHAIR.

Handkerchief About Invalid's Neck Caused His Death.

Simon Zimmermann of 302 East Seventy-second Street was accidentally strangled yesterday through his extreme weakness. For the last fifteen years he had had locomotor ataxia, and two nurses were employed to care for him.

Constance Knug, one of the nurses, left him yesterday to go on an errand. He was sitting in a large armchair and was dressed in a bath robe, with a silk handkerchief about his neck. While she was away he fainted and, as his head fell forward, the handkerchief caught on the back of the chair.

He was unable to raise his head, and when the nurse returned half an hour later Zimmermann was dead.

RACING MANAGERS RAISE ADMISSIONS 50 PER CENT.

Public Must Pay $3 for Grand Stand Badges.

NO FEES FROM BOOKMAKERS

Public Asked to Make Up Loss of Revenue—One Track Manager Thinks It Means Small Purses.

With the understood approval of the Stewards of The Jockey Club, all admission fees to race tracks for the remainder of the Spring season will be raised by the several track managers, beginning with the opening of the Brooklyn Jockey Club's Gravesend meeting to-morrow. The new rates will be $3 for men and $1.50 for women patrons of the grand stand, and $1 for general admission to the field stand. The extra fee of 50 cents for paddock badges will be charged as usual. The average increase in prices is about 50 per cent.

With the increased cost to patrons of racing the metropolitan turf will enter an experimental stage, the hope and implied expectation of the track owners being that the increased gate receipts will make up for the loss of the revenue from the betting rings, which, by a conservative estimate, amounted to about $6,000 a day.

Just how the change will work remains for the Brooklyn Jockey Club's meeting to determine, but however it may affect the attendance, three tracks, the Brooklyn Jockey Club, the Coney Island Jockey Club, and the Brighton Beach Racing Association are pledged to the trial for the three meetings that follow the close of the Belmont Park meeting to-day.

The terms were agreed on at the meeting of race track managers held from Tuesday night until yesterday morning at the home of August Belmont, 44 East Thirty-fourth Street, when after a long conference, the track managers decided to follow the course adopted by the Westchester Racing Association at Belmont Park, and to refuse to accept further revenue from the betting ring or bookmakers.

In the opinion of the men who are in control of the metropolitan turf, the public will pay the larger sums for admission, and the greater receipts from the gates will offset the loss entailed by ignoring the betting rings.

ARE PREPARING FOR ATTACKS.

An influence which had much to do with the final agreement was the wish of the race track owners to cut off all connection with the betting and gambling interests in expectation of legal attacks which have been threatened by the poolroom men in revenge for the part the race track owners have had in closing the poolrooms in past seasons.

The meeting at Gravesend will begin tomorrow with the running of the Brooklyn Handicap, one of the most popular and best-advertised races of the American turf, and one that in years past has attracted to the Gravesend track crowds of from 25,000 to 40,000 visitors.

That the race this season will draw a great crowd is a certainty, and even at the increased rate for admission it seems likely that public interest in the Brooklyn Handicap will cause an attendance neary as great as the average for other years.

Under the old arrangement with the betting ring the bookmakers paid about $10,000 for each Brooklyn Handicap day and a crowd of 10,000 men in the grand stand at the new rate will make up the loss from cutting off the ring fees, even should the attendance be less than usual. The first day at the Gravesend track will hardly offer a fair test of the new plan. The real showing will come on the days following the running of the Brooklyn Handicap, when the patronage drops back to every-day figures.

It is predicted by some of the experienced men in the management of racing that the race courses, instead of obtaining a greater sum from the gate, will find such a falling off in the attendance as to more than offset the extra dollars received for grand stand badges, and that it will be but a short time before the tracks will have exchanged $3 patrons in the grand stand for $1 patrons of the field stands.

RETURN TO SMALL PURSES LIKELY.

One veteran owner and manager of race tracks said that a return to $500 purses is among the probabilities as a result of the loss of the revenue from the betting ring, as he thought the increase in the cost of racing to the general public would detract from the popularity of the sport.

It is said that P. J. Dwyer, President of the Brooklyn Jockey Club, was very unwilling to try the new plan. There was a division of opinion among the track owners. Some wished to retain the old fees from the betting ring in spite of threatened prosecution by the lawyers for the poolroom men, who it was said would attempt to fix the responsibility for conducting gaming on the racetrack managers by establishing the fact that they derived a revenue from the betting rings. Another element wished to cut off the betting ring receipts, and proposed to continue racing at the old fees for admission. The compromise on no fees from the betting but increased admission rates then was made.

The new plan will mean a saving of about $50 a day to each bookmaker who transacts business at a racetrack hereafter, but no other change in the general conduct of the betting ring will be made. It is understood by the bookmakers that they alone are responsible should there be any attacks by the poolroom men.

The free betting ring will be regulated by John Cavanagh, as it was when the bookmakers paid for the betting privilege, and the individual layers will have to obtain his approval before they take places in the ring.

Of the conference which resulted in the decision to raise prices, P. J. Dwyer, President of the Brooklyn Jockey Club, said yesterday:

MR. DWYER'S STATEMENT.

"It being clearly shown that certain conditions not favorable to the sport were gaining strength and that the same conditions were proving vexatious to those who make up the race track attendance, it was decided to adopt remedial measures at all hazards.

"Although it comes rather hard to be the first to introduce a new schedule, the Brooklyn Jockey Club will never go when the right step in advance has been pointed out. With a good card and the Brooklyn Handicap for Thursday, I hardly believe Gravesend will miss any of her old patrons on account of this increase in prices. They are all good sportsmen."

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., May 23.—The inventory of the estate of Mrs. Hannah E. Nelson of New Market, mother of Mrs. Charles L. Fair of San Francisco, who with her husband was killed while automobiling in France in the Summer of 1903, shows that her wealth has been greatly overestimated. Instead of her estate being $500,000, the inventory shows that it is worth only $37,448.93, not including any real estate.

MARGARET D. JACKSON HURT.

Writer Strangely Injured by a Fall—May Not Recover Speech.

Margaret Dale Jackson, the English writer and wife of Dr. Charles Ross Jackson of 220 West One Hundred and Seventh Street, is suffering from a fall against a window sill, which loosened her vocal cords and nearly ended her life. It is not known whether she will ever be able to speak again.

Her mother-in-law's newly arrived trunk was the occasion of Mrs. Jackson's illness. The porter deposited the trunk late Thursday night by the corner of one of the windows of the Jackson suite looking out upon One Hundred and Seventh Street. A few minutes thereafter Mrs. Jackson went toward the window to pull down the shade. She stumbled over the trunk. As she fell forward her jaw was brought into contact with the window sill with such force as to force the larynx up, thereby splitting it and loosening the vocal cords.

The mother-in-law heard the noise of the fall and ran in. She found Mrs. Jackson unconscious on the floor. A porter ran after Dr. Jackson, who had just gone out, and he and Dr. Bingham worked over the patient all night.

Dr. Jackson said last night that his wife had sat up yesterday for the first time, and had become able to whisper. "it was a narrow escape from death," he said. "If the injury is permanent she will ever be able to talk again. We hope for the best."

GIRL AND SOLDIER GONE.

She in Her Best Clothes and Mother Fears It's an Elopement.

Mrs. Otilda Kleinfeldt, proprietress of a hotel at Atkin Street and Stanley Avenue, East New York, asked the police last night to send out a general alarm for her sixteen-year-old daughter Dorothy. She fears that Dorothy has run away with a member of the Forty-seventh Regiment of Brooklyn. Her chief reason for this fear is that Dorothy wore her best clothes, a gray cravenette coat, black plush hat with ostrich feathers, silk waist, and black skirt; also her gold watch and chain.

The young man in the case was threatened with jail for non-payment of his regimental dues, Mrs. Kleinfeldt said, and as he was her daughter's sweetheart she gave him $28 with which to settle. This was a day or so before her daughter disappeared.

The girl took with her $70 which she drew from the Nassau Building and Loan Association, at Bradford Street and Atlantic Avenue, where she had an account accumulated at the rate of $1 a week. She was last seen about 6:30 on Monday night. Her mother had gone shopping early in the afternoon and did not return till 7 o'clock. Her daughter had spoken of going to visit a friend in East New York, and her mother consequently thought she had gone there. The servant told Mrs. Kleinfeldt that Dorothy had taken with her a large package. This must have contained extra clothing.

Mrs. Kleinfeldt learned later that her daughter had not called at the friend's home. She was seen in her sweetheart's company by an acquaintance, and it was discovered later that the young man was also missing from home. Dorothy only a few days ago told her mother that she would marry her soldier boy, even if she had to elope with him.

THREATENS ASPHALT SUITS.

Trust Warns City Not to Patronize Its Rivals.

Suits aggregating nearly $2,000,000 a year are threatened against the city by the Asphalt Trust if the city continues to use for paving asphalt that may be taken from the Bermudez Lake in Venezuela by the opposing companies which are in possession of the output as a result of action taken recently by President Castro.

The company asserts that the city will be the receiver of stolen goods if it accepts Bermudez asphalt through any other source, and like notice had been served on the Pan-American Company, the A. L. Barber Company, and the two local agents of these companies, the Uvalde Asphalt Company and the Harlem Contracting Company.

The Pan-American Company and the A. L. Barber Company, both of which have Amzi L. Barber for President, control the output of the Bermudez lakes under the new Castro agreements. Both companies sell to other allied companies, which in turn lay the pavement. The Uvalde Company here lays the sheet asphalt, and the Harlem Company is preparing to make and lay asphalt blocks under city contracts. The city contracts run from $1,500,000 to $2,000,000 a year, and all may be threatened by the litigation.

ROJESTVENSKY TO LOSE THE SUPREME COMMAND

Birileff to Supersede Him Even If He Is in Good Health.

A REPORT THAT HE IS DEAD

Russian Admiralty Ridicules It—Denial That a Philippine Base Is Contemplated.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES.
Special Cable. Copyright, 1905.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 23.—The Admiralty and the Foreign Office, as usual, profess entire ignorance of Admiral Rojestvensky's movements, but the Foreign Office denies that the Admiral contemplates making a base at the north of Luzon or at any point in the Philippines.

I am informed that Admiral Birileff is invested with the same authority as were Admirals Makaroff and Skrydloff, with the title of Commander of the Naval Forces in the Pacific. He will be subordinate to Gen. Linevitch, but superior to Admiral Rojestvensky. The supersession of Rojestvensky in the supreme command therefore follows, irrespective of his physical fitness to retain it after his arrival at Vladivostok.

Considerations of Rojestvensky's unfitness for the duties of Port Admiral and Dockyard Administrator afford a reasonable explanation of the preference given to Birileff.

There are fanciful reports regarding Rojestvensky's numerous ailments and of alleged interviews with Mme. Rojestvensky. The Admiral's nerves are badly shaken, but that, probably, would not prevent him from fighting a good fleet action if Togo decided to engage him.

By The Associated Press.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 23.—A report of Admiral Rojestvensky's death is ridiculed at the Admiralty.

PARIS, May 23.—Nothing is known here of the report that Admiral Rojestvensky is dead except a brief extract from a London paper, to which no importence is attached, owing to the complete absence of knowlege of the whereabouts of the Russian fleet.

The officials of the Russian Embassy here discredit the rumor as circulated in the interest of the Japanese.

LONDON, Wednesday, May 24.—The Shanghai correspondent of The Morning Post says he learns from a trustworthy source that Admiral Togo's fleet is still off Ma-sam-Pho, on the southeast cost of Koreu.

RUSSIAN CAVALRY ROUTED.

Retreat in Disorder—Linevitch Ready for a Big Battle.

TOKIO, May 23.—Imperial army headquarters, reporting to-day, says:

"The Russian cavalry, which made a detour toward Fakoman from the right bank of the Liao River, were frequently defeated by our rearguards. On May 20 they camped with the main strength at Siao-ta-Tse, twenty-six miles from Fakoman, and on May 21 they retreated to the right bank of the Malien River.

"In the meantime a few camps of the enemy's force remaining on the left bank of the Malien River were defeated and retreated northward in disorder."

ST. PETERSBURG, May 23.—The news from the front continues to point to the imminence of a renewal of fighting on a large scale.

Gen. Linevitch is pressing the Japanese centre both on the line of the railway and on the Mandarin Road, but whether he is simply feeling out Marshal Oyama's strength or has assumed a genuine offensive is not yet clear.

There is no doubt, however, that Linevitch has made complete preparations for a big battle. All the Russian sick and wounded who were at Harbin and places south of there have been transported westward to Irkutsk, and orders have been given to clear the intervening hospitals. The sanitary trains have also been ordered to the front.

Gen. Linevitch in a dispatch dated May 21 announces that the Russian detachment east of the railroad, which on May 18 approached the village of Sha-ho-Tse and was attacked by a considerable force of Japanese from the coal mines south of that place, occupied Sha-ho-Tse on May 19 and continued southward on May 20.

Prince Troubetskoy's detachment met the Japanese artillery fire on May 17 near Chang-tu-Foo station, but the Japanese were forced to evacuate the position and retire southward. The Prince on May 20 advanced further south.

QUARRELS WITH KUROPATKIN.

Linevitch and ex-Chief Out Again—Both Complain to Czar.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES.
Special Cable. Copyright, 1905.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 23.—According to information from a trustworthy source the personal bickerings between Gens. Linevitch and Kuropatkin have broken out afresh. Both Generals are constantly telegraphing complaints to the Emperor.

It is said that Kuropatkin, who at first declared his intention of returning, is now determined to remain.

On the other hand, the Novosti reports that Gen. Kaulbars is on the point of returning on sick leave.

A SHIPLOAD OF LUNATICS.

Forty-four Insane Russians from Port Arthur to be Taken Home.

CHE-FOO, May 23.—Forty-four insane Russian sailors and soldiers from Port Arthur, including a violently insane Lieutenant, who was on the Sevastopol during the siege, arrived here to-day, and were immediately transferred to the Russian improvised hospital ship Whampol, under the British flag, for transportation direct to Odessa.

The party is accompanied by a physician who was a medical member of Viceroy Alexieff's staff and by other officers and attendants, exceeding in number the patients.

The condition of the insane men varies from a mild melancholia to the violent stage. The majority are suffering from hallucinations, rendering an attendant for each one necessary. The officers in charge state that many of these cases are the result of the long incarceration of sick men in hospitals during the terror of the siege. Some cases are the result of scurvy and the condition of others is due to the terrific nervous strain of continued bombardments and incessant service.

PREVENTED JEWISH MASSACRE.

Shalinpin, the Singer, Made an Appeal to Kharkoff Workingmen.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES.
Special Cable. Copyright, 1905.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 23.—The famous singer, Shalinpin, gave a concert to workingmen at Kharkoff and afterward delivered an impressive address in which he urged the audience not to molest the Jews, who, after all, he said, were their brothers.

It is believed that this address prevented another Jewish massacre. Strangely enough, the authorities forbade the newspapers to print reports of the concert.

DESERTING RUSSIAN CHURCH.

Many Thousands of Poles Take Advantage of the Czar's Ukase.

WARSAW, May 23.—Since the promulgation of the Emperor's ukase conceding liberty of worship and abolishing the religious disabilities of the Roman Catholic and other Christian communities, 26,000 persons are reported to have left the Russian Church for the Roman Catholic Church in the Governments of Siedlce and Lublin. The censor has ordered the Polish press not to make any reference to the subject.

In one village of 680 inhabitants 678 have changed their faith.

The authorities of the Russian Church are taking stringent measures to prevent these desertions. One order in the Russian Church, called the Brotherhood of the Holy Virgin, has issued a violent manifesto against Poles and Roman Catholics.

KALEIEFF GLAD TO DIE.

He Says on the Scaffold That He Did Not Ask for Pardon.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 23.—It is semi-officially announced that Ivan Kaleieff, who murdered the Grand Duke Sergius at Moscow on Feb. 17, was hanged at 3 o'clock this morning.

On the scaffold Kaleieff made a speech in which he said:

"It is said that I asked for pardon. It is a lie. I am faithful to the tradition of the People's Will. I do not ask any favor. I am glad to die."

The People's Will is the name formerly borne by the party identical with the present Social Revolutionaries.

ADMITS PASSPORT FRAUDS.

English Writer Thought He Was Helping Russian Liberals.

LONDON, May 23.—H. N. Brailsford of Hampstead, a writer for The Fortnightly and other reviews, and A. H. M. McCulloch, who is said to be an actor, were arraigned at Bow Street Police Court this morning.

They were charged with obtaining under false pretenses a passport, intended to be fraudulently used by some other person, thus endangering the peaceful relations between the British and Russian nations. The Solicitor General, Sir Edward Carson, made a statement on behalf of the Crown, and after some unimportant evidence had been given the case was adjourned for a fortnight.

The Solicitor General in his statement explained how the defendants obtained the passport, subsequently found in possession of the man who was killed by the premature explosion of a bomb in the Hotel Bristol, St. Petersburg, on March 11, saying it was accomplished by "deliberately deceiving the Foreign Secretary." Sir Edward Carson also presented a statement made by Brailsford, admitting that he had agreed with a person connected with the revolutionary movement in Russia to furnish him with some passports, on the express promise that they should only be used for the purpose of peaceful propaganda.

PROPAGANDA BY EXPLOSION.

Boxes Blown Up, Scattering Revolutionary Proclamations.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 23.—While the public were promenading in the Taurida Garden, back of the Taurida Palace, here yesterday momentary consternation was caused by the explosion of three boxes in different parts of the Garden, scattering multi-colored revolutionary proclamations in every direction.

Another box discovered by the police was examined and was found to be provided with a time mechanism and some new explosive, the character of which the authorities have not yet discovered.

After a slight panic the people took the incident good-naturedly and scrambled for the proclamations, the police not attempting to interfere.

The Chief of Police of the Snyiten district, near Riga, has been shot and seriously wounded by a band of roughs. Ten arrests have been made in connection with the shooting.

Hear of Mishap to Japan's Fleet.

GUNSHU PASS, May 23.—A report is in circulation among the Chinese that the Japanese fleet has sustained a misfortune, the precise nature of which is not stated.

The foregoing probably refers to the report emanating from Paris and London early this month to the effect that the Japanese flagship Mikasa had been lost in the Straits of Korea, no confirmation of which has been received.

Clado to Sue the Admiralty.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 23.—Capt. Clado, whose dismissal from the navy was gazetted on May 20, intends to commence suit against the Admiralty for the restitution of his rank.

CHILE TO BUILD RAILWAYS.

Government Is to Borrow $36,000,000 to Construct Lines.

SANTIAGO, Chile, May 23.—The Government has decided to issue bonds to the amount of 100,000,000 pesos (about $35,000,000) and bearing interest at the rate of 6 per cent., to build a system of railroads throughout the whole country.

LUNA PARK'S LOST SQUAD.

Finding of Stray Children Announced at All the Shows.

Children may get lost at Luna Park, but it was demonstrated last Sunday that they cannot stay lost very long. Every one of Thompson & Dundy's twelve hundred employes is a member of the "Lost Child Squad," which makes it its business to be on the lookout for children unaccompanied by grown-ups.

Sunday afternoon, the first workings of the system were tried on a little chap, who was found crying "Mamma!" at the "Shoot the Chutes" landing. One of the attendants took him to the Administration Building, where the matron took charge of him.

In five minutes after this announcers in all the thirty shows were telling their audiences that a boy giving the name of Philip Francis was waiting for his mother at the Administration Building.

The parents heard the announcement and quickly reclaimed their son.

HAY AND DELCASSE TO MEET.

Secretary of State, Now Quite Well, Will Arrive in Paris Monday.

PARIS, May 23.—Secretary Hay will arrive here next Monday for a stay of two days. Arrangements have been made for him to meet Foreign Minister Delcassé. This is likely to arouse considerable speculation, but Mr. Hay's only purpose is to make a visit of courtesy to M. Delcassé, and the latter, on hearing this, expressed a desire to make the first call upon the American Secretary of State.

The reception of Mr. Hay would have assumed a notable character at the Elysée and the Foreign Office had the Secretary not requested the avoidance of official and social functions, owing to his wish to obtain the full benefit from his rest cure at Bad Nauheim.

BERLIN, May 23.—Ambassador Tower called on Chancellor von Bülow yesterday with a message to the Chancellor from Secretary Hay, who regretted that he found himself unable to come to Berlin.

Mr. Hay desired Mr. Tower to say that only by the advice of his physicians had he given up his intention to make a personal call on the Chancellor. The latter was much pleased with the Secretary's message.

BAD NAUHEIM, May 23.—The dilation of Secretary Hay's heart, the functional disorder for which he came here to be treated, has, according to Prof. Groedel, entirely disappeared. The professor pronounces Mr. Hay well.

The Secretary, it is said, has no intention of retiring, and looks forward to years of public activity.

BIDS FAREWELL TO CHOATE.

King Edward Receives the Retiring American Ambassador.

LONDON, May 23.—King Edward to-day received in farewell audience the American Ambassador, Mr. Choate, who presented his letters of recall. The audience was private, only Foreign Secretary Lansdowne being present.

Subsequently Mr. Choate and Secretary Carter lunched with his Majesty, the others present including Lords Kintore and Knollys.

Mr. Choate will sail for New York on the Caronia on May 30.

SECOND CABIN IMMIGRANTS.

Forty-five of Them on the White Star Liner Republic Held Up.

So great is the rush of immigrants to the United States that many of them are now coming over in the second cabins of the Mediterranean lines. Information to this effect has reached the Ellis Island authorities, and the Immigration Inspectors are closely scrutinizing the second-class passengers of all incoming liners.

Yesterday, when the White Star liner Republic, from Naples and Genoa, docked the Inspectors examined her second cabin passengers as thoroughly as they did the people in the steerage. The result was that seventy of the second cabin voyagers were held up and forty-five of them sent to Ellis Island.

Most of the forty-five were permitted to land soon after they reached the island.

Pope to Decide Rospigliosi Case.

ROME, May 23.—The Congregation of the Propaganda has decided to submit the question of the annulment of the marriage of Col. F. H. Parkhurst of Bangor, Me., to Miss Marie Jennings Reid (now the Princess Rospigliosi) to the Pope. The Rospigliosi family being against the marriage of the head of the house with Mrs. Parkhurst, great influence has been brought to bear to prevent the annulment of her first marriage.

COWS and SHIRTS

Does SERVICE Count?

If there were two cows pastured in the same meadow, each giving milk of the same purity and richness, one cared for and milked by a farmer's wife, who was clean about herself, and particular about the cleanliness of her buckets, strainers and milk cans—the other cow receiving no care, and being milked by a slovenly maid, using carelessly rinsed buckets and cans—which cow's milk would you want to buy?

If there were two stores, each selling the same white shirts at exactly the same price, one being sure that you got a comfortable fit, and the proper sleeve-length, then having the shirts carefully wrapped in a cardboard protector, to save the bosoms, and sending them home in immaculate condition; the other store giving you right collar-size but body too small, and sleeves too short, wrapping the shirts in paper only, sending them home with collar bands crushed and bosoms dented—which store's shirts would you want to buy?

If other things were simply equal, you know that Wanamaker Service would be worth a reasonable premium, because of the care and intelligence with which the Public is served and merchandise delivered.

But things are not simply equal. Wanamaker merchandise is distinctly BETTER than that of other stores. Wanamaker Dollar White Shirts are not matched elsewhere for less than $1.50; and they are the criterion for a hundred other comparisons.

At WANAMAKER'S you get more intelligently selected Dry-Goods, more carefully made apparel, better value, in addition to service which, at every point, is the most skilled and intelligent known to modern storekeeping.

New and Beautiful Organdies, Muslins and Eoliennes

Far Under-Price

Getting two pretty Summer dresses instead of one—that is what it comes to. For, at double the cost of these charming fabrics, you could not get better quality or pattern.

The small type tells. But enough has already been told to attract the wise:

25c Printed Organdies at 12½c a Yard

Rose buds and full blown roses on sheer white organdy grounds with lace or embroidery stripes. The loss is the maker's; he feared a surplus.

50c Silk-and-Cotton Muslin at 25c a Yard

Self-colored fancy muslin, silky and sheer. Polka-dots, figured or corded stripes, small figures, and brilliant crepe designs. A multitude of good shades, light or dark.

Silk-and-Cotton Eolienne at 38c a Yard

Another lot to take the place of that so quickly taken. The color-range is complete. Patterned after the French silk-and-wool fabric that cost $1.25 a yard. Looks like it—but lighter, cooler, daintier. Rotunda.

TRUST COMPANY CLOSES, BUT MAY PAY DEPOSITS

Merchants', After Struggle, Goes Into Hands of Receivers.

FAILURE NOT A SURPRISE

Members of Gould Family Said to Have Taken Up Collateral at Loss to Company.

By coincident action of its Board of Directors and the State Banking Department, the Merchants' Trust Company of 346 Broadway, organized in 1889, closed its doors yesterday at the beginning of business to forestall the run which, it was believed, would follow the disclosure of the fact that the company was seeking relief on some of the collateral which it held for its loans. Before the end of the day, Douglas Robinson and the New York Trust Company had been appointed receivers and had taken charge of the affairs of the institution.

From such preliminary canvass as could be made of the situation by the receivers in the few hours following their appointment it was said last night that the depositors of the Merchants' Trust probably would get every dollar due them, with careful management of the company pending final settlement, and this without any assessment of the stock. This was the opinion expressed by Samuel Untermyer, personal counsel for President Jacob L. Phillips of the trust company, at the close of a meeting at which the receivers, their counsel, Edward Lauterbach, representatives of the Attorney General, and Mr. Phillips himself were present.

The failure did not come as a surprise to Wall Street. Rather, it was welcomed as removing an element of uncertainty that had bothered the financial community. The State Banking Department had required daily reports for some time past.

But a good deal of information bearing upon the methods of a former administration was brought to light, and as a result there was talk last night that suits might be instituted under the laws relating to negligence of Directors to recover some of the losses that brought the Merchants' Trust to the point of suspension.

There were two commitments of the company chiefly responsible for the plight in which it found itself yesterday. One of these was a loan of about $1,200,000 to the Hudson Valley Railway Company, an up-State trolley combine, on its bonds, and the other was a loan of about $900,000 similarly secured to developmental projects in the City of Rutland, Vt., under various names, including the Rutland Street Railway, the Rutland Car Trust, the People's Gas Light Company, and the Chittenden Power and Development Companies. The collateral securing the Hudson Valley loan is estimated by the receivers to be worth something like $720,000, and that back of the loans to the Rutland companies about $200,000, or a total of $920,000 on loans of about $2,000,000.

In addition to this collateral the company found itself yesterday with $337,257 cash, $500,000 representing its capital stock, invested in New York City bonds, and other securities of a fairly "quick" nature amounting to about $400,000, as against deposits of $2,082,290.01.

It was said that one thing that contributed to the suspension at this time was the near approach of a date which the State Superintendent had set as that on which the collateral for the Hudson Valley and Rutland loans must be liquidated. At any rate, it was the efforts on Monday of certain Directors of the Merchants' Trust to obtain assistance that set on foot the rumors of a trust company in trouble that were current that day, and these efforts were finally ended late Monday night by the advice of officials of a large downtown trust company to give up what seemed a hopeless task.

The two loans in question were made prior to 1901, and at a time when Edwin Langdon was President of the Merchants' Trust, having with him as Directors and members of his Executive Committee Dr. John P. Munn, President of the United States Life Insurance Company; Edwin Hawley, the railroad man; George C. Clark, an officer in the Tefft-Weller Company, and Frank C. Travers, since dead. Messrs. Hawley, Munn, and Langdon are Directors in the Hudson Valley Railroad, and Dr. Munn is a Director of the Rutland Street Railway, the principal operating company of the Rutland trolley enterprises.

The other Directors in the Langdon administration were, according to the corporation manuals for 1903, M. E. Bannin, Charles W. Jones, Henry Simpson, John Cartledge, Joel F. Freeman, R. H. Henson, Guy Phillips, D. S. Walton, and Leo M. Wise.

There have been many changes in the board of the Merchants' Trust since then. Mr. Hawley has resigned as a Director and transferred his stock, as has Frank J. Gould, who had been considered, with Dr. Munn, as representing the interests of the Gould family, formerly dominant in the company. At one time Daniel J. Sully was also a Director, his term in the board being coincident with his association with Edwin Hawley in the cotton deals preceding the failure of Sully & Co.

The Merchants' Trust a couple of years ago lent $1,400,000 to the Virginia Passenger and Power Company of Richmond, a Gould enterprise, on bonds of the company, which proved a slow asset.

The attention of the Banking Department was called to the situation early in 1904, and to its insistence that the Virginia Passenger and Power loan should be liquidated was due the fact that members of the Gould family, including, it was said on authority yesterday, Miss Helen Gould, eventually took up the collateral at a net loss of about $.00,000 to the Merchants' Trust Company.

In addition to the loans on securities of the Hudson Valley, Rutland, and Virginia Passenger and Power Companies, the Merchants' Trust has considerable investments in stock and bonds of those and affiliated corporations. Its report to the State Banking Department as of Dec. 23 last showed bond investments in the companies named carried at $330,000 par value and $204,150 book and market value, and stock investments of $867,600 par value carried at $558,600 book and market value. In addition there were stock investments of $415,000 par carried at $225,000 book and market value in the Tefft-Weller Company; $77,400 par carried at $46,860 book and market values in the American Tubing and Stamping Company; $30,000 par carried at $50,000 book and market value in the first preferred syndicate of the R. M. Suitten Company, and $100,000 carried at $30,000 book and market value, in the United States Cotton Duck Corporation, now reorganized. The only other securities owned were New York City bonds, and $25,000 of the bonds of the Iowa Central, Mr. Hawley's road. A curious thing about the stating of all these investments to the Banking Department was that in every instance the book and market values were given as identical.

Almost everybody connected with the Merchants' Trust Company matter issued statements yesterday. President Phillips's utterance concluded:

"Not a dollar has been lost since I became connected with the company, either as a Director or as President."

William B. Ellison, an attorney, of 71 Broadway, who has represented the company in the past, had this to say for the Directors, who are to have another meeting to-day:

"There will be sufficient explanations made when the time comes. The action of the State Banking Department came as a great surprise to us. The Superintendent of Banks gave us no warning that he was going to close us up. It is true that there has been a minority opposition in the board for some time past, but I won't reply to charges that may be brought against the Gould and Hawley interests at this time. All I will say is that some people are trying to get under cover by doing a lot of shouting. There is a proposition on foot now for important railway interests to take the Hudson Valley and all our bonds, and it was very

MR. KILBURN'S STATEMENT.

Thought It Best to Force Realization on Securities.

ALBANY, May 23.—State Bank Superintendent F. D. Kilburn to-day issued a statement telling of the condition of the Merchants' Trust Company two years ago.

"I was convinced," says Mr. Kilburn, "that to put the trust company in the hands of a receiver at that time would necessarily result in an enormous loss to the trust company, and it was my judgment, which subsequent events have justified, that it would be better to try to relieve the trust company of the securities. This task was at once undertaken and has thus far resulted in the payment by the Richmond companies of $2,247,000, or the entire debt, less $150,000. The trust company has also been relieved from its said guarantee of $750,000."

ISELIN CARRIAGE SMASHED.

Waiting to Take the Banker Downtown When the Car Hit It.

The carriage of Columbus O'Donnell Iselin, the banker, was wrecked by a Madison Avenue car in front of his residence yesterday morning as it was being driven up to take Mr. Iselin downtown. The family coachman, Patrick Dolan, of 127 West Fifty-second Street, was thrown from the box and badly cut and bruised. Joseph McAuliffe, the footman, tumbled off when he saw what was coming, and not only escaped injury, but managed to capture the horses, which had bolted, before they had gone any great distance.

Dolan, as he made a turn in front of the house, noticed the car approaching, but thought that the motorman had it under control. George Dourrick, the motorman, apparently wasn't looking at the carriage and couldn't stop. When the crash came members of the Iselin family ran out and carried Dolan into the house, where the nurse and the family doctor attended him.

PLAN FOR TRUSTEES TO RUN THE EQUITABLE

Said to be Peace Proposition Now Before Hyde.

HENDRICKS QUIZZES TARBELL

Loud Talk at Examination—Vice President Flushed When He Leaves, State Official Cool.

Second Vice-President Gage E. Tarbell of the Equitable Life was on for examination before Superintendent Hendricks of the State Insurance Department yesterday in the Board room. Voices were frequently raised high and spoke in no pleasant tones. When Mr. Tarbell came out he was considerably flushed. He declined to talk about his examination. Mr. Hendricks was much cooler when he emerged, but he was similarly uncommunicative.

After the examination was over H. H. Knowles, formerly Supervisor of Agencies, turned up and volunteered the information that Mr. Hendricks had been asking Mr. Tarbell about rebates allowed on policies, which are expressly legislated against in this State. Mr. Knowles also thought that the examination might have had to do with the $4 a thousand bonus that Tarbell offered to agents after the Equitable controversy was well under way. Mr. Knowles's criticism being that it came out of the policy holders in the long run and unduly increased the cost of insurance.

From a source thought to be connected with a prominent lawyer recently come into the Equitable affair there came yesterday the declaration that a definite peace proposition, the terms of which were not made known, had received favorable consideration by President Alexander and his counsel, and also by the firm of Alexander & Green and Elihu Root of counsel for James H. Hyde. Mr. Hyde himself and Samuel Untermyer, the head of his legal staff, were said to have the proposal still under consideration.

The scheme suggested was to place the affairs of the Equitable in the hands of a self-perpetuating Board of Trustees akin to those of a savings bank, which board should assign to the President and other officers their duties and be absolutely responsible for the conduct of the affairs of the society. The only thing in the way of confirmation that could be obtained directly was the information that William Nelson Cromwell, who recently appeared as general mediator in the Equitable controversy, had in the last few days been in conference with both sides, presumably for the purpose of conducting an exchange of views that would not be possible through direct communication.

The Insurance Policy Holders' Mutual Protective Association was formally launched yesterday with a Connecticut charter at a meeting held at 280 Broadway. The object of this association is to insure policy holders against loss through their prior insurance in the existing companies. It costs $2 to join, $1 on every five-thousand-dollar life policy, and $1 on every fire or accident policy. A Bridgeport law firm got up the idea.

FOR HUMMEL ARGUMENTS.

To-morrow Set by Court—Nicoll Says Case is Very Important.

"I believe sincerely that, in all your extended experience on the Supreme Court bench, you have never been called on to consider matters of more importance than those connected with my client's case," said Lawyer De Lancey Nicoll yesterday in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court, while pleading with Justice Davy for more time in which to file briefs in support of his argument in favor of dismissal of the three indictments now pending against Abraham Hummel, one of the five men indicted by the January Grand Jury in connection with the Dodge-Morse divorce tangle.

Justice Davy adjourned the case till to-morrow.

BALFOUR CALMS COMMONS PROMISES DAY FOR VOTE

Threatened Repetition of Disorder in the House Averted.

CHEERS AND JIBES GREET HIM

Irish Members Shout "Police" at a Suggestion That the Premier Express Regret.

LONDON, May 23.—At the opening of the House of Commons this afternoon there were prospects of a repetition of the scenes of last night, but Premier Balfour calmed the members by promising a day for the discussion of a vote of censure on the Ministers for their statements on the subject of the colonial conference.

The Premier on entering the House was greeted with Ministerial cheers and Opposition cries of derision. When order was restored Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman (the Liberal leader) asked whether, in view of "the confusion created by the declarations of his Majesty's Ministers in regard to the fiscal policy and the proposed colonial conference, the Premier will give a day for the discussion of a vote of censure."

Sir William Hart Dyke (Conservative) interjected the suggestion that the Liberal leader express regret at the "obstruction and the insulting language of yesterday."

The House was immediately in an uproar, the Ministerialists cheering, the Opposition deriding, and the Irish members shouting "Police! Police!"

Sir William ultimately withdrew his offensive remark, and Mr. Balfour, taking advantage of the lull, offered a day for the discussion of the proposed vote of censure.

TWO YEARS MORE FOR MACHEN

Ex-Postal Official Pleads Guilty to Conspiracy Charge.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—August W. Machen, ex-General Superintendent of the Free Delivery Service of the Post Office Department, was taken back to the Moundsville (West Va.) Penitentiary tonight after being sentenced to-day to another term of two years, following his plea of guilty under his joint indictment with W. G. Crawford of this city and George E. Lorenz of Toledo, Ohio, for conspiracy to defraud the Government.

Following the imposition of his sentence the impaneling of a jury for the trial of Crawford was begun and completed this afternoon. United States District Attorney Beach briefly outlined to the jury the case of the prosecution. He was followed by Attorney A. S. Worthington, who made the preliminary statement for the defense. The court then adjourned until to-morrow.

HIGGINS INDIGNANT AT BILL.

Vetoes Measure Making Child the Heir of C. B. Barker.

ALBANY, May 23.—Gov. Higgins, in vetoing to-day the bill introduced by Assemblyman Stanley of New York to declare Adelia Queenie Barker the legitimate heir of Charles Rell Barker, wrote the following denunciation:

"This bill presents an astonishing proposition, but the most astonishing thing about it is that it passed both houses unnoticed and without opposition or discussion. It is an insult to every faithful wife and to womanhood itself. The father, at the time of birth of the child, had and now has a lawful wife living."

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

New York City.

HENRY H. GLADE.—Henry H. Glade, grocer, at 317 First Avenue, has made an assignment to James S. Clayton, without preference. He began business in 1894, has had two partners since, and has been alone since April, 1902. He usually carried a stock of $2,000.

MANUFACTURING AND SELLING COMPANY OF AMERICA.—Judge O'Gorman of the Supreme Court has appointed William J. Clarke receiver for the property in this State of the Manufacturing and Selling Company of America on the application of Guillaume Keusens. George H. Atkinson has been appointed receiver in New Jersey.

CENTURY MANUFACTURING COMPANY.—William C. Root and George H. Droege, doing usiness as the Century Manufacturing Company, manufacturer of gas stoves at 239 Canal Street, confessed judgment yesterday for $5,950 in favor of Clara A. C. Root, wife of William C. Root, for money lent to the firm. The business was started in January, 1902, by Schwarz & Droege. In August, 1902, Mr. Schwarz retired and his place was taken by Clara A. C. Root. She withdrew on Jan. 1, and William C. Root became a partner. In February, 1904, the old firm laid claim to a capital of $25,000. Execution was issued to Deputy Sheriff Rinn, who made a levy on the property at the factory.

PETITIONS IN BANKRUPTCY.

WALTER ROACH.—Judge Holt of the United States District Court has appointed William G. Bowdoin receiver in bankruptcy of the assets of Walter Roach, bookbinder of 47 West Thirteenth Street, on the application of Ruth Roach, and fixed his bond at $1,500.

COLUMBIA PAPER BAG COMPANY.—The petition in bankruptcy filed on May 13 against the Columbia Paper Bag Company, manufacturer of paper bags at 105 and 107 Hudson Street and at Long Island City, has been dismissed by Judge Holt of the United States District Court, and the receiver has been discharged.

LILIAN R. CHATTERTON.—Lilian R. Chatterton of 20 East Twenty-ninth Street, wife of Walter S. Chatterton, builder, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $43,998 and no assets. Among the creditors are Elmer A. Allen of Fordham Heights, $25,000, deficiency judgment; Augustine J. Smith, $7,500, deficiency judgment, and Lawrence Brothers, Yonkers, $4,000. The debts were contracted in 1895-7 jointly with her husband.

ISIDORE MAIERHOFF.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Isidore, also known as Isak Maierhoff, wholesale and retail dealer in butter and eggs at 92 Avenue C, by the following creditors: French & Co., $538; S. S. Long & Brother, $744, and Wright & Winsor, $1,131. It was alleged that he is insolvent, transferred property to some creditors to prefer them, paid out $989 to two persons, and permitted the sale of his stock and fixtures for $354, under an execution in favor of Samuel Hertel.

HAIGHT & FREESE COMPANY.—Franklin Bien, attorney for the Haight & Freese Company, stock brokers, of 53 Broadway against which a creditors' petition in bankruptcy was filed on May 10, has prepared an answer to the petition, contending that the corporation does not come under the Bankruptcy act. He argues that the sole business for which it was incorporated was buying and selling stocks, bonds, and securities. It is not engaged principally in manufacturing, trading, printing, publishing, mining, or mercantile pursuits, and therefore is not a corporation against which a petition can be filed.

Four Home Runs Made Off Overall and New York Won by 7 to 0.

Four home runs, one double, and three singles was the treatment that Overall, who was known as the "Mathewson of the Pacific Coast," when he made his first appearance in major league company this year, received at the Polo Grounds yesterday at the hands of the New York team. It was not such a tremendous onslaught at that on a pitcher that Cincinnati expected great things of, but with the exception of one instance every hit told and one or more runs were the result. The final score was seven to nothing. Mathewson pitched one of the best games of his professional career, three hits being the total of the Cincinnatis efforts. He gave but one base on balls, struck out eight batsmen, including the only three men who came to the bat in the second inning. For four innings the Cincinnatians retired in one, two, three order, and then came two singles in the fifth inning, and a force out, which enabled Steinhardt to get to second. The only other men who got on bases were Barry in the seventh, on called balls, and Cy Seymour, who batted sharply to left field.

Donlin began the game by hitting to the centre field ropes for a home run. Browne threw out Steinfeldt to Barry, but McGann placed the ball to right field for two bases. He was advanced to third on Mertes's out from Corcoran to first and scored on Dahlen's powerful stroke to the club house steps in right field. This netted "Bill" four bases and the hit was one of the longest ever made at the Polo Grounds. Overall then seemed to have steadied himself somewhat, and with the aid of good fielding, including a quick double play, the champions were shut out in the next two innings. In the fourth, however, Devlin got first on four bad balls, reached second on Gilbert's sacrifice, was advanced to third on Bowerman's fly out to Corcoran, and tallied on Mathewson's home run drive to right field. Donlin's high hit ball to left field was caught after a splendid effort by Corcoran. Dahlen made another home run in the sixth inning, but this time the ball bounced into the right field seats. Two more men reached first, both on called balls, but Donlin ended the inning on a long fly to centre field. The first three New Yorkers in the ninth inning batted out fly balls to right field, but Sebring missed McGann's, enabling the runner to land on third base and he scored on Mertes's hit. The score:

For seven innings yesterday the game between the Brooklyn and St. Louis teams was all one-sided, the score at that time being 5 to 0 in favor of the visitors. After Eason had been succeeded by Doescher in the sixth inning the St. Louis batsmen were kept down to two hits. The score:

Detroit Scores Five Runs in Eighth Inning and Beats New York.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, Mich., May 23.—Coming from behind when apparently out of it, with the score 4 to 0, Detroit beat New York this afternoon by getting four consecutive hits in the eighth inning. The visiting team aided materially by going into the air and wrapping three errors around the hits, and five runs and Griffith's retirement resulted.

Three runs were scored by New York in the opening inning. A base on balls to Dougherty, Keeler's single, Fultz's sacrifice, and Williams's fly gave the first one. Anderson walked and stole, and he and Keeler scored when O'Leary muffed Chase's pop fly. In the fifth Dougherty hit and stole, and Keeler singled him home. Chase doubled in the ninth, with one out, and stole third, but was caught on the line while trying to get home the run that would tie the score when Yeager hit to Coughlin.

All of Detroit's runs came in the eighth. With one out, McIntyre hit to short, and Chase failed to keep his foot on the bag on the throw. Crawford, Coughlan, Hickman, and O'Leary then hit in order, Hickman getting a double. This gave three runs and left men on third and second. Powell succeeded Griffith, and Doran scored the tieing run with a long fly. Keeler lost Killian's grounder, and O'Leary got the winning run over a moment later in a double steal with Killian, bad handling of the ball helping the runner home. Score:

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 23.—Cleveland lost first place to-day after holding it two weeks. Philadelphia knocked Donahue out of the box in two innings, scoring enough runs to win the game. Moore was a puzzle except in the eighth. Cleveland got four of its hits and scored three runs in the second. Waddell was then warmed up, but Plank settled down and no change was made. GOLFER EGAN HOME.

America's Champion Returns from Europe—Leaves Harvard in June.

H. Chandler Egan, America's amateur golf champion, arrived from Europe last night on the steamer Kronprinz Wilhelm. He has been abroad about two months, traveling through Italy, France, England, and Scotland. Mr. Egan has not yet graduated from Harvard, but will receive his diploma next month. He left at once for Cambridge, where he will complete his final examinations.

Mr. Egan said he had taken no part in golf competition while away. He played golf in Paris, and also visited some of the celebrated links in Scotland.

OXFORD WAS WINNER OF JOCKEY CLUB RACE

Gray Colt Defeated Dolly Spanker at Weights for Age.

LEONIDAS LED ALL THE WAY

Yeager Entry Had His Brooklyn Handicap Trial in Closing Event at Belmont Park.

Through six races at the Belmont Park race course yesterday backers of public form failed to settle on a single winner, and the results for the afternoon brought back just the same average of winning favorites that has ruled since the meeting began, two a day. In compensation for their failures in betting, visitors saw the final public tests of several horses that are prospective starters for the Brooklyn Handicap to-morrow.

The stake feature of the programme, The Jockey Club Weight For Age Race, at one mile and a furlong, run as the fourth event, attracted to the post only four horses, of which number three were three-year-olds, two of these coming from one stable, and being coupled in the betting as the McLaughlin entry, though Oxford ran in the name of James McLaughlin, and Pasadena ran as the property of Mr. James McLaughlin. The start was made with Pasadena the first to move, while Oxford dropped in at his heels and rated along there, Dolly Spanker third, and Right Royal last. In the run through the back stretch, Right Royal twice moved up on the leaders, but both times was taken back in a style that seemed to take out of him what little run he had when he started, the gray colt Oxford, in the meantime having gone up so close on Pasadena's heels that he had to be pulled back and off the pacemaker, while Dolly Spanker made the most of the circumstances, and was just behind Oxford when the far turn was reached. Around the turn and into the stretch Pasadena held his place in front, but there began to tire, and fell back, Martin, who rode him, then pulling out and making room for Oxford to come up on the rail. Dolly Spanker made a move at the same time, but Travers, who rode him, seemed to be in doubt for a moment as to whether to try to go inside or around Pasadena, and in the meantime Oxford slipped to the front and took a good lead. Dolly Spanker, after the indication of indecision, went through the inside and set out after Oxford, closing steadily, and driving Lyne on the gray to the whip half way down the stretch, but Dolly Spanker then was under quite as much pressure as was Oxford, and the latter held his place in front to the end.

Four horses also ran for the sixth race, three of the number being Brooklyn Handicap eligibles, Ostrich of the number starting favorite, with Adbell second choice and Leonidas the outsider. The race, a mile and a furlong, was run over the curves of the Belmont course, and Leonidas, last away, rushed to the front at once, and in the run to the juncture of the training track with the main course took a big lead, which helped him to his victory, for he was not again headed. WILL THERE BE A SEA FIGHT?

It would be a curious outcome of the naval situation in the Far East if, after mankind has been more or less breathlessly awaiting the issue of a decisive sea fight between the combined squadrons of ROJESTVENSKY and NEBOGATOFF and the whole available sea power of Japan under the command of TOGO, there should be no such fight at all. Yet this seems now to be the forecast of many naval experts. The facts that, for all these weeks, when the movements of one and latterly of both the Russian squadrons have been perfectly well known to all the world within a few hours after they occurred, and had no doubt been known to the Japanese Admiral even sooner, he has made no attempt to strike a blow at either or both, and that his own whereabouts have been kept successfully concealed from all the world, and doubtless from the Russian commanders, are adapted to excite speculation, and to make watchers doubt whether he may not have looked beyond what was obvious to them. The reflections induced by his quiescence, which certainly does not imply either inattention or want of enterprise, naturally lead to a revisal of the first and most obvious expectations.

It is always to be remembered that TOGO could not have gone far from his base with the whole of his force, which carries all the naval hopes of his country, without running the risk of missing his enemies. They might have eluded him, if he had steered south in quest of them, either by making a rush up the Strait of Korea, which he would have abandoned to them, or by steaming eastward into the open Pacific, with the intention of coming back again to the northward of the Japanese Islands. It now seems likely that this latter is the course they have in fact adopted. But one or the other of these courses they must eventually take. A fleet cannot stay at sea forever. Even in the old days of wind and canvas it could not do so. In these days of steel and steam it can do so still less. Coaling at sea at an agreed rendezvous is recognized as a difficult and dangerous operation. We may assume that the hospitality of France is exhausted by the honest intention of the French Government to compel observance of its neutrality, reinforced as that intention is by the great facility, recognized the other day in the debates of the French Legislature, with which Japan could exact reprisals from French Indo-China for the violations of that neutrality. It is even reported that the coast of Luzon is indicated as the next coaling station of the Russian fleet. But it is highly unlikely that the Russian Admiral would venture upon such liberties with our authorities in the Philippines as he seems to have taken with the French authorities of Indo-China; and it is certain that our naval force in those waters is far better adapted than that of France to back up an official protest. And, even if he succeeded in abusing American neutrality, he would gain nothing but delay, which, when he is already at the height of his fighting capacity, is no gain at all. He would be no further than he was before toward his immediate objective, which of course is his "nearest home port," to wit, Vladivostok.

And why should TOGO not permit him to go to Vladivostok unmolested, unless TOGO can catch him during the process at a decided disadvantage? That seems to be the question which is now occurring for the first time to the foreign naval experts in view of the singular and suspicious quiescence of the Japanese Admiral in the face of the Russian concentration. It is quite true that, once at Vladivostok, the Russian squadrons would be reinforced by the three, or, according to some accounts, the two that are left of the four armored cruisers which have made that harbor their port since the beginning of the war. But, on the other hand, the Japanese would then know exactly where the Russians were, and the experience of Port Arthur indicates that the Japanese have nothing to fear from the result. For it is always to be remembered that the best and most of the Russian Navy has already encountered the Japanese. Doubtless MAKAROFF would have been glad to have the new battleships which ROJESTVENSKY has. But at the same time the fleet that Russia had in Far Eastern waters at the beginning of the war was far more formidable than the fleet which she has in those waters now. That fleet is now wiped out of existence with no serious diminution of the fighting force of its destroyers, excepting only that of the battleship Hatsuse. Why should not the Japanese expect to repeat that success if the present Russian fleet immures itself at Vladivostok as the former was immured at Port Arthur, and if OYAMA invests the northern port by land as NOGI invested the southern? In that case the immured fleet would be shut up to the same policy of hopeless sorties which proved so suicidal to its predecessor, and there would be no more a decisive sea fight in the future than there has been in the past. The Russian sailors would again be reduced to perishing "like rats in a hole" instead of going down gloriously and selling their lives and their ships dearly.

REGULATING IMMIGRATION.

Mr. ROOSEVELT is said now to be turning his active mind toward changes in the laws for regulating immigration. Apparently he has been incited thereto by testimony submitted to him showing a concerted effort on the part of foreign officials, with possible connivance from unscrupulous steamship agents, to send to this country considerable numbers of persons of a very undesirable sort, dependents, criminals, vicious, or incapable. If anything like a conspiracy of this kind exists, it ought not to be impracticable to expose it and break it up without substantial changes in the immigration laws. Those laws should be regarded with reference to general principles and not tinkered to meet emergencies or temporary and extraordinary conditions.

We have adopted pretty thoroughly certain general principles in the laws as they stand. One, which is fundamental, is that our own interests shall be protected, which practically puts out of business the old notion of America as the refuge of the oppressed of all nations. In the immediate application of this principle we now undertake to exclude known criminals, acknowledged paupers, the physically disabled, those likely to become a public charge, and, in curious conflict with this last provision, all who have secured employment by contract. If these conditions as to exclusion are fairly, vigilantly, and energetically enforced, they would seem to shut out the really undesirable immigrants, with one qualification. They do not shut out the grossly ignorant. We think that the law might with advantage, all things considered, be amended to apply to this last-named class. The argument is not wholly conclusive in that direction. Immigrants who are honest, healthy, and industrious may also be illiterate, and still be very desirable, while their children usually turn out to be excellent additions to our population. But the test of intelligence and adaptability to American life afforded by ability to read and write at least their own language is, in most cases, so trustworthy that we are convinced its application would do much more good than harm.

We are persuaded that it would do a great deal more good than the arbitrary charge of $25 a head on admission to our ports. Undoubtedly that would check immigration, but there is nothing discriminating in it. It would shut out, especially from those parts of the country that most need immigrants, the very sort that would be useful. And these parts of the country are very considerable. We hear much talk of our country being overcrowded by immigration. In reality there is not in the world a land so prosperous as ours that is at the same time so undeveloped, or one where a richer return awaits honest labor in every branch. We have an average of less than 26 inhabitants to the square mile, which is one-tenth that of Prussia. There is but one State in the Union, Massachusetts, so densely inhabited as Prussia. Texas could have twenty times its present population without reaching that density. It is absurd to think that we do not need and cannot use the human energy that would come to us under wisely regulated immigration. We should exclude what is not for our lasting interest, but our lasting interest demands imperatively all we can get that is really good.

MUNICIPAL FAITH CURISTS.

Dr. LYMAN ABBOTT has found the panacea. At the dinner of the Reform Club on Monday evening, when the topic under discussion was municipal ownership, Dr. ABBOTT gave his audience this counsel: "Be sure the cure for the evils of democracy is more democracy, always." Yet Dr. ABBOTT declared just before that that he was in favor of municipal ownership, by which he meant "all forms of ownership which are necessarily municipal monopolies."

That is to say, Dr. ABBOTT does not believe in democracy at all. At least he does not preach it. He preaches bureaucracy, Government meddling all up and down the line, the substitution of the municipality for the individual and for the private corporation. If that is democracy, then we might as well throw definitions to the dogs. It is the opinion of Dr. ABBOTT that "the dangers of municipal ownership are far less than the dangers to the city from corrupt combinations of political machines and favored corporations." The Doctor's remedy is not to break up the corrupt combination, but to give the property of the corrupting private corporation into the hands of the corrupted public officials to be administered. Where in all human experience, where in spiritual precept or civil maxim can be found a particle of justification for the faith Dr. ABBOTT evidently has that this arrangement would yield public benefits? On the contrary is there not good warrant for the belief that so strange a cure would make the malady worse?

Any function that "the municipality can perform better than the individual or the corporation" ought to be turned over to the city—that is what the municipal ownership advocates teach. That appears to be what Dr. ABBOTT calls "more democracy." But Judge HERRICK in his exceedingly sensible remarks at the Reform Club dinner pointed out that "municipal government has up to the present been one of the great failures of this self-governing people." The greatest of all our failures is to be crowned with new responsibilities, it is to be invested with broader powers and dignified with higher trusts. If ever human reasoning was inverted, if ever logic stood on its head, if ever truth and probability were turned quite inside out and common sense and good judgment were tricked out in cap and bells and made to turn flipflaps, it is in the arguments of the municipal ownership faddists.

There are old-fashioned, well-tried, and effective remedies for the evils pointed out by Dr. ABBOTT. In this city, for instance, if we suffer from the consequences of corrupt understandings between corporations and the City Government, the cure is to elect incorruptible men to public office. If the voters of the city cannot be sufficiently aroused to a sense of their own interest and welfare to vote with intelligence, to choose none but men of brains and character for places of public trust, then relief would have to be sought in some other way than that pointed out by Dr. ABBOTT. It is preposterous to insist that bad government can be made good by increasing its powers.

The advocates of municipal ownership and operation of what they call public facilities are in the condition of those who have faith without knowledge. They are faith curists—nothing more nor less. Their arguments read like extracts from the textbooks of the practitioners of some of the new therapies, who mumble at bedsides while their patients are dying of perfectly curable diseases.

THE MIND OF MR. FIFER.

It is difficult to follow the operations of Inter-State Commerce Commissioner FIFER'S mind. He testified before the Elkins Committee the other day that, speaking generally, railroad freight rates "throughout the country with few exceptions were excessive." Yet to provide for these "few exceptions" Mr. FIFER believes with the President that the powers of the Inter-State Commerce Commission should be enlarged to include the fixing of rates, a change of Constitutional and economic policy of such far-reaching importance that those who have tried to picture forth the consequences of it have been in no slight degree disturbed and alarmed. Since Mr. FIFER admits that there are but few cases of unreasonable rates, why does not the Inter-State Commerce Commission use the powers it already has to correct them?

There again Commissioner FIFER becomes incomprehensible, for he told the Elkins Committee that the citizen who was injured by unreasonable rates "had no redress under the existing law." The existing law forbids unjust and unreasonable rates. The Commission has the power to require the railroad corporation complained of to substitute a reasonable rate, and the courts have sustained orders of that nature issued by it. The injured citizen would not be without redress, it seems to us, if the Commission would use due diligence in his behalf.

But the gem of Mr. FIFER'S testimony is to be found in that passage where he declared that in his opinion "a commission of lawyers trained by experience is better qualified to pass upon rate matters than one composed of traffic experts." If that is true then we maintain and will defend the proposition by nailing it upon anybody's door that a commission of rate experts is better qualified to attend to law matters than lawyers trained by experience. If Mr. FIFER is right then the lawyers and the rate experts ought to "swap" jobs. Perhaps he is not right. We fear he is wrong when he declares that "the cry of the railroads that the fixing of rates by the Commission would upset business conditions is a bugaboo." Mr. HINES, a railroad man of large experience, testified the other day that in one case within his knowledge a change of rates upon one railroad system would compel a corresponding change of rates upon half a dozen other systems. If that would not disturb business conditions nothing would disturb them.

MR. BALFOUR'S PREDICAMENT.

The scene in the House of Commons on Monday night is described as being without precedent in the memory of the oldest member, and we can well believe it. Doubtless there has been as much disorder before, possibly even more, on "Irish nights." But although the Irish members took prompt advantage of this row, they did not originate it. It was originated by the Liberal Party, or, seeing that that party is in such a minority that the "sense of the House" would prevent it from stopping business, it was originated by the Liberals. It carries with it as a corollary the principle that the public debts will never be increased beyond the power of the city or State to pay interest regularly. That is another good maxim.

The announcement from London is startling that during the five months ended with April the mortality in India from the bubonic plague amounted to 750,000. However, the figures are those communicated to the House of Commons by Mr. BRODRICK, Secretary for India. In 1903 the deaths in India from this cause were 853,000; in 1904 they were 1,040,000. Facts like these should be understood as emphasizing the neglected duty of the British Government to do what is exigently demanded to improve the sanitary condition of its Indian dependents. Such a responsibility cannot be neglected without involving a vast abuse of the power of government over a conquered and subject people. A plague mortality in the Punjab alone of 20,000 in one week should shock the English people into a recognition of the fact that the national duty to the native has not been intelligently performed by those upon whom it has devolved.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

No Criticism of the President!

When a man thinks it "unethical" either to hunt or to eat animals, and is unable either to see "any justice or right in one creature using the flesh of another for food," or to believe it possible for "people who eat animal food to have correct ethical ideas," he has evidently set his own queer notions against the whole plan of animated nature, and therefore can be trusted to form a judgment of any part of it in direct conflict with the facts. It is not at all surprising, therefore, that the correspondent from whose letter we have been quoting should also have been moved to complain that, just as President ROOSEVELT does not get for hunting bears in Wyoming the prompt denunciation that falls upon one who shoots robins in Bronx Park, so everything else he does is exempt from the criticism applied to other men, all his ideas are brilliant, wise, and sacred, and all his acts permissible, commendable, and just. That is, however, going pretty far into absurdity, even for a vegetarian zoöphilist, and how particularly careful he must have been to read no newspapers and to listen to no conversations! Anybody who can believe that the President is not criticised as much as other people, or even that he is not criticised vastly more, and more harshly, ought to be able to get a good salary in a dime museum as illustrating one of the most fantastic possibilities of the human mind. As a matter of fact, the President is so closely watched during almost every one of his waking hours that we all have an opportunity to form a judgment of almost all his acts. And all except a very small and less important minority of us utilize the opportunity. Not only that, but we all express the judgments with much the same frankness that near relatives employ in the private discussion of each other's merits and demerits—especially demerits. The President above or beyond criticism? Why, he probably gets as much of it as all the rest of us put together. Of course, it is not all adverse—why should it be?—but a large part of the large total is of that sort, and it is very apt to be the harsher in inverse ratio to the certainty that what he does is wrong. We all remember the lambasting he received for laughing when his boys did not chase a turkey, and yet if there had been such a performance it might well have had amusing features for most of us. In serious things, like the matter of the Panama supplies, more moderate epithets are usually found.

Secretary Shaw Is Reckless.

It gives us much disquietude that Secretary SHAW has mitigated the wonted sternness of his conscience sufficiently to make a breach in the tariff wall so large that through it some college professors can carry out of the country, and then bring back, certain valuable machinery—and do it without paying a cent of duty! In the first place, college professors as a class are lamentably inclined toward free trade heresies and the teaching thereof, to the great injury of many youths who otherwise would be more willing to accept sound protectionist doctrine. This alone were reason enough to inspire a wise reluctance for granting any request whatever that came from men of their kind. That they should be systematically discouraged is obvious, and such nice scrutiny for intrinsic innocence as has resulted in the granting of this particular favor was unnecessary and dangerous. Then it is strange, and that is the same as saying suspicious, that deliberately avoided the United States. We have again and again proved our ability to have eclipses of our own that were good enough for anybody, and it is a treacherous blow at our legitimate ambition to maintain a wide diversity of industries to pretend that there is anything to be learned from an insolently foreign eclipse that could not be as well learned from the American product. This is no time for trifling with the tariff. If the astronomers insist on going abroad to make observations, it would probably be injudicious to chain them to their chairs, and if they want to take their telescopes along, why, let 'em, but it would be an excellent and well-deserved lesson to forbid the return of the instruments unless they pay a duty, and a good big one. The talk about "advancing knowledge" will strike every standpatter as tricky and thin. It is well enough to advance some kinds of knowledge, but it is hard to tell just what kinds are safe, and it is a familiar fact that there are kinds which never did the protective policy a bit of good. Secretary SHAW is taking large chances and a lot of them, and not a few of his warmest admirers will be both surprised and disappointed by his sudden display of weakness.

Identification of All Made Easy.

Major SYLVESTER, Chief of the Washton police, presented a large idea when he suggested to the convention of officials holding similar positions the establishment of a National Bureau of Criminal Identification to which each of the Police Departments of the country could send its pictures and measurements for preservation and arrangement, and from which it could at any time draw needed information concerning any person under arrest. Such an institution would undoubtedly facilitate police work everywhere, and at the same time save the duplication of much effort and expense. It is not quite obvious why the bureau should be devoted exclusively to the identification of criminals. Honest men often get lost in one way or another, alive or dead, and there would be obvious advantages if they, too, could be on record in some place where their personal peculiarities could be learned for legitimate reasons. The thought of such a record will be repulsive for most, perhaps, but only, we think, because the name of "Rogues' Gallery" has given an obnoxious suggestion to the very idea of personal measurements and photographs filed for reference. Nobody of respectability, if pinned down to the point, could offer any sound objection against providing the materials for his own identification in any contingency, and the wishes of other people need not be consulted. In the Census Bureau we already have the machinery by means of which a complete National roster could be made, and it would be of value in a thousand ways. Only those who feel that their easy identification may some time be dangerous have a real excuse for opposing an extension of Major SYLVESTER'S big scheme.

To Aid German Governesses.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Will you kindly allow a small space in your paper for the benefit of an organization of prominent people who want to aid German governesses by establishing a home for them? This home shall provide:

1. Board and lodging to arriving governesses or to those out of positions, to afford them protection, and assist them with advice.
2. To help them find employment.
3. To serve them as a meeting place.

Through the Treasurer, Mrs. P. Doelger, 29 West Eighty-first Street, appeals are being made to all who have found German governesses conscientious and faithful helpers in the education of their children. On the committee are Mmes. Felix Adler, R. Arnold, M. Beckhard, Ewald Fleitman, I. Guggenheim, F. W. Longfellow, L. Sutro, R. Tombo, A. Vietor, and the Misses M. Schurz and M. Demmler. Not an Attractive Advertisement.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

If ever a creature wanted to be liberated, or, failing in that, be put into the soup with as little delay as possible, it is the poor unfortunate turtle displayed in the window of a restaurant in Cortlandt Street.

To keep Mr. Turtle perfectly still on his back a cord is passed through a hole in each leg and so tied that he cannot pull himself into his shell. This is about as cruel a piece of work as I have seen in a long time. My wife, disgusted at such a revolting sight, refused to enter the restaurant, and asked me to take her to another place. W. S.

J. W. FOLEY.

A PUZZLED TRADE UNIONIST.

Plight of the Stone Cutters Who Had Everything Their Own Way.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The New York stonecutters, after being on strike or locked out fourteen weeks, went back to work on the bosses' terms. Being such a unit on unionism, we wonder why we lost.

During the last few years we have been more or less intoxicated with power. Motions which were foolish, illegal, and cowardly were carried with a hurrah, and we were always able to enforce our obnoxious rules, using the Board of Delegates as a whip to lash our employers into a sea of trouble. We restricted the use of machinery, which made men scarce and inferior mechanics valuable. No matter how dull business may be, a foreman was not allowed to use a mallet or even draw a line on a stone. A mischief-making stonecutter, and we had hundreds of them, would come into a shop and put the foreman in charge through the following:

"Any show for a stonecutter?"

"No, not to-day."

"How many men have you got?"

"Thirty-six."

"Where are they all; I cannot see them?"

"Some are at the building, and two are at a funeral."

Then, after relieving himself of some unclean language, he would go away and lodge a complaint with the delegate, who in turn would visit the shop, and try to make himself popular with everybody. Conditions are so that four or five men are laid off, and the foreman must stop a planing machine at the same time. An employer sees that one of his men is lazy, careless, or inferior, probably the worse of drink at his work, but he dare not discharge him until he engages another man to take his place.

When a boy has been three o four years at the trade he may wish to learn something at the building, but our old union would not allow that. We demand that tool sharpeners' wages be raised from different prices to $4.50 a day; that the machine men be paid the same as stonecutters; that we be paid every week instead of fortnightly, not because it may be of any help to us, but anything to harass our employers.

Our delegates could collect bad debts for small contractors, and for the benefit of the larger ones we prevented the importation of cut stone from cheap quarry districts.

Thanks to the lock-out we have been partly brought to our senses and abolished the most of the aforementioned obnoxious rules. The scene is changed; we have turned from the waters of Marah to something equally bitter. The employers tell us that we must join a No. 2 society, gotten up and controlled by them, in opposition to the No. 1 union, sponsor for so many wrongs.

Picture a boss telling an applicant for a job, "Yes, I need some good men, and will give you a job, but you must join our No. 2 society, which costs $10," and see the same boss go to one of his workmen and tell him, "The No. 2 delegate says that you are behind with your dues. I cannot allow that, you are discharged."

Ninety-nine per cent. of the men who joined this No. 2 did so very much against their will, and only because they needed work after such a lengthened strike and severe Winter. Some of the best stonecutters in New York absolutely refuse to work in shops controlled by this bogus union. Their cards will not be accepted in any other city in the United States or Canada. Their officers are as vulgar, ignorant, and corrupt as any of the old union were at their worst. I know them personally, and they were mostly responsible for the ridiculous rules carried in the old union. It is like a government without the consent of the governed.

Now I am neither a prophet nor am I in the habit of seeking trouble, but I'll be much surprised if many more weeks pass without another strike, this time against the employers who insist upon us joining their non-union union. OLD TIMER.

CITY'S REPLY IN GAS SUITS.

Says Prices Are Excessive and Consolidated Is a Monopoly.

Corporation Counsel Delany yesterday filed the answers of the city to the complaints in the suits brought by the gas and electric light companies to recover about $2,000,000 for gas and electric lighting supplied to the city in Manhattan and the Bronx during the years 1903 and 1904. This joins the issue and the suits may be brought to trial before the courts adjourn for the Summer vacation.

The city sets up as answers that the plaintiffs are controlled and owned by the Consolidated Gas Company, which was formed for the purpose of controlling and does control and regulate, as a monopoly, the price of gas and electricity. It is further alleged that the Consolidated Company prevents competition and that such a combination is illegal and against public policy. It is added that the prices charged by the plaintiffs are excessive.

Similar answers are put in to the suits brought by the companies which supply Queens and Brooklyn.

SAYS POLICE CAN'T SHOOT.

National Guard Expert Urges That They Be Properly Trained.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—At the session of the International Association of Police Chiefs to-day a letter was read from Major James E. Bell, Inspector of Rifle Practice of the District of Columbia National Guard, urging the proper training of the patrolman in the use of the revolver before he is permitted to be armed with it.

He said that in the revolver practice of policemen witnessed by him they had shown a woeful lack of skill in the use of that weapon, and he urged that they should be so trained as to be able accurately and effectually to hit the object fired at.

R. H. DAVIS IN LOOMIS CASE.

Says Bowen Did Not Suggest to Him Publication of Charges.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—Richard Harding Davis, the last of three witnesses summoned from New York by Secretary Taft in connection with the Bowen-Loomis case, was examined by the Secretary to-day.

Mr. Davis was in Venezuela for some time last Winter and heard the stories current in hotels and clubs respecting the American Legation and the asphalt company, and Secretary Taft's examination was directed to ascertaining the source of these rumors and to develop Mr. Bowen's connection with their circulation, if he had any such connection.

The substance of Mr. Davis's testimony was that while he had talked freely with Mr. Bowen about the charges against Mr. Loomis, Mr. Bowen himself had not suggested to him the publication of the charges.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—Justice Day of the United States Supreme Court called on the President to-day to request him to appoint two members of the Board of Trustees of the McKinley Memorial Association to fill the vacancies caused by the death of Henry C. Payne, late Postmaster General, and Judge F. S. Hammond of Tennessee. President Roosevelt appointed Charles G. Dawes of Chicago, formerly Controller of the Currency, and Judge Horace H. Lurton of Nashville, Tenn.

ALDERMEN TO ENJOIN NEW SUBWAY PLANS

Fight for a Say in Franchises to Begin on These.

A LONG LITIGATION CERTAIN

Strong Opposition Develops Also to the Belmont Scheme for Three-Track Elevated Roads.

Extended litigation and vexatious delays over the letting of further subway contracts, including those for the routes already laid out by the Rapid Transit Commission, are regarded as inevitable by the members owing to the refusal of the Board of Aldermen to pass upon the routes until it is learned what action Gov. Higgins intends to take on the bill depriving the Aldermen of all share in the granting of franchises.

Had the Aldermen acted promptly on the routes for the Lexington, Seventh, and Third Avenue lines when these were sent to the board by the Rapid Transit Commission, work on the new subways could have been expedited, but now the constitutionality of the Aldermanic law, if it be signed by Gov. Higgins, will have to be tested by mandamus or injunction proceedings on these same matters. Under the Aldermanic law the Board of Estimate acts on all franchises in place of the Aldermen, and the Aldermen intend to mandamus or enjoin that board on the first franchise which goes to it.

Next Tuesday being Memorial Day, the Aldermen adjourned yesterday afternoon for two weeks. This brings the next meeting to June 6, and Gov. Higgins has only till June 5 to act on the bill before him.

From an official source of information in the Board of Aldermen it was learned yesterday that if the Governor signs the bill the fight to test its validity will be begun in the courts at once. This is just what the Rapid Transit Commissioners feared, and they rushed their routes to the Aldermen early so that the board could have got them out of the way before the time limit expired on the bill, and thus have freed them from the delays of any litigation which is likely to come.

The Plan and Scope Committee of the commission held a meeting yesterday to hear representatives of the Interborough Company in favor of the plan proposed by August Belmont to put a third track in the Second and Third Avenue elevated structures, in place of the four-track plan, now defunct, which Mr. Belmont advocated for Second Avenue. The meeting was in executive session, and Vice President E. P. Bryan, William Barclay Parsons, and Julien T. Davies were heard. The committee declined to commit itself on the plan, but resolved to give a hearing on the matter on June 8 if the Interborough Company before that time would file a formal application for such a franchise.

Representatives of the Metropolitan Street Railway interests and also of the City Club let it be known that they would fight the Interborough plan to the end. Controller Grout is opposed to the idea and has been very plain spoken in his opposition, and as Commissioner Starin also is opposed, the Metropolitan people are confident that the Interborough will fail to muster the necessary six votes for the project.

POSTAL INSPECTOR REMOVED.

Had Accepted Loan from Storey Get-Rich-Quick Concern.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—George C. Holden, Post Office Inspector at Philadelphia and one of the oldest and most efficient officers in the detective service of the Post Office Department, was removed to-day by Postmaster General Cortelyou for borrowing money from the Storey Cotton Company, the Philadelphia get-rich-quick concern that swindled thousands and whose officers have either been jailed or driven out of the country.

Holden was set to watch the Storey Cotton Company, and had several times reported that it was suspected of doing a doubtful business. He began this work in June, 1901, after a number of complaints had been made against the concern. Although he felt sure the concern was engaged in fraudulent operations, he was never able to get the statutory evidence required to justify a fraud order.

After he had made a report against the company in April, 1902, he was called upon by a New York brokerage firm to make up $1,100 in margins to protect a stock deal, and, having occasion to see F. E. Storey, the head of the cotton company, that day, he mentioned the matter to him, and Storey at once urged Holden to accept a loan of the amount needed. Holden consented, and, according to his own statement, paid the money back in three days.

Last March, when the receiver of the concern and the Postal Inspectors were investigating the books of the company they came across the entry showing the loan of $1,100 to Holden. Holden tendered his resignation at once, and made a full statement, in which he said he had committed a fatal error in accepting the loan. Postmaster General Cortelyou decided that, for the good of the service, Holden should be removed.

CITY NEEDS $87,000,000.

Aldermen Must Fix Tax Rate Before Sept. 15.

Complying with the provisions of the charter, Controller Grout yesterday sent to the Board of Aldermen a statement of the budget for 1905, which already had been made public by the Board of Estimate, and also a statement of the amounts to be raised by taxation in this year, less the general fund deductions. The statement gives the total amount of the 1905 budget as $100,817,593.03. The Aldermen must fix the tax rate by Sept. 15, basing it on the amount of the budget and the valuations of real estate and personal property. The property figures will not be available for six weeks yet, as the Board of Taxes and Assessments has not yet completed its work of revision. As the general fund this year will aggregate $22,979,002.77, according to the Controller's statement, there still will have to be approximately $87,000,000 raised by taxation.

The Aldermen adopted a resolution appropriating $75,000 in special revenue bonds for moving and sorting the records in the King's County Register's office. The Register is Matthew E. Dooley, an anti-McCarren leader in Brooklyn, and he will have the patronage which will accompany the expenditure. A resolution also was passed appropriating $25,000 for additional work in the New York County Register's office, and another appropriating $36,000 for repairing books in the offices of the Surrogate, Register, County Clerk, and Courts of Record in Brooklyn.

Alderman Dowling got the board to pass an appropriation of $35,000 for supplies in the Department of Water Supply, Gas, and Electricity, without public letting.

TIMOTHY D. SULLIVAN GOING TO EUROPE

Col. Padden and Three Other Secretaries in His Train.

FIRST CALL TO BE ON CROKER

Great Exodus of Tammanyites Eastward This Summer—A Few Words by Mr. Murphy.

"Big Tim" Sullivan, the pride of the Bowery, is going abroad. It will be his first trip across the big pond.

The Daniel Webster of the east side, as he has been called by his political admirers ever since he modestly declared that he represented that section better than the famous Massachusetts statesman could, has long had a trip to Europe in mind. As each Summer came around, though, he always backed out, deciding that he could not put the Atlantic between himself and the Bowery.

But this year he will take the plunge. He has already engaged passage on the Campania for her first trip in July, and is getting his retinue ready.

Mr. Sullivan will be accompanied by his military secretary, Col. "Mike" Padden, and three other secretaries. His first visit will be to the Irish estate of Richard Croker, with whom he intends to have a heart-to-heart talk about the way things are going in the Tammany organization. Then he will honor the crowned heads in turn.

John Fox, President of the Democratic Club, and Thomas L. Feitner will go over on the same steamer. They also expect to visit Richard Croker. Ex-Mayor Van Wyck will precede them. He sails this week. A farewell dinner will be given to him by his friends at the Democratic Club to-night.

Last night the declaration of principles adopted by the Citizens' Union was received at the Democratic Club. It was read out by President Fox for the benefit of the members, who had gathered in the Assembly parlor, and the suggestion was made that ex-Mayor Van Wyck, who was present, should be made the representative of the club to confer with the Citizens' Union.

Mr. Van Wyck said he would be pleased to serve, provided the conference was held in Paris, as he expected to spend most of the Summer there. It then developed that two-thirds of the members of the Board of Governors of the club would be in Paris during the Summer months.

"I suggest," said Harry Walker, "that the proper place for a conference between the Citizens' Union and the Democratic organization would be in the palace of peace at The Hague."

J. Sergeant Cram, Chairman of the Tammany General Committee, received the Tammany copy of the Citizens' Union's declaration of principles. When Charles F. Murphy was asked whether Tammany was ready to co-operate with the Citizens' Union on a non-partisan basis, he replied:

"That is a matter for the General Committee to decide. The address was sent to Mr. Cram, not to me."

Mr. Murphy commented on the fact that the name of District Attorney Jerome was not mentioned in the Citizens' Union address. "I thought they insisted on the nomination of Mr. Jerome," he added.

"Do you think that Mayor McClellan can stand on a non-partisan platform?" Mr. Murphy was asked.

"He can stand on any good platform," was the reply.

William Halpin, President of the Republican County Committee, left the city yesterday for a ten days' vacation, it was said at headquarters.

Lieut. Gov. Bruce quickly disposed yesterday of the Mayoralty boom started for him by some of the local Republican leaders. When the Lieutenant Governor was asked if he would run for Mayor, he said: "Run for the Mayoralty! I would not walk for it."

HAIGHT & FREESE RECEIVERS.

Agreement Reached as an Outcome of the Colt Suit.

BOSTON, May 23.—By an agreement between the receiver and counsel for the Haight & Freese Company, filed in the United States Circuit Court this afternoon, subject to the approval of the court, James D. Colt receives the power of permanent receiver of the brokerage firm, and the receivership in Philadelphia is restored.

This action is the direct outcome of Colt's suit against William H. Lillis of Winchester, Vice President of the company, and various Boston banking institutions, to secure control of about $200,000 of assets belonging to the Haight & Freese Company which are alleged to have been concealed from him.

SHAW PLAY PRODUCED.

"Man and Superman" Performed in London—Critics Enthusiastic.

LONDON, Wednesday, May 24.—The first presentation of George Bernard Shaw's "Man and Superman," as adapted by the author for stage production by the elimination of the whole third act, was a great success at the Court Theatre yesterday.

The critics this morning praise it liberally as the best play by Mr. Shaw yet seen.

FOREIGN NOVELTIES ON ROOF.

Several Striking Acts Planned for the Wistaria Grove.

There will be several European novelties in the vaudeville part of the Wistaria Grove programme when the renamed New York Theatre Roof Garden opens for the hot season on Monday, June 12. Chief among these acts is a trapeze specialty to be given by La Belle Therasita, who lately won success at the Folies-Bergère, in Paris. The Mystic Mirror Dance is said to be another act out of the ordinary. It is participated in by five young women, and combines with the dance a striking illusion.

The home talent, however, has not been neglected. Kelly and Reno, Mosher, Houghton and Mosher, and the Vistaro Troupe of Musicians are also among the entertainers.

The second part of the programme will be devoted to the "Osler review," "When We Were Forty-one."

THEATRICAL NOTES.

William Courtenay has left the cast of "Trilby," at the New Amsterdam Theatre, to fill a stock company engagement at Albany. The role of Little Billee is now being played by Gaston Bell.

Three hundred agents of the New York Life Insurance Company will attend the performance at the Hippodrome to-night. They are the winners of the "Diamond Jubilee" contest, and come from all sections of the country.

After the matinée performance of "My Tomboy Girl" to-day at the Fourteenth Street Theatre, Lottie Williams, the star of the piece, will hold a reception on the stage and present to each woman patron a photograph of herself.

"Fantana" will be the second production at the New Waldorf, London, probably with an English company. At all events, there will be a company in America to fill engagements, whether the new company or the original company plays across the water.

ATE MR. ROSENFELT'S BOAR.

In a Tree-Filled Saloon with Bologna and Flowers on the Side.

Julius, the manager of the "City Hall Cellar," was seated at a table in the underground saloon yesterday when the life insurance man who drinks lemon and seltzer entered.

"I vas yust going to telegram you," said the manager. "I didn't vant to git life insured, but I vanted to invitation you to a vild animal supper vhich ve vill haf here to-night. Boss Zitzler got a presentation of a vild boar."

"Well," said the life insurance man, "I'll come to the supper if you'll agree to make a speech."

So Julius agreed, and the life insurance man told his friends. When the time came for the wild boar supper at 9 o'clock last night, scores of downtown business men were assembled about the white-covered tables. There were doctors and lawyers, real estate men and Judges and politicians and wine agents. The saloon had been turned into a flower garden, and the restaurant was filled with trees in imitation of a forest.

"Ve are making believe ve vill eat vild animals in der voods," explained Julius.

Upon the free lunch counter six German musicans were seated behind a bank of bolognas and flowers. They played popular melodies until the guests had dined, and then the proprietor of the place made a speech, in which he explained that one of his friends, Mr. Rosenfelt, had shot the wild boar which had been disposed of at the feast. Mr. Zitzler spelled out his friend's name so that there might be no mistake in his identity. Then came calls for Julius, and the manager responded.

"I ain't got too much to speech," said he. "While ve assembled to eat wild animals ve are all tame, except dem vhat ain't invited, so I suppose to-morrow dey vill be vild."

Just then there was a commotion in the rear of the forest. A minute later two bears sprang into the midst of the diners, a tiger leaped over a table, and four lions appeared, scattering the diners. It was a little surprise sprung by George Zitzler, the proprietor of the place. The alarming figures were merely waiters wearing the skins of the animals they represented.

JUVENILE ASYLUM MOVES INTO ITS COUNTRY HOME

Has Fifteen Pretty Cottages East of Dobbs Ferry.

MORE WHEN FUNDS ALLOW

Children Are Chiefly Tenement House Waifs, and Fields and Grass Are New to Most.

The New York Juvenile Asylum has moved from the row of bare stone building at One Hundred and Seventy-sixth Street and Amsterdam Avenue, which it occupied for more than half a century, to its new cottage colony in a tract of 277 acres on the crest of the wooded ridge east of Dobbs Ferry. Fifteen pretty little cottages have been opened to receive the wards of the asylum, who are all tenement house waifs, and they will be lodged twenty in a cottage.

By last night 200 of the children were in possession of their new home. The rest will follow to-day and to-morrow. For the inauguration of the new plan the capacity of the institution has been cut down from 1,000 children to 300, until the funds warrant the building of more cottages.

The new cottage colony is picturesquely situated. On the west the land slopes away to the Hudson River, and on the east the wooded slope falls sharply to the Sawmill River Valley, with its pretty little stream winding through.

Though some of the children had spent a few days in the country on some "fresh air" trips, most of them had spent all their lives in the crowded tenement districts. The trip up to the new home on the train yesterday was therefore a continual unfolding of wonders. Such ordinary sights as a cow grazing in a field threw the whole carload of children into excitement. They kept a careful tally on the number of cows passed on the way up.

The Directors of the New York Juvenile Asylum were largely influenced to try the cottage home plan through the investigations of John Seely Ward, Jr., one of the Directors, who made an extensive study of the workings of such schemes in England. The idea of the cottage system is to afford as much as possible a home and family life for the children, as well as healthful country surroundings. The children are known by their names instead of by numbers, and it is the general opinion that "James Smith" of "Blank Cottage" will feel that he has more to live up to than a youngster who was simply "No. 276."

The new community is laid out in a kite-shaped area almost a mile long. The cottages already built occupy the northern part of this area, and at the southern end there is a little church. The cottages are similar in plan, but the architects, York & Sawyer, have made them picturesquely diversified in external appearance. In four of the fifteen, the honor cottages, the children will have individual rooms, small but light and airy. New cottages will be added as funds are raised.

A schoolhouse to accommodate 500 children has been completed, and a power house to furnish electric lighting and heat for the community. In the power house also are the butcher's shop, bakery, and community kitchen. An athletic field 400 by 600 feet in extent is being completed for the boys, and there is a big garden plot of twenty-two acres where experts will instruct the children in methods of intensive agriculture.

An industrial school and a teachers' clubhouse are planned.

TO BUILD A MAN'S HOTEL.

Ex-Sergt. Churchill Buys a Site on Broadway for $200,000.

James J. Churchill, ex-Police Sergeant and restaurateur of this city, completed a deal last night by which he acquires a forty-two-year lease on the property at 1,551 and 1,553 Broadway, directly across Forty-sixth Street from his present establishment. The property, which is now occupied by the Columbia Hotel, has a fifty-foot frontage on Broadway and one hundred feet on Forty-sixth Street.

Mr. Churchill said last night that he intends to erect on the plot a thoroughly modern and luxurious bachelor apartment house, equipped with restaurant and clubrooms for the use of the occupants. He will offer a prize for the best design for the house.

The price paid for the lease was in the neighborhood of $200,000. The same plot sold in 1855 for $15,000.

AMERICAN JEWS PROTEST.

Urge Government to Act in Matter of Russian Passports.

CINCINNATI, May 23.—At to-day's session of the Second District Grand Lodge B'nai B'rith, a committee which had been considering the subject of "Russian Persecution and Passports" made a report, which was adopted. It reads in part:

"No words which we can frame or give utterance to can express our sentiment of horror at the unspeakable inhumanity which has been shown to our unfortunate brethren in Russia, where they have not only been deprived of civil and religious liberty, but are subjected to every indignity of which an intolerant nation is capable.

"We recognize and appreciate the splendid efforts already made by the present administration to secure to American citizens of our faith the same rights and privileges accorded to American citizens of all other faiths in the matter of having passports to Russia duly honored, and we believe that this matter should receive the continued and earnest consideration of our Government. In our opinion the time has arrived when our Government should take a firm and uncompromising stand on this subject and insist that equal rights and privileges be accorded to our citizens of every faith."

Presbyterians Reject a Substitute—Socialism Invading Church.

WINONA LAKE, Ind., May 23.—The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church to-day voted down the proposition to substitute for the Westminster Confession a brief statement of faith presented in the form of an overture by the Nassau (N. Y.) Presbytery. Pennsylvania Presbyterians made the charge that the Nassau Presbytery was carrying on its rolls names of persons antagonistic to Presbyterian doctrine, and asked for an investigation. The General Assembly held that it was a matter with which the New York Presbytery should deal.

The Rev. Charles Steizle, labor representative of the Presbyterian Church, speaking on the report of the Home Mission Board, said Socialism was becoming a substitute for the Church for thousands of workingmen

RAILWAY RATE INQUIRY ENDS.

Senate Committee Is Not Likely to Decide on Its Report at Once.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—The Senate Committee on Inter-State Commerce today closed the hearings upon the regulation of railway rates, but will devote the remainder of the week to the general consideration of its report and suggestions to facilitate proceedings when Congress reassembles.

It is not expected that any determination will be reached immediately bearing upon the nature of the report.

Samuel Spencer, President of the Southern Railway, to-day pointed out that the railroads were not advocating the regulation of rates by the courts, but maintained that if the question of rates must be passed upon by any tribunal it should be the courts, as otherwise the property of the railroads would not be protected.

ROMANCE LED TO CONEY.

There Police Got Runaway Boy and Girl in Rowboat.

Roundsman Brown of the Coney Island Police Station heard two persons singing in a stranded catboat last evening, and investigating found in the craft a girl covered with a sail and the coat of a young man, who stood near by shivering.

The two were taken to the police station, where the girl said that she was the fourteen-year-old daughter of William Petersen, a traveling salesman, living on Sedgwick Avenue, near High Bridge. The boy said that he was George Burnell of 1,212 Osborne Avenue, and that he was sixteen years old.

He had delivered goods for his father, a groceryman, at the home of the Petersens. There he had met the girl. He had suggested to her father that they be married. Thereby he lost Mr. Petersen's trade and his own job. He had $39 saved up and induced the girl to seek a minister who would marry them. Every clergyman they saw advised them to go home. A frequent experience was to see the minister go to the telephone to call up the police. Then the pair always ran from the house.

They at last arrived at Coney Island, where they took in all the sights, soon finding themselves without funds. They dared not, however, go home. There was a consultation. Florence suggested that she could earn a living singing. George, too, could sing and dance.

They sat on the sands to sing together not far from one of the merry-go-rounds. Several of the couples passing in the moonlit sands tossed coin to them, the boy using these to purchase frankfurters and root beer. When the crowd was gone and their little money gone the boy tucked the girl in the stranded catboat and covered her with a sail. Then he acted the part of watch dog. When she didn't feel sleepy they sang.

The girl was sent to the Children's Society of Brooklyn. The young man was held at the Coney Island Police Station. Roundsman Brown, who has the reputation of being a very kind-hearted man, said last night:

"I did my duty, though he was a nice lookin' young feller and she was a pretty girl, but just kids. When I was sure that no one would see except the moon I gave 'em the tip. I'd like to be young again myself."

MARY A. LIVERMORE DIES; BODY TO BE CREMATED

Noted Lecturer Expires in Her Eighty-fourth Year.

AIDED ARMY IN CIVIL WAR

She Had Long Been a Woman Suffrage Leader and Lecturer—Abolitionist in Early Life.

MELROSE, Mass., May 23.—Mrs. Mary A. Livermore, writer and reformer, died at her home here at 8:15 o'clock this morning. She was in her eighty-fourth year. Bronchitis and a weak heart hastened the end.

The funeral will be held on Thursday between 2 and 3 o'clock in the afternoon. The body will be cremated and the ashes placed in the Livermore family tomb in Wyoming cemetery, this city.

Mrs. Livermore had labored during the greater part of her long life for the cause of women and their civil rights and for temperance. She was a native of Boston, where she was born on Dec. 19, 1821. She was educated at the Hancock School in that city, and afterward at the Charlestown Female Seminary, where she remained for some time after she was graduated as Instructor in Latin, Italian, and French.

Mrs. Livermore, before her marriage, was Mary Ashton Rice, daughter of Timothy Rice. When she was eighteen years old a place as governess in a family in Virginia was offered her, but her father refused to allow her to take it. With the determination shown in her later life, she borrowed money from a friend of the family and left home for Virginia. Her father later forgave her but always alluded to her as "the daughter who ran away from home like a boy."

She spent two years in the South and, returning to New England, became an abolitionist. She taught at Duxbury, Mass., until 1845, when she was married to the Rev. Daniel P. Livermore, a Universalist clergyman. For ten years she was active with her pen and in personal work for the abolitionists. She established and edited a newspaper known as The Lily. In 1857 Mr. Livermore became the editor and publisher of The New Covenant, and Mrs. Livermore was the largest contributor.

With the outbreak of the civil war Mrs. Livermore devoted her time chiefly to the care and comfort of the Northern troops. She was a leader in the work of the United States Sanitary Commission. As an agent of the Northwestern Department she visited all the hospitals and military posts along the Mississippi. In this way she learned what the soldiers really needed and fought her way through red tape to see that they got it. She organized sanitary aid societies all over the North, raising large sums of money as well as provisions for the troops.

At the close of the war she became a lecturer, her services being in constant demand by lyceums, so that on an average she covered 25,000 miles annually for many years. Her most popular lectures were "What Shall We Do with Our Daughters?" "What Shall We Do with Our Sons?" "What Shall We Do with Our Superfluous Women?" "Women of the War," and "Moral Heroism of the Temperance Reform."

She founded and conducted "The Agitator," a woman suffrage newspaper, and in 1870 was made editor of The Woman's Journal of Boston.

Mrs. Livermore retired from the lecture platform in 1895, although she had since spoken and lectured frequently in and near Boston. She was an active member of thirty-seven clubs and an honorary member of several others.

In 1896 Tufts College honored Mrs. Livermore by conferring the degree of Doctor of Laws. For four years she had not been in good health.

DEATH OF PAUL DUBOIS.

Director of the Ecole des Beaux-Arts Was Born in 1829.

PARIS, May 23.—Paul Dubois, Director of the School of Fine Arts, is dead.

It was not till he was twenty-seven years old that Paul Dubois determined to become an artist. He was born in 1829, and his father wished him to be a lawyer, but at last consented to allow him to study art.

He entered the studio of Toussaint, and after three years there made an extended visit to Italy. His first contribution to the Salon was in 1857, little more than a year after he had begun his active studies, and before long his work was attracting much attention. Several of his works were shown at the Exposition of 1867, while at the Exposition of 1878 was his "Tomb of Gen. La Moricière," which is regarded as one of the masterpieces of modern sculpture. It is an enormous work, including, besides the recumbent figure of the General, allegorical figures of Military Courage, Charity, Faith, and Meditation, as well as bas-reliefs, medallions, and a frieze. This tomb is now at Nantes.

In 1873 M. Dubois was appointed curator of the Luxembourg Museum, and five years later he succeeded M. Guillaume as Director of the Ecole des Beaux-Arts. He was a member of the Academy and a Grand Officer of the Legion of Honor.

Dubois was a painter as well as a sculptor, and occasionally exhibited portraits which obtained highly favorable criticisms.

The Tyranny of The Dark

Hamlin Garland's latest novel is a daring venture into a new and fascinating field—that of the occult. The remarkable incidents related in this volume are all within the experience of the author, who for a number of years has been a member of the American Psychical Society. Says the New York World: "He has woven from his experiences the threads of a most interesting tale. It will interest both believers in and scoffers at the life invisible." In this strange setting romance becomes doubly attractive. Mr. Garland has given us another delightful Western girl. Her rescue from this mysterious "Tyranny of the Dark," accomplished by her lover, is the most engrossing kind of strong moving fiction.

HAMLIN GARLAND'S new novel

The Vicissitudes of Evangeline

A twin-sister volume to "The Visits of Elizabeth," and, according to the Boston Herald, "one of the bright, lively books of the season." The Chicago Record-Herald says: "It is undeniably clever, alluring with its lively dash, vivid tinting, and half-humorous philosophy. The reader will know no dull moment from cover to cover."

Failure of the Merchants' Trust Company Has Less Effect Than Monday's Rumors About It.

Yesterday Wall Street learned the details of the mystery which has caused such anxiety for months, and especially on Monday. If only it had been permissible to name names sooner less harm would have been done, for assuredly neither the name of the Merchants' Trust Company, nor of its promoters, are so representative of New York finance that anything done by them must be considered characteristic and therefore unsettling of confidence in those who are representative. Taking matters at their worst we have the veil drawn from unwise banking methods, immoderate optimism, and perversion of a trust company to the personal uses of Trustees. It is a revelation that possession of unearned wealth on the one hand and unlimited nerve and lack of scruple upon the other are not qualifications for positions of banking responsibility. But inasmuch as nobody could possibly think they were, it is difficult to affect much alarm over the disclosure. If we had to face such developments in quarters wherein trust had been reposed it would be another story. Without at all palliating anything revealed, it may be added in justice to those who have caused the failure that there is no revelation of any defalcation, or crazy scheming, or deliberate wrongdoing. Whoever had done the same things with their own money would have committed a mere error of judgment. It is the free and easy dealing with the property of others, not the monetary loss involved in this specific case, which causes disquiet. However, the penalty is paid, and inasmuch as there never was any reason to suppose that the gentlemen concerned possessed the confidence of the community as representative bankers, they cannot be said to have lost it, nor to have caused a shock by losing it. It was the fear that some real bank or trust company, instead of a mere promoting enterprise, was in difficulties which caused the chill.

The reaction when the facts were known was apparent. There was a decided improvement in tone and a general improvement in prices, the majority of changes being advances at the close, even after a reaction, and softening after midday. Apparently this is to be attributed to simple feverishness, for the day's other intelligence was not important. Perhaps at this time first place should be given to the weekly Government crop report. It is impossible to give exact ideas of crop conditions in words, but so long as "Spring wheat improves rapidly," and Winter wheat continues "generally promising," less authentic accounts ought not to give alarm. Sterling showed decided strength, but this, too, cannot cause disquiet until borrowers and lenders cease quibbling about one-eighth of 1 per cent. on loans over New Year's on all industrial collateral—as was the case in one bargain for millions. Nothing new developed regarding the iron trade, except an estimate of the Steel Trust earnings at $30,000,000 net for the quarter. This seems fairly in hand, and anxiety regarding the iron trade is therefore deferred until the quarter after that now current. That is somewhat further ahead than the iron trade can usually look.

TRADING IN BALTIMORE.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, May 23.—Trading in Seaboard Air Line Railway issues, including the rights and stocks to be brought under the modified plan of refinancing, was again a feature in the local market today. The New York interests behind this were credited with supporting the market. The time for depositing securities of the Mount Vernon-Woodberry Cotton Duck Company and the United States Cotton Duck Corporation to be included in the plan for merging these companies expires on Monday. Deposits so far made with the Continental Trust Company in this city and the Colonial Trust Company, New York, cover a majority of each issue requiring the change, and it will be declared operative at the close of the time limit.

Toward the close of the market prices hardened somewhat. Cotton Duck first mortgages 5s advanced ½ per cent. The decline in Northern Central bonds continued. The close was dull, but firm. The sales were: Shares, 1,142; bonds, $69,000, as follows:

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Closing of Institution Clears the Financial Air Somewhat.

The financial community was much relieved yesterday when it heard that the institution which because of its tottering condition had been a disturbing factor for some months had seen fit to close its doors. The troubles of the institution, which had little to do with Wall Street affairs, had been magnified and exaggerated in order to help the bear campaign, and its elimination as an argument was recognized by the market, which at once advanced and made a very fair recovery. The general improvement was, however, short-lived. The bears spread rumors that this was not the only institution which was in a bad way, and although official statements from important banking officers were published that the situation was sound and clear the market preferred to listen to the rumors of troubles, and prices declined to the low level. Some stocks recovered somewhat in the last ten minutes, but the tone was uncertain and irregular.

Eyes on the Crops.

According to the belief of Wall Street in general, the future of the market depends largely on the outcome of the crops. Should these be bad, then farmers would spend little money, the railroads would have not enough to haul, and those business industries which largely depend on the railroads and the farmers would have to retrench also. For this reason Wall Street is making the greatest efforts to get at the true status of the crops. There have been many reports of damage by various influences, and in the minds of the bears the crops are all but ruined. Yesterday's weather report was, however, more encouraging, and representatives of several large interests which make it their business to get the best information on the crop situation declare that they believe that the crops are by no means in the bad condition in which they have been painted. "Let us have all the reports of damage to the crops now," said one trader. "Then we shall be sure to be pleasantly disappointed in the end. I have found that crops generally turn out differently from the general expectation. When they are expected to be good they often disappoint. When they are supposed to have been ruined they are quite likely to prove about the average."

Hamlet at the Ticker.

"To buy or not to buy, that is the question," declaimed a ticker trader in a customer's room yesterday afternoon when the market was going off again. "He who hesitates is lost," advised the manager of the office, who was looking after the commission account, which had been a little slack. "But think of him," interjected another customer, "who rushes in where big men have to sell." The man who had quoted from "Hamlet" wrinkled his brows. "Stocks, stocks, stocks," he said. 'Tis true who hesitates is lost, but truer still that he who buys must pay and often lose."

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 23.—The announcement made at City Hall to-day that the resignation of several members of the Mayor's cabinet had been demanded was the absorbing topic in the financial district. When the news became known the stock of the United Gas Improvement Company, at whose proposed lease the blow was aimed, was selling around 112. It broke quickly to 110, rallied to 111½, and declined a point at the close. The rest of the local public utility stocks did not follow gas, holding steady to firm. Reading was again heavily dealt in, and the Steels were also active, but in both issues there seemed to be a liberal supply of stocks on all rallies. Electric Storage Battery was up 1 and Lehigh Valley was also stronger, but Lehigh Navigation Trust certificates were off 1 and General Asphalt at 11½@12, as against last previous sales at 14. The preferred was unchanged. The total sales were 67,904 shares, $66,000 bonds.

THE LONDON MARKET.

LONDON, May 23.—Rates for money were easy in the market to-day, and the demand was fair. Discounts were easier.

Trading on the Stock Exchange was moderately active and prices were steady. The feature was the renewed decline in Americans. Consols and other gilt-edged securities were strengthened by the cheapness of money, but eased toward the close.

Americans opened weak, on the unfavorable outlook in Wall Street, which restricted operations. Later there was some small buying at a lower level, which hardened quotations temporarily. In the afternoon prices further declined, and the market closed weak.

Japanese had a hardening tendency, except 6s. Imperial Japanese Government 6s of 1904 were quoted at 101⅝.

Continentals benefited by Paris support.

Bar silver uncertain at 27 1-16d per ounce.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Successful Auction Sale of Bathgate-Beck Property for $1,250,000—Company to Erect New Building on West Seventeenth Street—Buyers for High-Priced Dwellings.

That there is still a strong market for well located Bronx lots, available for improvement, was shown conclusively at yesterday's auction sale of the Bathgate-Beck estate property, owned by Henry Morgenthau. There was present in the new salesroom, at 14 and 16 Vesey Street, the largest crowd that has attended a real estate auction in the city in several years—fully 1,000 people surrounding the stand of L. J. Phillips & Co., when Auctioneer Simon first called for bids, and a large proportion of them staying throughout the five hours of selling.

With the exception of twenty-seven lots on the Southern Boulevard, between One Hundred and Seventy-second and One Hundred and Seventy-third Streets, the 300 lots covered by the announcement were sold for a total of $1,102,300. These twenty-seven lots were disposed of at private sale soon after the auction was over, bringing the total amount realized up to about $1,250,000.

Prices were on the whole satisfactory, although Mr. Morgenthau said after the sale that the successful bids for some of the lots—particularly those on the Southern Boulevard—had been somewhat disappointing. The buying was very largely in the hands of professional operators, there being few purchasers whose names are not familiar in real estate circles.

The highest price of the sale was $44,000, or about $12,000 a lot, paid by Charles H. Hansen for a plot of between three and four lots on Boston Road, at the junction of Wilkins and Stebbins Avenues. About on a par with this was J. Clarence Davies's bid of $13,000 for a lot of somewhat more than full depth at the southeast corner of Boston Road and Charlotte Street. Lowenfeld & Prager bought four lots at Boston Road and One Hundred and Seventy-second Street for $32,950, and other Boston Road prices ranged from $7,000 to $8,000 a lot.

For Wilkins Avenue lots, between Boston Road and One Hundred and Seventieth Street, the bids averaged $3,300 a lot, among the buyers being Leopold Hutter and Louis Lese. Abutting lots on Stebbins Avenue brought from $2,900 to $4,100 each. On Charlotte Street George F. Johnson, Jr., bought ten lots for $33,000, and at the rear, on One Hundred and Seventy-second Street, near Boston Road, Leopold Hutter paid eight lots for $32,000.

For Seabury Place lots the successful bids were $3,400 and $3,500 each, and for the corner of Seabury Place and One Hundred and Seventy-second Street $5,300. The northwest corner of One Hundred and Seventy-second Street and Minford Place went to James Neil for $6,000, and thirteen other lots on Minford Place to the Stability Realty Company for $4,000 each.

The southwest and northwest corners of the Southern Boulevard and One Hundred and Seventy-second Street were sold for $10,000 and $9,500 respectively. North of One Hundred and Seventy-second Street, on the Southern Boulevard, nineteen lots were struck down at prices varying from $5,325 to $5,500 a lot. Paul Mayer bought the northwest corner of One Hundred and Seventy-second and Hoe Streets for $5,500 and Henry Sperling a number of adjoining lots on Hoe Street for $2,250 each. On the east side of Hoe Street prices averaged $2,000 each and on the west side of Vyse Street, near One Hundred and Seventy-third Street, 1,325. For the last lots offered, on the east side of Vyse Street, $2,240 each was paid and $5,500 for the lot at the southeast corner of Vyse and One Hundred and Seventy-third Street.

Among others buyers were Samuel McMillan, Ferdinand Hecht, Louis Bauer, Sol Jacobs, Benjamin J. Applebaum, and Andrew Brice.

NEW HOSPITAL NEAR BRIDGE.

Dr. Nelden Says It Will Soon Be Ready for Emergency Cases.

Dr. Andrew Linn Nelden of 13 East Twenty-ninth Street announced last night that the lower east side would soon have a new and free emergency hospital at 93 Gold Street, near the Brooklyn Bridge entrance. It will be known as St. Gregory's free hospital and will be open on June 1.

Dr. Nelden is the founder of the hospital. He says that, with the assistance of several of his patients, he has [illegible]

THREE ARE BURNED IN FLATHOUSE FIRE

A Score Trapped by Flames Before They Knew It.

BRAVE RESCUES IN HARLEM

House Ablaze from Roof to Cellar Before the Alarm Was Given—Two Victims May Die.

A fire started in a pile of rubbish at the foot of the dumb waiter shaft in the cellar of the five-story flat house at One Hundred and Twenty-seventh Street and Seventh Avenue a few minutes before 7 o'clock last night. In the rooms above most of the tenants sat at dinner.

Before they knew it a streak of flame, creeping up the shaft, had reached the roof, and, turned aside there by a trap door, was roaring around the woodwork, filling the halls with smoke and eating its way through the building.

In something less than fifteen minutes all escape save by the iron ladders on two sides of the house were blocked, and the flames had burst through the roof, and were leaping high into the gathering dusk, illuminating Harlem almost from river to river.

Of the score or more of people trapped by the flames, three were seriously burned, and many thrilling rescues were effected by firemen and policemen.

The injured are:

JAGER, BALTHASAR, 55 years old, burned on neck, body, and hands.

JAGER, Mrs. MARY, 60 years old, burned on face, head, and body. She will probably die.

FRITZ, Mrs. MARY, 34 years old, burned on face and body.

All three are in the J. Hood Wright Hospital. Mrs. Fritz's condition at midnight was very serious.

The flathouse is on the northwest corner. It is No. 207 on the One Hundred and Twenty-seventh Street side, and on the Seventh Avenue side No. 2,140. It was just 6:45 o'clock when about a dozen people in it smelled smoke and at once raised an alarm. The dumb waiter shaft was then full of flame, and the lower stairways rapidly becoming impassable for smoke.

The Jager family lived on the top floor in the rear. The family comprises an aged couple, Balthasar Jager, a fitter, and his wife, Mary, and their two daughters, Elizabeth Jager and Mrs. Louise Fritz. All four were at dinner when Elizabeth, the younger daughter, smelled smoke.

She opened the door leading to the stairway, and encountered a wall of smoke, with here and there a red gleam of flame. Then—why she doesn't know—she threw open the door of the dumb waiter. From that leaped a spurt of fire which nearly set her clothing ablaze.

Shouting to her sister and parents to follow her, the girl rushed downstairs through the smoke. When she reached the sidewalk she found that she was alone.

She tried to go back, but the firemen detained her, telling her that the stairway was impassable. Then she stood wailing that her parents were burning inside the house.

Meantime the other daughter, Mrs. Louise Fritz, tried to get her mother and father to follow her down the stairs. Then hearing the other tenants crying to each other on the fire escapes she decided to get out that way. She threw open the window and, getting out on the fire escape, tried to help her parents through. But they were already exhausted by the thick smoke.

The daughter got in again. The flames were roaring around the trio by then, but she managed to get the old folks out on the platform of the escape. From there the three climbed down with difficulty to the third floor, where four policemen, Martin, Klerks, Taylor, and Cunningham, passed them to the ground.

The three Jagers were in a terrible condition when put in the ambulance of the J. Hood Wright Hospital by Dr. Darling. All were burned, and the mother and daughter were hardly conscious. Mrs. Jager had inhaled the flames, and it is hardly thought that she can recover.

All of the tenants except the Jagers escaped without injury. Of the three, the man has the best chance of recovery. He is badly burned about the neck and hands, however, and his age will tell against him.

The damage done by the fire was estimated at $20,000.

OUR CHEAP RAILWAY RATES.

Australian Expert Says That Foreign Administrators Admire Them.

Sixty delegates to the International Railway Congress, recently held in Washington, came here from Boston yesterday on the Sound steamboat Priscilla. One of them, Hugh McLauchlan, Secretary of the Railway Department of Sydney, N. S. W., talked about Government regulation on railway rates.

"It is, of course, difficult for an outsider to discuss this subject," said Mr. McLauchlan, "but what strikes me very forcibly is the fact that under present conditions, America has far and away the cheapest rates in the world. It would be most difficult to attempt to lay down a scale of rates which would be applicable to the enormous mileage of America. Your railway rates, especially for long distances, are something that foreign administrators admire. The public gets the benefit of them."

F. A. CONSTABLE'S WILL.

Wife and Cousin May Continue the Dry Goods Business.

The will of Frederick A. Constable, the New York dry goods merchant, who died on April 10 in Sicily, was filed for probate in the Surrogates' Office yesterday. The bulk of Mr. Constable's estate is left to his widow, Louise Constable, and his two daughters, Marie Louise and Edith. The testator's cousin, Walter C. M. Constable, and the widow are named as executors and trustees.

The trustees are authorized to continue the business of Arnold, Constable & Co. for such period as they deem advisable. By the provisions of the will Mrs. Constable may become a general or special partner in the dry goods firm if she desires. But if the executors desire to sell the Constable interests in the firm they are empowered to do so.

MR. LITTLETON WON'T GO.

Thinks His Office Slighted in Slocum Statue Arrangements.

Borough President Littleton has declined to participate in the ceremonies attendant on the unveiling of the statue to Gen. Henry W. Slocum at Eastern Parkway and Bedford Avenue, Decoration Day. He feels that Park Commissioner Kennedy, in arranging for the reception to the President of the United States, should have included the Borough President on the committee. The Park Commissioner says that the committee has not yet been appointed, and said emphatically that he had no intention of slighting Mr. Littleton.

$2,000,000 Rapid Transit Betterment Planned—New Station Open.

Clifton Station on the Staten Island Rapid Transit Railroad ceased to be yesterday. To-day the trains which formerly stopped at it will stop at Vanderbilt, a new station close by. The building was erected by George W. Vanderbilt at the foot of Vanderbilt Avenue, which leads to property he is improving. Yesterday Talbott Root, as Mr. Vanderbilt's personal representative, turned over the keys of the station, golden keys, tied with red, white, and blue ribbons, to George R. Cromwell, Second Vice President of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad and General Manager of the Staten Island Rapid Transit. Besides the railroad officials most of the borough officers were on hand to witness the ceremony.

The station is one of the handsomest in the State. No wood is used in its construction, and the walls are of concrete. It is of the California Mission style, and harmonizes with the style of buildings Mr. Vanderbilt is erecting. It was opened today because it forms one of the best approaches to Fox Hills, where the Metropolitan golf championship match starts today.

In responding to Mr. Root's short address, General Manager Cromwell said that the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad intended to spend in the immediate future something like $2,000,000 in improving the Staten Island lines. This included both the shore and Amboy Divisions. Although he did not say so, it is understood that the road is to follow the example of others and electrify.

50 STAB WOUNDS ON TWO.

Italians Found Unconscious After Battle in Hall Downtown.

There was a stabbing affray early this morning in the tenement house at 6 Roosevelt Street, and as a result two men are in the Hudson Street Hospital suffering from stab wounds all over the body. It is thought that they cannot live. Eleven men and women were locked up in the Oak Street Station as witnesses.

The stabbing affray laster for nearly fifteen minutes. The house was in an uproar. Men escaped by the roof, and when the police arrived they were unable to find any knives. Two of the men were found unconscious in the hall where the fight took place.

As far as the police could learn the fight started between Carlo Grasso and Giuseppi Masido, who live on the third floor. The men, it is said, met in the hall, and Grasso, who is married, asked the other man why he had made insulting remarks to his wife. Masido replied that he did not make them, and then, it is alleged, Grasso drew a knife and started at Masido, who also drew a knife.

After the police arrived an ambulance was called from the Hudson Street Hospital. Dr. Long, who took the men to that institution, said that from hasty examination he believed that each man had at least twenty-five stab wounds.

SUES MRS. RING.

$25,000 Slander Case Against Mount Vernon's Wealthiest Woman.

Special to The New York Times.

MOUNT VERNON, May 23.—Papers have been served in a twenty-five-thousand-dollar damage suit brought by Miss Grace Raymond against Mrs. Naomi Duncombe Ring, known as the wealthiest woman of Mount Vernon, for slander.

Miss Raymond alleges that on June 28 last year, Mrs. Duncombe attempted to horsewhip her while she was on her way to the Catholic Church in Mount Vernon. She declares that Mrs. Ring is jealous of her and has persecuted her by following her on the streets and calling her names.

Mrs. Ring is part owner of the Mount Vernon Opera House, where Miss Raymond was for several years employed as bookkeeper. Mrs. Ring is suing her husband, P. J. Ring, for the return of a half interest in the new $50,000 theatre building transferred by her to him in an antenuptial agreement. She alleges that Ring prepared the papers in such a manner as to deceive her.

ROEBLING BOY NOT FOUND.

Left Note for His Mother, Saying He Was Going Roaming.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., May 23.—Notwithstanding the fact that numerous telegrams have been sent to various sections of the country and despite the efforts of organized search parties, the mystery of the disappearance of Siegfried Roebling, the fourteen-year-old New Jersey boy, is still unsolved.

The anxiety felt by the authorities of the Asheville School increases hourly. The impression prevails in some quarters that the boy has been taken in by hospitable mountaineers.

Throughout the day search parties have scoured the neighboring mountains in the hope of finding some trace of the runaway. Several clues were followed, but all proved to be fruitless.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., May 23.—Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Roebling to-night received a telegram from Asheville saying that Siegfried Roebling left a note for his mother, declaring his intention of roaming about the country until the end of June, when he would return.

He gave no further particulars of his proposed journey.

AUTO ACCIDENT SERIOUS.

Little Hope for Frank Dunn, Run Down by New Yorkers.

HACKENSACK, May 23.—At the Hackensack Hospital to-day Dr. Spiro, the house surgeon, said that Frank Dunn, who, with P. F. Cunningham, was run over by an automobile on Sunday night, would probably die from the effects of his injuries.

Dunn has denied that he or his companion, Cunningham, who was only slightly injured, was under the influence of liquor at the time.

The automobile that ran down the two men was occupied by H. Meyer Bogert and his wife and son and Mr. and Mrs. Harry J. Greenbank of New York.

E. W. Nash Stricken with Paralysis.

OMAHA, Neb., May 23.—Edward W. Nash, President of the American Smelting and Refining Company, was stricken with paralysis last evening while attending a dinner at the home of Herman Kountz, a banker of this city. He is better to-day, and there are hopes of his recovery. Mr. Nash, besides being President of the Smelting and Refining Company, is Director of the South Omaha National Bank and a large stockholder in several Omaha concerns.

SEVEN YACHTS SIGHTED; ATLANTIC LEADING

Bremen Reports Capt. Barr's Boat Making Great Speed.

SUNBEAM TWICE REPORTED

Hildegarde Also Heard From, but Early in the Race—Apache Spoken by Columbia.

There has been a wide discrepancy in the estimates of the distance traversed by the Kaiser's Cup yachts in the race to the Lizard, because of a general confusion in the popular mind of nautical with geographical miles. The knot, or nautical mile, is 6,087 feet, while a geographical mile, with which the landsman is familiar, is 5,280 feet. A degree of longitude, in which the location of the boats sighted has been stated, is nearly fourteen miles shorter along the fortieth parallel of latitude than at the equator. A degree where the boats have been sailing is 46.079 miles, instead of 60, as ordinarily understood.

For the purpose of estimating the exact distance each yacht has gone in the race, figured in a direct line, and not the distance traversed in reaching the point attained, the following table shows the nautical miles from each point to New York. Were the same distances stated geographically they would be much greater.

The ultimate destination of the yachts is the Lizard Light, 7 degrees west longitude and 50 degrees north latitude. New York is 74 degrees west longitude and 40 degrees 42 minutes north latitude. The progress each boat is making can be readily followed by bearing these two points in mind. Each degree on a direct line from one place to the other represents 43 miles. The total distance is 3,020 knots, or 3,503 geographical miles. The table follows:

PRESENT RECORD.

332. Endym'n. 7.10 50.00 3,020 Lizard Light. 9.1

Seven reports were received yesterday from various sources from the Kaiser Cup yachts. The first three were from the belated Nettie Shipman, Savannah to Boston, which sighted the racers on Thursday morning. She saw the Endymion before Commodore Lauder's boat passed the Kennell, which was heard from two days ago. But she reported the Hildegarde and Sunbeam, which had not yet been spoken. The Sunbeam was later reported by the Kronprinz Wilhelm by wireless as late as 2 o'clock on Monday morning, while shortly after the Columbia was heard from, saying she had seen the Apache at 7 on Monday and the Bremen, which had passed the Atlantic on Sunday morning.

The report from the Bremen is most interesting, inasmuch as it proves that the Atlantic was maintaining during the twenty-four hours succeeding the time last sighted the speed she then showed. From 10 o'clock on Saturday night, when passed by the Noordam, until 8 o'clock Sunday morning, when sighted by the Bremen, she had averaged ten knots an hour, making the fifty-sixth longitudinal parallel, ninety-two miles further east, and the forty-first latitudinal parallel, seven miles further north. This rate of speed would easily justify the estimates that by Monday night she was several hundred miles ahead of the Endymion's record.

The Sunbeam report is next in importance. Lord Brassey's yacht was heard from in the morning from the Nettie Shipman, which reported her on Thursday to have been 138 miles east of New York at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. On Monday morning at 2 o'clock, when seen by the Kronprinz Wilhelm, she was 832 miles out and had improved her average from less than five knots against the headwinds to over seven and a half knots for the entire period. The Sunbeam was sighted sixty-four miles east of the Atlantic's position twenty-eight hours before and not so far north. The Atlantic must therefore have been at that time between two and three hundred miles ahead of her.

The Apache's report is the third heard from her. She was far to the north of the course taken by the Atlantic and on the same parallel of longitude on Monday at 7 o'clock in the morning that the Atlantic had reached on Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Her average has improved with the west winds, but she still appears to be hopelessly in the rear.

The reports follow:

Capt. Nierich of the North German Lloyd steamer Bremen, arriving at New York yesterday from Bremen and Cherbourg, sighted a yacht he believed to be the Atlantic on Sunday morning, May 21, at 8 o'clock, in longitude 56, latitude 41. She was seven miles distant and showing no signals. She was over a hundred miles from the position reported the previous day by three liners ten hours earlier.

The following dispatch, received by the Associated Press by wireless, says:

Steamship Kronprinz Wilhelm, via Marconi Wireless Station at Siasconset, Mass., May 23.—Passed May 22 at 1:40 A. M., in latitude 40.39 north, longitude 55.55 west, 317 miles east of Sandy Hook, English topsail schooner Sunbeam. RICHTER, Captain.

From the Anchor Liner Columbia, from New York to Glasgow, same the following:

Cape Race, N. F., via Marconi Station, Steamship Columbia, May 23.—Associated Press, New York, Monday, May 22, 7 A. M., latitude 43.23, longitude 59.50, 685 miles east of Sandy Hook Lightship, passed five miles north of bark with all square sails and staysails set. Wind west-southwest, fresh. Strongly resembled the Apache. COLUMBIA.

From Boston comes the following:

Capt. Hunter of the schooner Nettie Shipman, belated from Savannah for Boston, reported having passed three of the ocean yachts on Thursday last, the second day of the race. He met the Hildegarde, E. F. Coleman's schooner, well to the south in longitude 71.09, latitude 39.23, at 10 o'clock in the morning. She was footing fast, but not pointing well. He saw the Endymion, Commodore Lauder's record holder, at noon on the same day in longitude 71.00, latitude 39.41, making good headway, and at 4 o'clock Lord Brassey's Sunbeam in longitude 70.49, latitude 40.06. He also saw a fourth yacht, but could not make out her identity.

From Philadelphia:

The British steamer Westernland, from Liverpool, reports Saturday May 20, 1:15 P. M., latitude 40.48 north, longitude 60.20 west, spoke yacht Atlantic with all sails set, fair wind, and going at a fine clip.

COURT WITHDRAWS PICKETS.

Police Must Not Stand in Front of Union Square Place.

William Dunn, who has a picture frame and molding establishment at 42 Union Square, yesterday obtained an injunction from Justice Greenbaum in the Supreme Court restraining Police Captain Hussey of the East Twenty-second Street Station from stationing policemen in front of his premises.

The police were stationing pickets to stop a place which they suspected was a poolroom from doing business. The court refused to enjoin the Police Commissioner, who had denied that he had authorised Capt. Hussey to station men there, but in granting the injunction against Capt. Hussey the court says that "mere suspicion" will not justify the continual invasion of a citizen's premises, and that if gambling is going on there the police have full power either to enter or put a stop to it.

GEM ROBBERY PUZZLES.

No Solution Yet—Jewelers Testify to Tiffany Workmen's Honesty.

How the three valuable diamonds that left Tiffany's workshop in Union Square the other day disappeared was not clear up yesterday.

Emphasis was put by several jewelers yesterday on the reputation for honesty that diamond workers have. One John Street dealer said that each workman in Tiffany's had a little tin box in which, every night, he put his implements and the gems with which he had worked.

"Are the contents of each box examined at night before they are put into the safe?" the manufacturing jeweler was asked.

"To tell the truth," he said, "they are very seldom examined, though they are supposed to be. It would be an almost endless task for the foreman, or whatever the man in charge may be, to look into every box and see if every tiniest article is there. So the boxes are put in the safe as they are. The workmen are always so honest that nothing is ever lost this way—at least I, with a long experience, have never heard of a big loss before this one at Tiffany's—and I feel sure that none of the workmen there took the stones. The workmen are the most honest set of men in the world."

CZAR FOR STATE INSURANCE.

Approves Plan After Scandals in Private Russian Companies.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 23.—At the Ministry of Finance it was learned to-day that, following scandals in the administration of Russian life insurance companies, a new plan for State insurance had received imperial approval.

Some years ago, under M. Witte, President of the Committee of Ministers, a State insurance monopoly was proposed, but was abandoned as impracticable.

The project adopted is a system of popular insurance modeled somewhat on the German system, the amounts being limited to $2,500 and the insurance to be conducted through the savings banks. The insurance will be granted without examination, but if the insured dies within five years only the premiums will be returnable. It is quite likely that the new system will be combined later with the plan for State insurance for workmen which is being elaborated in accordance with the Emperor's promise to the workmen after the serious rioting of Jan. 22.

F. B. Course, the manager of one of the American Companies, says the new system will not interfere with the foreign companies.

BRYAN ARRIVES HERE.

On Way to Explain Items in Bennett Will Statement.

William Jennings Bryan arrived in the city last evening on his way to New Haven, where he is to make his accounting as executor of the estate of the late Philo S. Bennett. He was asked to make his appearance in court by Judge Stoddard, who desires to question him about some of the items in his statement.

Mr. Bryan took dinner last evening with Dr. John W. Cox. Later he and Urey Woodson, the Secretary of the National Committee, had a talk at the Hoffman House. Mr. Bryan retired early.

BARS CONVICT LABOR.

President Forbids Its Employment on Government Work.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—The President has issued an order prohibiting the employment of convict labor on Government works. The question of the employment of such labor was raised in connection with certain river and harbor improvements in Arkansas, the contractor for which desired to employ a number of State convicts under contract with the State authorities.

The officials of the War Department were almost unanimously opposed to the plan, and Judge Advocate General Davis gave the opinion that it was contrary to the spirit, if not the letter, of the labor laws of the United States.

MERCHANTS THANK JEROME.

Applaud Amendment Which Makes Fraud More Perilous.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Merchants' Protective Association, held last night, resolutions were unanimously adopted thanking District Attorney Jerome for his efforts which resulted in the passage of an amendment to Section 944 of the Penal Code.

At the meeting of the association last night it was decided to invite Mr. Jerome to a banquet as a mark of the association's esteem. The banquet will take place about the middle of June, probably at the St. Regis Hotel.

WILL STOP SUNDAY BALL.

Where Fees Are Charged or Programmes Sold, Delany So Rules.

Police Commissioner McAdoo received from Corporation Counsel Delany yesterday an opinion advising him that arrests for Sunday baseball playing may be made by the police without warrant in cases of professional games where an admission fee is charged. Mr. McAdoo says he will follow the advice of the Corporation Counsel and arrest as fast as violations occur. As he understands the opinion, the selling of programmes instead of charging for admission is only a subterfuge, and arrests will be made in either case.

FALLS IN STEEPLECHASE.

Amateur Jockey F. A. Clark Escapes, While Professional Is Hurt.

Three horses of the five that ran in the Hunters' Steeplechase at Belmont Park yesterday fell, and one jockey, taken from the field on a stretcher, was afterward removed in an ambulance, but through all the accidents of the race public interest which was not fixed on the possible winner was centred in the amateur jockey, F. Ambrose Clark, who came to grief directly in front of the club stand.

Mr. Clark, who maintains a stable of steeplechasers, and patronises that form of racing only, had no horse of his own ready for the race, but he eagerly took the mount offered on H. S. Page's Pious for the fun of the thing. When Pious fell with him, Mr. Clark went down in a heap and rolled over and over, at first seemingly badly hurt, but he arose and scrambled out of the way of the horses, and then spent the next five minutes looking for his whip, which he lost in the tumble.

Pending, who fell with Red, White, and Blue, was removed to the emergency hospital in the house, where he was found to have suffered no serious injury, while Patagonian went on and won a fifty-dollar fee for Jockey O'Brien by beating Mr. Page on Snuff.

NEW YORK A. C. GROWING.

Membership Limit Increased in All Classes by Board of Governors.

The membership limit of all classes of membership in the New York Athletic Club was increased last night at a special meeting of the Board of Governors of the organization. The meeting was held in the clubhouse, Sixth Avenue and Central Park South.

The junior membership was increased to 200 and the age of eligibility was placed at fifteen years instead of sixteen years. The athletic membership was increased from 150 to 200, the resident membership from 2,300 to 2,500, and the life membership was reopened so that the list may be increased from 200 to 300.

An important amendment to one of the articles of the constitution of the club was to the effect that no person should be eligible to membership in any of the said classes unless he be

10,000 LOCKED OUT IN ROCKMEN'S QUARREL

Jobs of 16,000 More in Danger If the Union Doesn't Give In.

BUILDERS BACK CONTRACTORS

The Employers Decide to Shut Off Continued Petty Strikes by a Bold Stroke—Men Surprised.

The members of the Contractors' Protective Association forced the fighting on the Rockmens and Excavators' Union yesterday by locking out between 10,000 and 12,000 members of the union employed on more than 100 contracts. Between 75 and 80 of the members of the association are involved in this lock-out, and to-day and to-morrow it is expected that the lock-out will be extended to the rest of the 20,000 members of the union.

A general lock-out of the men was threatened if their union ordered more strikes. Yesterday more than half of the contractors came to the conclusion that the sooner the situation was cleared up the better, and locked their men out ahead of time. The principal demand of the men is for recognition of the union.

The men were notified on Monday night that they need not report for work yesterday.

The notification was totally unexpected. The date when the yards now closed will be reopened for the employment of non-union men has been left to the Emergency Committee of the association, which will wait until to-day or to-morrow before taking action.

Among the association firms whose yards were closed yesterday are the Thomas Crimmins Contracting Company, James J. Duffy, James Dempsey, Hugh Colwell, James D. Howe, W. H. Masterson, Bernard McQuillan, and Patrick Morton. All of these have excavating contracts for large buildings. Eugene P. Clark, Secretary of the Contractors' Protective Association, said yesterday:

"The lock-out may delay work for a few days, but we have the support of the building employers in the stand we have taken. Before a lock-out was decided on we had conferences with representatives of the Mason Builders' Association and the proprietors of the building material yards. We explained the situation. They realized the necessity for taking strong measures at once, and will put no obstacle in the way of our ending the fight with the union for good.

"Builders generally recognize that it encourages strikes and disruption in the building trade to recognize unions of unskilled workers. When our Emergency Committee fixes a date for reopening the yards the locked-out men can come back to work, if they return unconditionally and there are places for them. This condition will also apply to the rock drillers, engineers, firemen, boilermakers, and others who have struck in sympathy."

The action of the Contractors' Protective Association in starting the lock-out was hastened by the decision of the teamsters last week to stand by an agreement they have with the association. The employers were disinclined to throw thousands of men in other trades idle. Now they want to insure ending the fight at once. The lock-out will stop work for the time on hundreds of buildings in the city where excavating is just beginning, but it will have no effect on buildings where work has gone beyond the foundation stage.

UNION MAN FEARFULLY CUT.

Long Wound on His Face Made by Assailants.

Charles A. Haskell, an ironworker, was attacked by four men at First Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street, yesterday afternoon, beaten and slashed with a razor from his left eye across the cheek, over the lip, and down across the right side of the face to the throat. The wound may cause his death.

The police believe that the attack was the result of a factional fight in Haskell's union. He works for the White Engineering Company of Columbia Street, Brooklyn. Yesterday he was sent to help out on an electrical plant the company is putting in at the foot of Fifty-ninth Street. He finished about 4 o'clock and started for his home, at 578 Clinton Street, Brooklyn.

In front of 410 East Fifty-ninth Street four men appeared. They surrounded Haskell and one of them struck him in the face. Haskell struck out in return, but he was hit again by two of the others and staggered. Then the fourth man, who had been ready to give the final blow, drew a razor across Haskell's face as the ironworker fell unconscious on the sidewalk.

The four men ran and easily escaped, dropping the razor. The fight was over so quickly that none of the people about had time to interfere.

Policeman Carroll sent in a hurry call to Flower Hospital for an ambulance. Dr. Cocheu found that, besides the cut across the face the man had four scalp wounds, showing that he had been hit with some other weapon. The razor bore the initials "E. L." scratched in by some one.

BREWERY COOPERS STRIKE.

Ignoring Peace Negotiations Arranged by a Labor Committee.

A general strike of the coopers in city breweries began yesterday for a reduction of hours from nine to eight a day and an advance in wages from $18 and $19 to $21 and $22 a week. A Central Federated Union committee had arranged for negotiations with the labor committee of the Employing Brewers' Association, but the coopers ignored this committee. The journeymen brewers and the drivers, firemen, and engineers in the breweries have agreements with the brewery owners, and will not strike in sympathy.

WALLACE SUCCEEDS OLCOTT.

For several years he has been Fourth Vice President of the Central Trust Company. He is not yet forty years old.

HARRIMAN SETTLES ON J. J. HILL'S TERMS

Peace in Northwest Railroad Situation Officially Announced.

STOCKS THEN RISE SHARPLY

Harriman Now to Go to Europe for Several Months—St. Paul May Join Agreement.

Official announcement was made yesterday of the settlement of whatever disagreements existed between the Hill-Morgan faction on the one side and E. H. Harriman on the other regarding the Northwest railroad situation.

Knowledge that this announcement would be made officially was known to many in Wall Street before the opening of the market, and London is believed to have known it still earlier. The immediate result was a sharp rise in all stocks, but particularly in those of the railroads immediately concerned, for Wall Street after a six days' decline was ready to accept good news and act thereon.

That such a settlement was practically completed and that announcement officially might be expected at any time was foretold in THE TIMES last Friday.

According to declarations made yesterday by representatives of both the Hill and the Harriman interests, they have arranged a formal agreement which assures peace between the dissenting factions. Just what the terms of peace were could not be learned officially, but according to a well-known financier, who is in a position to know, the terms were those imposed by Mr. Hill. The latter and his associates have been making no secret of the fact that they could force a rate war which would ruin every railroad in the West, except the Great Northern, which is lightly burdened with fixed charges. The figures bearing on this point have been published several times in the last few months, and Hill representatives have given all those who took the trouble to ask them to understand that unless their suggestions were adopted there could be no settlement of the railroad situation. They then formed a combination with other powerful interests by which it was hoped to put more force into their argument and to convince Mr. Harriman that his interests as well as those of the general public demanded that he reconsider his asserted attitude.

When Mr. Harriman was not re-elected a Director of the Northern Pacific at the stockholders' meeting last week it was semi-officially announced that he had made a change of front and had admitted the justice of the Hill faction's argument. When Wall Street therefore heard of the official announcement yesterday of a settlement of ~~the entire~~ dispute it assumed that the outcome represented a victory for the Hill-Morgan ideas and something in the nature of a defeat for Mr. Harriman. This opinion became more fixed on the announcement that Mr. Harriman would sail at an early date for Europe with his entire family, to be gone several months.

The Harriman view of the settlement was contained in a statement made by one of his representatives, who said:

"The only differences existing between Mr. Hill and Mr. Harriman have been of the kind which might exist between men otherwise on friendly terms in a matter of opinion. Both sides to the controversy, however, recognized that the magnitude of the interests involved was so large that an amicable agreement was imperative. They therefore decided to arrange their differences and to pay the accumulated profits and dividends to the stockholders rather than waste them in a rate war for the benefit of outsiders."

Representatives of the Hill interests did not disguise their satisfaction at the outcome of the matter, although they took pains to create the impression that the newly achieved harmony was one of mutual satisfaction.

The immediate result of the settlement will be that the Union Pacific will not build into the territory of the Great Northern, and vice versa, and that instead of encroachments on the other's sources of wealth there will be a strict observance of the rights of both parties.

Wall Street was curious yesterday to know just what the position of the St. Paul would be in this settlement, but according to the best information obtainable the relation of this road was not considered in the settlement, although it is believed that ultimately it will receive a just concession to its demands for recognition in any agreement between the other roads.

When the news came out Great Northern preferred rose an extreme 11½ points, closing at the very top. Northern Pacific was next in strength, as the other Hill-Morgan road. It gained 6⅞ points. The market closed, as the old-timers say, "in a blaze of glory" at the highest prices in a week.

SAVED CHILD, BUT MAY DIE.

Woman Badly Burned in Extinguishing Little Girl's Clothes.

After saving five-year-old Annie Thielhardt of 292 Eckford Street, Greenpoint, from being burned to death last evening, Miss Annie McMurray, who lives in the same house, was sent to the Eastern District Hospital and is said to be in a dying condition. She was burned all over the head, face, and body.

The Thielhardt child was playing with matches in the yard, when her clothes caught fire. Miss McMurray heard her screams, and, throwing off some of her own garments, tried to smother the fire. Her own clothes caught fire, but not until the young woman had wrapped a door mat around the girl, extinguishing her apparel, did she look after her own self. Her screams brought help from the house, but the fire was not smothered until she was so badly burned that her life is despaired of.

GIRL SWEPT UNDER CAR.

In Odd Accident Near Bridge Miss Demorest Loses Leg.

While crossing Park Row, opposite the Manhattan entrance to the Brooklyn Bridge, shortly before 10 o'clock last night, Miss Eva Demorest, the twenty-two-year-old daughter of the proprietor of the Demorest Hotel, at 98 Barclay Street, where she lived, was struck, knocked down, and run over by a southbound Madison Avenue car. Her right leg was cut off below the knee, and her left leg so badly injured that amputation of that may be necessary. Hardly an inch of the young woman's body escaped bruising.

Miss Demorest was a member of a party, which included several men. They stood in the street, waiting for the car to round the curve on the extreme west track. The forward part of the car rounded the curve all right at good speed. In some manner Miss Demorest was caught in the mechanism at the side of the car and drawn under.

Alfred J. Patterson, a lawyer at 258 Broadway, was one of the men in the party, and was walking close to Miss Demorest. Mr. Patterson afterward declared that in his opinion Miss Demorest's skirt must have become tangled or caught in some part of the car, along the side, with just enough of it caught to cause the girl to lose her balance, for she fell backward and her feet went under the car.

Women and men who witnessed the accident screamed and called to the motorman to stop his car. Only then did he know that anything had happened.

Miss Demorest did not faint. She was taken to Hudson Street Hospital, where an operation was necessary on the right leg. The car wheel had cut off the foot six inches above the ankle. The doctors found a compound fracture of the left leg and bruises all over the young woman's body.

In the party, besides Mr. Patterson, was Henry Wehman, song writer and publisher. Patterson was standing so close to Miss Demorest that he was knocked down, and fell on the prostrate girl.

While there is a chance that the young woman may recover, her condition early this morning was very serious.

TO DEPORT RAILWAY MEN.

Canadian Judge Issues Order Against Pere Marquette Employes.

DETROIT, Mich., May 24.—Railroad circles here were deeply stirred to-day by news from St. Thomas, Ontario, that Judge Winchester had ordered the deportation of some of the officials of the Pere Marquette Railroad in Canada. The decision came as the result of an investigation into charges that the railroad had been following a policy of replacing residents of Canada and men of unquestioned competency with officials brought from the United States.

The men ordered deported are Superintendent J. S. Pyeatt, Trainmaster E. Cain, Chief Dispatcher J. R. Gilhula, Assistant Master Mechanic J. McMany, General Foreman Geoning, Assistant General Foreman Shoemaker, Assistant Engineer O. C. Laseur, Foreman Osborne of the inter-locking plants and signals, Private Secretary O'Laughlin of the Superintendent's office, and Storekeeper Hunter, all of St. Thomas, and Edgar Britton, District Passenger Agent at London, Ontario.

Officials affected are allowed to take time to arrange their affairs, and for the railroad to carry an appeal to the Government authorities at Ottawa. It is understood that steps already have been taken toward an appeal, General Counsel Frederick W. Stevens of the Pere Marquette Road holding that the alien contract labor law of Canada does not apply in this case or in any case involving such skilled labor as is required of the officials in question.

It is stated in behalf of the railroad that a large number of citizens of St. Thomas have signed a petition favoring the railroad's attitude in the matter, and that the Board of Commerce and the City Council of St. Thomas have taken formal action recommending that the position of the railroad be sustained.

GEORGE B. WHEELER KILLED.

Special to The New York Times.

PORTLAND, Me., May 24.—While George B. Wheeler, who came to Pownal, Me., from New York, in search of health a month ago, was driving along the country road a big touring automobile came whizzing past and scared the horse. The animal dashed for a near-by barn. Mr. Wheeler was thrown violently from the wagon against the side of the barn and his skull was fractured. He died in an hour. He leaves a widow and two daughters.

The automobile, in which were a man and two women, disappeared before it was possible to ascertain the identity of the occupants.

STAGE ROBBED OF $700.

Driver Shot and Government Money Stolen—Guard Is Accused.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., May 24.—The Ensenada-San Quentin stage was robbed today. The driver was shot and Government funds in transit were stolen.

The robbery took place at La Gruella Cañon, eighteen miles south of Ensenada. The stage carried $700 of Government money, which was intended to pay men working on the road near San Quentin, and which was guarded by a special rural messenger, Estrada.

Estrada, it is alleged, shot the driver, Pancho Arans, in the neck, and clubbed him until he was apparently dead, and then decamped with the funds.

A posse has started in pursuit.

Police Chief of Siedice Severely Injured—Peasants in Minsk Seize the Nobles' Lands.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES.
Special Cable. Copyright, 1905.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 24.—News has been received from Baku of the assassination of the Governor, Prince Nakashidze, by a bomb.

The Prince was blamed both by the Armenians and the Mohammedans for taking no steps to prevent the massacres at Baku.

Much alarm has been caused by almost simultaneous bomb outrages at Warsaw, Siedice, and Moscow.

An extensive agrarian movement is reported from Minsk. The peasants of several communes of the District of Borisoff have partitioned the lands of the nobles and plowed them.

The Jews have taken a vow to abstain from going to places of amusement for three months as a sign of mourning for the victims at Zhitomir.

By The Associated Press.

BAKU, May 24.—The Governor of Baku, Prince Nakashidze, was assassinated at 3 P. M. to-day by a bomb which was thrown at his carriage.

A Lieutenant, who was accompanying the Governor, and a bystander were also killed by the explosion, and the coachman is believed to have been mortally injured.

WARSAW, May 24.—The Chief of Police of Siedice, capital of the Government of that name, was severely injured by the explosion of a bomb at midnight.

He was sitting on the veranda of a club when an unknown man approached and hurled a bomb at him. The missile fell short, but exploded near enough to the Chief of Police for fragments to injure him seriously. Three other persons were also injured.

The man who threw the bomb escaped.

MOSCOW, May 24.—On Monday evening a bomb was exploded in a street in the Yamoskowretchie quarter, across the river from the Kremlin.

The explosion is looked upon as a joke. No one was injured, no damage was done to property, and the perpetrators escaped.

ST. PETERSBURG, Thursday, May 25.—Though no details of the assassination of Prince Nakashidze have been received the impression here is that the outrage was the work of the Armenian Revolutionary Committee in revenge for the attitude taken by the Prince during the racial war between Armenians and Tartars in February, and that it is not attributable to Russian Terrorists, even though the latter are at present extremely active in many parts of the empire.

The Armenians laid the responsibility for the deaths of those slain in February at the door of Prince Nakashidze, and only yesterday suit was begun against the Prince before the Senate Tribunal here on behalf of the children of Lalaieff, a Baku millionaire, whose house was stormed and burned and who was killed, together with his wife and parents.

Damages of $12,500 were claimed, it being maintained that the Governor, instead of performing his duty by stopping the massacre, actually incited the Tartars to attack the Armenians.

Prince Nakashidze was popular among the Russian element in the Caucasus. He was a man of high spirits, and in spite of the hatred of the powerful Armenian Revolutionary Committee he disdained military protection, and appeared on the streets unattended. He refused to heed the warnings and entreaties of his friends.

CZAR'S FOES COMBINING.

Gopon Says All Now Agree That Measures of Force Are Warranted.

PARIS, May 24.—The Journal publishes a statement recently made by Father Gopon, but the place and circumstances of the statement are not disclosed owing to a desire not to put the Russian police on Gopon's track. Gopon says in part:

"The most important effect of the events of Jan. 22 has been to unify the various elements of the revolutionary movement. The Social Democracy and the other groups now join in recognising that the emancipation of the people warrants the use of any and all measures of force against the autocracy.

"I have conferred with the heads of many groups who are seeking co-ordinate methods with a view to provoking an uprising of the people."

Gopon says the return of Russia's defeated army will add an enormous body of malcontents to the ranks of those already disaffected.

WANTS PAUL MORTON BACK.

But Santa Fe Cannot Get Him Except as Road's President.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 24.—Paul Morton, Secretary of the Navy, will not go back to the Santa Fé Railroad as Second Vice President, the position he held prior to entering the Cabinet. He may not return to railroad work at all.

According to an intimate friend of Mr. Morton, extraordinary efforts are being made to induce him to return to the Santa Fé, but he will go back as President of the system or not at all.

Mr. Morton reached Chicago this morning. He went to the offices of the Santa Fé and had a conference with President Ripley.

TOGO'S DEFEAT RUMORED.

Unconfirmed Report in Manila of a Battle South of Formosa.

MANILA, Thursday, May 25.—There is an unconfirmed rumor that the Russian and Japanese fleets have met south of Formosa, and that the Japanese have been defeated.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 24.—In naval circles it is now generally assumed that Admiral Rojestvensky's squadrons are in the Pacific steaming northward and giving the Pescadores, Formosa, and the Loochoo Islands a wide berth, in order to minimize the danger of a concentrated torpedo attack under cover of these islands and to force Admiral Togo, should he elect to accept battle, to meet the Russians in the open.

All idea that the Russian Admiral will attempt to force a passage of the Korean Straits has been abandoned.

Both La Perouse Strait, between the Islands of Hokkaido and Sakhalin, and Tsugaru Straits, between the Islands of Hokkaido and Hondo, were reconnoitred by cruisers and destroyers from Vladivostok, and the results were communicated to Rojestvensky before he left the coast of French Indo-China.

CLEW TO TIFFANY GEMS.

Detective Leaves In Haste to Seek Them in the West.

Drawn to the West by a clue in the Tiffany jewel case, Arthur Merklein of Charles Heidelberg's Detective Agency, left New York yesterday in haste.

"Can't tell you anything to-day," said Merklein, "as he was about to leave for the ferry, "but I'm thinking there'll be some news when I get back from the West Monday."

The theory that a thief might have taken the diamonds to Chicago was advanced yesterday. The story that the thief had demanded $10,000 from Tiffany & Co. before returning the jewels was pronounced a "fake" by one of the firm's Directors yesterday.

At Police Headquarters, Acting Capt. McCauley, speaking for Inspector O'Brien, said that nothing new had been discovered by the Central Office men. Albert Sormani, who was working with the jewels the day before the loss was discovered, said yesterday that, instead of laying them upon a shelf, as had been reported, he had given the tray directly into the hands of the man who was to put them into the safe. The old workman is still greatly distressed by the loss, and spends most of his time puzzling over it.

WARNS BUCKET SHOPS.

Jersey City Will Resist New York Invasion, Prosecutor Says.

Prosecutor William H. Speer of Hudson County announced yesterday that he would not tolerate New York bucket shops in Jersey City.

"They are simply gambling concerns," he said, "and those who operate them are liable to prosecution on the charge of conducting disorderly houses. Not only that, but the owner of a building who leases it for such a purpose is liable to prosecution. The law is clear on both points.

"The fact that a number of stock gambling concerns are headed for Jersey City has been in my possession for some time. The stock transfer tax law, which goes into effect in New York on June 1, offers a plausible excuse for the stock gamblers to move their offices to New Jersey. It is my duty to suppress gambling and to prosecute gamblers, and I propose to discharge my duty.

"I fully realize that great care must be taken to discriminate between the legitimate firms which intend to begin business in Jersey City and gambling shops. But it seems to me that the detection of the illicit concerns should not be difficult. Meanwhile I am keping in touch with the situation. The character of every stock brokerage concern that is coming to Jersey City is being investigated."

Chief of Police Murphy indorsed the prosecutor's views.

BEGS AND GIVES A DINNER.

Tale of an Englishman Who Lost $600 in His Travels.

Special to The New York Times.

MILWAUKEE, May 24.—When a man hears a "hard luck story" and gives a beggar 50 cents he does not expect to be invited to a banquet by the same beggar. But this has happened to several Milwaukee business men.

An English army officer temporarily out of luck was the beggar. Capt. John Pearson, son of the General Manager of the Great Western, England's largest railway, came to America to attend the International Railroad Congress. He later went to Minneapolis, where his father has milling interests. On his way to Milwaukee he lost $800. He arrived here with 75 cents.

"That is the best fairy story I ever heard," was what he usually got from Milwaukee business men to whom he told a straightforward story, "but here is $1."

He got enough to cable his father, who sent him $1,000. Then those business men received invitations to a banquet at the Hotel Pfister. They went. They were royally entertained. Capt. Pearson again thanked them and told his story.

CARNEGIE HERO BOARD MAKES NINE AWARDS

First Disbursements from the $5,000,000 Fund.

248 CASES WERE CONSIDERED

Survivors of Brockton Disaster Get $10,000—Medals and Money for Widows of Three Brave Men.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, May 24.—The Carnegie Hero Commission met here this afternoon and made the first awards provided for in the $5,000,000 fund created by Andrew Carnegie. Nine persons were rewarded for brave acts, six of them receiving bronze medals and three silver medals. Three widows who last their husbands while the latter were performing acts of bravery, received money.

The commission voted $10,000 to the fund for the survivors of the Brockton (Mass.) shoe factory explosion. Including the amount of money given survivors of heroes and for educational purposes, the board disposed of $12,200. The contract for manufacturing the medals was awarded to a Philadelphia firm. The commission has not yet decided upon the design of the medals.

Since the establishment of the fund on April 15, 405 cases have been received. Of this number 239 have been refused as not within the scope of the fund, 159 are awaiting investigation, and nine have been granted. The persons to whom medals were awarded, and their acts of heroism, were as follows:

Louis A. Bauman, Jr., aged seventeen, of Rodi, Allegheny County, Penn., received a bronze medal. On July 17, 1904, while a number of boys were swimming in Sulphur Pond, Charles Stevick jumped from a springboard into the pond and cried for help. Bauman dived three times for Stevick and finally dragged him to shore.

Lavinia Steele, twenty-seven, of Iowa City, Iowa, got a bronze medal. George E. Hill of Burlington and a party of young women went skating on the Iowa River, Dec. 9, 1904. The ice broke under Hill. Miss Steele secured an eight-foot pole and dragged Hill out of the water, risking her life on the thin ice.

Thomas H. McCann, thirty-two, of Portland, Me., saw Alfonso Sekosky, aged eight, fall into the ocean from the bridge connecting Portland and South Portland. McCann directed some boys to bring a boat around to him, and dived into the ocean. Sekosky threw his arms around McCann's neck, who swam with him. The boat reached him, and the boys took Sekosky from McCann's grasp, but McCann weakened, sank back into the water, and was drowned. Cora McCann, the widow, gets a bronze medal and $500.

Gideon King Marshall, thirty-nine, of Springdale, Allegheny County, Penn., lost his life going down into a gaseous well to rescue Arthur Truby, a laborer who had been overcome by gas. Sarah A. Marshall, his widow, receives a silver medal and $500 to pay off a mortgage on her home.

On April 4, 1904, Alexander Cameron, twenty-seven years old, of Lindsay County, Ontario, saw George H. Bryans, a boy, fall into the Scugog River. Cameron jumped in after the boy, caught him, and swam ashore. He suffered from cold, exhaustion, and nervous shock. He was awarded a silver medal.

Seymour J. Leighton, a machinist, lost his life July 4, 1904, on the Merrimac River, Lawrence, Mass., while rescuing Mary Genevieve Kane and Evelyn Bliss. The girls were in a canoe and were swept over a thirty-foot waterfall. His widow received a bronze medal.

John J. Healy, a hospital attendant at Ellis Island, New York, was awarded a bronze medal for saving the life of an immigrant girl who had jumped into the bay.

Miss Erneatine P. Atwood, aged seventeen, of Melrose, Mass., was bathing at North Weymouth, Mass., when she saw Harry M. Smith struggling in the water and almost exhausted. She rescued him, and receives $500 for educational purposes and a silver medal.

John J. Riley, aged forty-four, receives a bronze medal for saving August Rolkem of Brooklyn, N. Y., from drowning off the Iron Steamboat Company's Pier at Coney Island.

JUROR GOT $50 BY MAIL.

Attempted Bribery in Forgery Trial of Whiteman of Buffalo.

Special to The New York Times.

BUFFALO, May 24.—U. S. Grant Faling, the sick juror in the Whiteman forgery case, received a special delivery letter yesterday with $50 inclosed, asking him not to appear in court to-day and promising him $150 more if he stayed away for several days. The attempt to bribe the juror was made public by John W. Ryan, Assistant District Attorney.

Mr. Faling went in a carriage to the District Attorney's office, and after delivering the letter returned to his home. Owing to Mr. Faling's continued illness, Justice Childs to-day discharged the Whiteman jury and announced that the case would go over to the September term of court.

The letter to Faling, who is a well-known business man, was typewritten and was not signed. The money was in currency notes.

Whiteman was on trial charged with obtaining $750 from the Fidelity Trust Company on a raised check.

Friends Say He Will Surprise Accusers Before Legislature.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 24.—"Justice Hooker not only will not resign, but will make a defense before the Legislature which will surprise some people," was the statement made by a friend to-day.

"They will never be able to get a two-thirds vote to remove him," he added, "when the Legislature hears his defense."

Two of Justice Hooker's counsel, John B. Stanchfield and Lewis Carr, were before Gov. Higgins to-day in reference to the Goodsell bill. Mr. Carr said that he knew nothing about the report that Justice Hooker was thinking of resigning and did not believe it. The report that Justice Hooker would ask for a leave of absence from the Appellate Division was also discredited by his friends.

The boy's screams attracted a gang of Italian women who formed a circle around Mr. Lawrence and tried to pull the boy away. Some of the women attempted to tear the druggist's clothes, but he escaped from them by beating a hasty retreat.

PLANS FOR MISS ROOSEVELT.

She Is to Visit Cincinnati as Guest at Longworth Home.

Special to The New York Times.

CINCINNATI, May 24.—Miss Alice Roosevelt is to visit this city for about a week, arriving on the morning of June 8. She is to be a guest at the Longworth home, Rookwood. The fact that Mrs. Longworth leaves next Monday on a visit to her daughter, the Comtesse de Chambrun, in France, for the entire Summer, has caused some comment among those not fully informed on the subject.

Mrs. Longworth's engagement to go abroad was made long before Miss Roosevelt arranged to visit here, and cannot well be broken, it is said. Her daughter, Mrs. Buckner Wallingford, and her son, Congressman Nicholas Longworth, will be in charge of the home. A dinner dance at the Pillars, a country club; a dinner at the home of ex-Congressman Charles P. Taft, brother of the Secretary of War, and Congressman Longworth's private car party to the Latonia race track on Derby day are on the programme.

WEAVER, CHECKED, GETS ROOT'S HELP

Philadelphians, on Hurried Trip Here, Plan Gas Fight.

DEPARTMENTS ARE HEADLESS

Injunction Obtained by Ring Stops Removal of Directors—Leaders Talk Impeachment.

Mayor John Weaver of Philadelphia, accompanied by ex-Judge James Gay Gordon, his personal counsel, and George S. Graham, ex-District Attorney of Philadelphia, came to this city yesterday afternoon to consult with Elihu Root, who has been called in by Mayor Weaver as counsel in his fight against the seventy-five-year gas lease and the Republican machine of Philadelphia.

"I am in this fight to the finish, and I believe I will win out," were the first words Mayor Weaver uttered as he stepped from his train at the Jersey City terminal of the Pennsylvania Railroad shortly after 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The party went direct to the office of Mr. Root in the Mutual Life Building, at 32 Liberty Street, where a conference lasted for an hour and a half. Plans were laid for what probably will prove the most determined fight for civic righteousness and the defeat of the machine in the history of Philadelphia.

Ex-Judge Gordon, on behalf of Mayor Weaver, explained that the Mayor's trip had not been contemplated until the situation there had been rendered acute by the granting of an injunction, restraining the Mayor from removing David J. Smyth and Peter F. Costello as Directors of Public Safety and Public Works, respectively.

As soon as Judge Ralston in the Court of Common Pleas had granted the injunctions, Mayor Weaver called up Mr. Root on the telephone and made arrangements for the conference. Every possible effort was made to conceal the fact of the visit. Mayor Weaver and Judge Gordon were ushered into the Mutual Life Building by way of one of the Cedar Street entrances. At the office of Mr. Root the statement was given out that Mr. Root had left for the day.

Mr. Root and the Philadelphians were planning their big fight in a room on the same floor of the building, which no one would be liable to suspect was an annex to the suite occupied by Mr. Root. Mr. Root was the first of the conferrees to appear.

Statement by Mr. Root.

"Mayor Weaver, his counsel Judge Gordon, and myself have just held a conference of an hour and a half," said Mr. Root when cornered. "The conference was arranged for over the telephone this forenoon. Mayor Weaver told me he would wish to see me, and upon learning that I could not possibly come to Philadelphia to-day, determined to come to this city with his counsel.

"We considered the situation very fully—that is, from its legal aspect, and we also formulated plans for the fight which is bound to come. What these plans are, of course, it would be impossible for me to divulge. Mayor Weaver and Judge Gordon were to leave for Philadelphia this evening, and I believe they are gone by this time."

"Will you say whether Mayor Weaver himself or any representative of his has been in consultation with the legal representatives of the United Gas Improvement Company while in this city?" Mr. Root was asked.

"Not that I am aware of," said Mr. Root.

Mr. Root, it was learned, will go to Philadelphia on Monday, the day set by Judge Ralston for argument on the motion to make the temporary injunction granted to Directors Smyth and Costello permanent, and will represent the Mayor at those proceedings. This new phase of the situation was very thoroughly considered at the conference.

Judge Gordon, in explaining the purpose of the visit of Mayor Weaver and himself, said:

"The Mayor, in calling you into this fight, Mr. Root, feels and wants it distinctly understood that he considers the time has arrived to join issue squarely between the people of Philadelphia whom he represents and their enemies. The lines are already drawn in this contest, and Mayor Weaver is determined to make it a fight to the finish."

Mayor Weaver and Judge Gordon made their appearance shortly after Mr. Root had left and were seen as they were about to make their way back to the Pennsylvania terminal in time for the 7:55 train.

Mayor Weaver Explains.

"My object in coming to New York," said the Mayor, "was to consult with Mr. Root as to the legality of the stand I have taken in this fight and to ask his advice in regard to the entire situation over in Philadelphia."

"Some surprise has been expressed that you should come to New York for legal advice with so many lawyers in Philadelphia anxious to work," was suggested.

Mayor Weaver smiled quizzically. Ex-Judge Gordon, with a laugh, asked that the Mayor be excused from answering such a question. It was hinted by a friend of the Mayor that this fight might be carried so far that no lawyer with any desire for political or corporate preferment would care to undertake it in a community where political influence means as much as in Philadelphia.

A member of the Mayor's party at this point called attention to the fact that there would be an almost immediate marshaling of forces on the part of the civic organizations in Philadelphia, who would support the Mayor in a body, and that these organizations, for reasons of their own, probably would draw upon this city for legal talent. A first conference between the Mayor and representatives of these various organizations, it was estimated, was to be held immediately upon the return of Mayor Weaver and Judge Gordon to Philadelphia, either at the house of the Mayor or of the Judge.

Mayor Weaver was asked if he expected that the machine might carry the fight into the Pennsylvania Legislature.

"I hardly expect they will," was his reply. "Then, there is no telling where they will stop. Everybody expected that the public clamor would be sufficient to attitude of defiance. Instead, they have grown bolder. However, I am not anticipating any of their moves, but when they make them I will be ready to meet them.

"I think the time has come now to show whether politicians in Philadelphia are going to govern instead of being governed by the will of their constituents. The people of Philadelphia are getting tired of graft; they are thoroughly aroused. The granting of this gas franchise was the final straw. And when this fight comes on in real earnest we have an abundance of material to keep this righteous indignation, which is such a hopeful sign, alive."

"How do you think this break with the political organization will affect your own political future?"

"Well, I hardly know how to answer that question. However, I am willing to sacrifice any political ambitions I may entertain in order that the interest of the people who elected me may be subserved. My critics perhaps may have come to realize by this time that there is some backbone in 'sinful Weaver' after'all."

When asked what he thought of the freely offered opinion of Dr. Parkhurst that Philadelphia was the most "rotten" city in the world, Mayor Weaver said with some show of anger:

"The reverend gentleman spoke hastily. We'll wait and see who will win out in this fight. It should be a good test."

At this point Mayor Weaver produced a telegram received from the Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott. It read as follows:

"Congratulations on your grand fight in the interests of good government. It is what the American people need."

The Mayor of Philadelphia and ex-Judge Gordon left on the 7:55 train. Mr. Graham did not accompany them, and it was understood that he would remain in this city with Mr. Root until both leave for Philadelphia in time for Monday's fight.

NO CITY GOVERNMENT NOW.

Court's Order Disorganizes It, Says Mayor's Counsel.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 24.—"These writs tie up the whole City Government until they are disposed of. Philadelphia is practically without government at the present time," was the synopsis of the situation given by ex-Judge Gordon of Mayor Weaver's counsel to-night.

As a result of Mayor Weaver's challenge to the ring in his removal of Directors Smyth and Costello, the city is without official heads for its main departments, Public Safety and Public Works, and its official business may at any moment be paralyzed owing to the intervention of the courts.

Mayor Weaver is threatened with impeachment and removal in order that the gas lease may be put through.

The term "Director of Public Safety" does not convey its full meaning to a New Yorker. He is, in Philadelphia, the head of most of the great departments which in New York are commanded by single heads, responsible only to the Mayor. It includes the Police and Fire Departments and many others. Similarly the Department of Public Works includes a great many other bureaus. The two departments reach into almost every form of life with which a City Government ordinarily comes in contact.

As soon as Smyth and Costello had been removed from these offices they got a temporary injunction from Judge Ralston preventing their successors, Col. Potter and Mr. Acker, from discharging the duties of the offices.

The courts refuse to recognize Mayor Weaver's reform appointees. Mayor Weaver refuses to let the two dismissed ring officers perform the duties of the offices.

Controller John M. Walton to-day refused to sign any warrants, on the ground that no one except the head of departments was able to certify them, and no one had been legally made head of a department. Not a cent of money can be paid out until one brace of appointees or the other is recognized as the regularly appointed pair.

Aside from this nothing serious has yet happened, because the various minor officers give orders to their subordinates and are obeyed. The moment either the removed officers or their successors attempt to give an order the whole municipal system will be tangled up. Col. Potter and Mr. Acker dare not issue a command, and Smyth and Costello are not more courageous.

The Mayor to-day applied to the Supreme Court for a writ of supersedeas directed to Judge Ralston. This will come up before one of the Justices of that court to-morrow. Should the writ be granted it will take the matter out of the hands of Judge Ralston's Common Pleas Court, and lodge it with the Supreme Court.

Meanwhile the Mayor has directed that matters pertaining to the Department of Public Safety be brought to his attention, thereby undertaking to counteract the dangers existing in the present tied-up condition of things.

The organization leaders to-night are at work on ways and means of impeaching Mayor Weaver. Long before his break with the ring it foresaw such a danger, and it caused the Legislature to pass what is called a "Ripper" bill, which deprived the Mayor of his control over the department heads. The object was to fix matters so that even if the people of Philadelphia rose up against the ring and elected a reform Mayor, his hands would be tied.

But this Ripper bill does not go into effect until 1907. Weaver's term will not end until April, 1907. The dismayed ring foresees that not only can he smash the gas grab in that time, but that by withdrawing the police from the control of the organization he can insure an honest election in Philadelphia, something it has not known for many years, and with an honest election the downfall of the ring would be propable.

The desperation of the ring is such that a plan is under consideration to reconvene the Legislature in extraordinary session and make the Ripper bill operative immediately. The fear that Gov. Pennypacker might be disinclined to go to such lengths in his devotion to the ring, and the further fear that the taxpayers might revolt at the expense, makes this an unattractive project, and the ring prefers to try the impeachment of the insurgent Mayor.

He is to be charged, if impeached, with having appointed a man named Blair to the police force on the recommendation of the ring, well knowing of his actions in the Salter case.

Salter was indicted as a ballot-box stuffer, and fled to Mexico, where he remained until he could be assured that he could safely come back. He returned and was tried by a carefully selected jury and acquitted. It was openly, repeatedly, and offensively charged at the time that the jury was "fixed." Nobody concerned denied it or protested.

One of the witnesses was a man named Blair. District Attorney Weaver put him on the stand to testify against Salter. Instead he testified in his favor. Blair was arrested and indicted for perjury. Before Weaver left the District Attorneyship the indictment was quashed.

English, the Public Safety Director under the Ashbridge administration, appointed by Mayor Weaver, and who was removed by Mayor Weaver, came into office, he certified this appointment to the Councils, who confirmed it. This transaction is the basis of the plan to impeach Weaver.

The impeachment of Weaver on such a charge would, of course, show up the ring when testimony is taken. That might tend to make a machine like Tammany or the Chicago machine pause. In Philadelphia the ring has such a grip as was never known even in Denver and was never known anywhere save when Baltimore was at its worst. Exposure does not bother the ringleaders for a moment.

Whether the scheme will be carried through has not been decided. Durham is still debating it.

Mayor Weaver, who made a quick trip to New York to-day to confer with Elihu Root, will enter upon the great battle in the courts to-morrow. If the Supreme Court decides to grant his writ of supersedeas the matter will be taken out of the hands of Judge Ralston; if not, it will come up before that Judge on Monday, when argument is to be heard on the motion to make permanent his injunction against Potter and Acker, the reform Directors.

A question which could not arise in New York, though there was a time when it could, is being asked here to-night: "Can the courts be trusted to do justice?"

In this city, where the ring has such a grip as Tweed never knew, where even civic uprisings have counted for nothing, and where every department of the City Government is openly in the hands of Durham, people are asking: "Have the courts escaped?"

This is a question soon to be answered. Judge Ralston, who granted the injunction, is a Judge of Court No. 5 of the Common Pleas. It is a new court, created in 1901.

Judge Ralston was an Assistant United States District Attorney in Harrison's time. Then Gov. Stone appointed him to the bench. Subsequently he was elected to the Judgeship and his title confirmed by such a popular election as Philadelphia is accustomed to.

There are two other Judges of Court No. 5, but the case will not necessarily come before them. It is not necessary that Judge Ralston should call them in. Judge Davis was elected on the reform ticket in 1901.

Evidently Mayor Weaver hopes to fare better with the Supreme Court. A bill passed last year increased the salaries of the Judges, and the Supreme Court Justices got $2,000 more, an increase of almost 20 per cent. There are seven Justices of the Supreme Court. Most famous is John P. Elkin.

Once he was the slated candidate for Governor. Popular outcry was raised against him. He was not taken off the slate until certain strong railroad interests came out against him on the ground that he represented rival interests. Then Mr. Quay nominated Judge Pennypacker.

Chief Justice Mitchell is from Philadelphia, as is Justice Fell. Both were local Philadelphia Judges before their elevation.

Justice Brown of Lancaster is the Judge of whom Quay said in an open letter that he had been "catapulted into the Supreme Court." This denunciation by Quay implied that he had not been as pliant as the ring expected. Quay's attack was called out by the fact that Justice Brown opposed Gov. Pennypacker's ambition to return to the bench.

Justice Potter of Allegheny is known as "Telephone Potter." This is because of the story, never denied, that he called up Gov. Stone on the long-distance telephone and informed him of how the court was going to stand on the Pittsburg Ripper case. It stood 4 to 3, and the Ripper bill barely squeezed through.

The bill was the first of the famous rippers, and it was being tested before the Supreme Court. Gov. Stone, it was reported, replied: "My God, I'm glad of that," and this expression was long a watchword in State politics.

Justice Metrezat is a Democrat but not a ring Democrat. Justice Dean is an anti-organization man, but he is sick in bed and cannot take any part in the case. He is a friend of ex-Judge Gordon.

This account of the Justices does not, of course, indicate the way they will decide on the case. They are unmistakably on trial, and Philadelphia is eagerly watching to see how this test of her judiciary will turn out.

Among the plans which the ring has under consideration is a ripper bill of a character surpassing all previous ones, to "rip" Mayor Weaver out of office. Should the Legislature be convened in extra session such a thing might be the outcome, provided Gov. Pennypacker could be relied on to sign it. The plan, however, is a last-resort proposition, and would not be used unless everything else had failed.

The city is more deeply stirred than it has ever been in any of the abortive fights made against the ring in past years. An immense crowd is expected to assemble on the City Hall Plaza while Councils are voting on the question of passing the gas lease over the Mayor's veto a week from to-morrow.

Fifty thousand postal cards were sent out to-day to voters in all sections of the city urging them to assemble on the plaza. To-morrow evening a monster mass meeting will be held in the Academy of Music, under the auspices of the Committee of Nine.

A parade of business and professional men had been planned for Saturday, but will probably be postponed until next week. The leading citizens of the town are to march through the principal streets.

Throughout the city ward meetings will be held every evening this week and next for the purpose of influencing Councilmen to vote with the Mayor.

In Germantown the neighbors of Randal Morgan, Vice President of the United Gas Improvement Company, have formed an organization to get him to use his influence to drop the gas grab. A committee of his neighbors to-day sent him the following letter:

"You have been an honored citizen in this ward for many years. One who has been looked up to and respected. It therefore comes to us with the deepest pain and regret that you should have been instrumental, as one of the most influential officers in the United Gas Improvement Company, in proposing to lease a manifestly unfair to the city and in countenancing the methods by which it has been jammed through Councils.

"We had hoped that you would have been, that you would have looked at the city's interest as well as your own, and further, that you would have not permitted a bargain, which bears every evidence of corruption, to be made with the city's bosses for the passage of the measure.

"No one who promoted in any way this rotten job can ever expect to retain the confidence, the good-will, and friendship of his neighbors and fellow-citizens. We beg you to pause before it is too late, and we most earnestly urge you to use your great influence with Thomas Dolan and your associates to give the city a "square deal."

"CHARLES F. JENKINS, Secretary."

DEMOCRATS ON GAS FIGHT.

Time for All Good Citizens to Unite, Says Convention.

HARRISBURG, Penn., May 24.—William H. Berry of Delaware County was nominated for State Treasurer and John B. Head of Westmoreland County for Superior Court Judge at to-day's Democratic State Convention. Head's nomination is equivalent to an election because of the minority representation.

The platform makes the following reference to the Philadelphia situation:

"The appalling condition of public affairs in that city has long been a matter of wonder to the entire country, and Philadelphia is spoken of with contempt and scorn wherever municipal government is discussed. The people of our State have been amazed at the apparent subserviency of that city to a corrupt machine. Public sentiment seemed paralyzed and civic pride dead.

"Now, as the crowning outrages are about to be heaped upon her and she finds herself bereft of her franchises and property, she cries for help.

"There is no hope for Philadelphia except in the union of good citizens with the Democratic organization to overthrow her machine government."

PRAISE FOR WEAVER.

New York Republicans Tell Him He Ranks with Roosevelt.

By a unanimous vote of the Thirty-first Assembly District Republican Club last night this telegram was sent to Mayor Weaver of Philadelphia:

"Your stand against corruption thrills all decent Republicans. This club bids you godspeed in your course, and adds that such acts as yours rank you with Roosevelt, La Follette, and Folk as a public benefactor."

The North Side Board of Trade at its meeting last night also passed a resolution commending Mayor Weaver's stand.

TRUST STOCKHOLDERS TO PROTECT HOLDINGS

Owners of Shares in Merchants' Will Prevent Sacrifice.

ALLEGE ATTEMPT TO WRECK

Vice President of Closed Concern Says Hostile Interests Wish to Seize Its Properties.

Steps were taken at a meeting of stockholders of the Merchants' Trust Company of 346 Broadway at the Hotel Savoy last night to organize a stockholders' protective committee to prevent the receivers from disposing of its holdings of the Hudson Valley Railroad securities and those of the Rutland Companies at too great a sacrifice. It was the inability of the company to realize on bonds of these companies, held as collateral for large loans, that brought about its suspension on Tuesday.

Last night's meeting followed all-day conferences of some of the Directors who had been interested in the developmental projects that brought the Merchants' Trust to grief. Late in the afternoon a call to the stockholders was sent out by Thomas L. Feitner, Vice President of the company, and fourteen were present when the meeting was called to order at the Savoy. Its direct result was a call for a meeting of the stockholders a week from to-day, at which, it is expected, the protective committee will be formally launched. After the adjournment last night Mr. Feitner said:

"In sending out the call I was acting for myself and a few of my friends who want to protect the company against loss incident to an immediate disposition of the Hudson Valley and Rutland securities. I do not see any possibility of stockholders coming forward to take control of the company before the receivership is made permanent, and therefore it is necessary that steps should be taken to protect their interests against the fulfillment of the scheme that was responsible for the suspension.

"As a matter of fact, the whole thing was brought about by certain powerful interests who wanted to wreck the company and grab the Hudson Valley Railroad and the other properties in which the Merchants' Trust was interested. The Hudson Valley properties were in the hands of a syndicate of five, three of whose members were named by the Merchants' Trust, but in spite of this the trust company had only three out of the eleven Directors of the Hudson Valley, and the eight in the majority were acting on behalf of the interests inimical to the trust company, so that the latter was in the position of a creditor that a debtor held by the throat.

"We will ask the receiver to seek further representation for the trust company at the annual meeting of the Hudson Valley in July and to protect us otherwise. As a matter of fact, the Delaware and Hudson Railroad and the United Traction Company of Troy both want the property at the present time, and it should not be allowed to go at a sacrifice."

With the temporary receivers, Douglas Robinson and the New York Security Company, in charge of the affairs of the Merchant's Trust Company, interest in the failure centred yesterday in the question how much, if anything, could be recovered from the former officers and those Directors who were responsible for the loans that wrecked the institution.

Attention was called by one of the attorneys in the case to Section 75 of the State Banking law which prohibits any corporation or its Directors from lending more than one-fifth of its capital and surplus to any one person or corporation. This, it was said, might furnish a possible basis for criminal action in addition to such individual liability suits as might be started under the statutes of this State punishing negligence.

The capital and surplus of the Merchants' Trust at the period covered by the loans to the Hudson Valley Railway Company and the various Rutland companies, which were the loans that caused the suspension, in the end, amounted to about $2,500,000, on which basis $500,000 would have been the legal limit of any single loan. The loan to the Hudson Valley Company was originally $846,861, subsequently being reduced by $100,000 and that to the Rutland companies $638,000. In addition there were then investments of $504,625 in the Hudson Valley Company and of $200,000 in the Rutland concerns.

These loans began in 1901 and continued until July of 1902, six months before Edwin Langdon gave up the Presidency of the company. On his Executive Committee were Seth Munn, the Gould family physician; G. E. Fisher, C. E. Clarke, and Frank C. Travers, now dead. The only present Directors of the company who were members of that board are Messrs. Langdon, Munn, Clarke, James E. Reynolds, and Henry Sampson. Edwin Hawley, who got out of the company last January, was also a Director at the time, as was Frank J. Gould.

Some difference of opinion was expressed on the question of liability, whether civil or criminal. Edward Lauterbach, counsel for the receivers, was of the belief that the old Directors could be compelled to make restitution under the civil statutes at least, adding that "the relations of a Director to a trust company become repugnant in the eyes of the law when he lends the money of the trust company to other companies in which he is a Director without sufficient collateral." Mr. Lauterbach also believed that some of those stockholders who had recently transferred their shares could be reached on an assessment of the stock, if it could be shown that the apparent holders of the stock were merely dummies.

When Assistant Bank Examiner Judson was asked about the liability proposition he said that he did not think Section 25 of the banking law would apply in the case of the Merchants' Trust because he held the section not to apply to loans in which the collateral was 15 per cent. greater than the loan. Of the criticisms that have been passed on State Banking Superintendent Kilburn because he did not close up the company when he first learned of the loans to the Hudson Valley, Rutland, and Virginia Passenger and Power concerns two years ago, Mr. Judson said:

"By waiting until the present time the Bank Examiner served the interests of the depositors. If the trust company had been thrown into the hands of a receiver two years ago, the depositors would not have realized 30 cents on a dollar. The securities would have been slaughtered, as securities always are which are thrown on the market. Now I think things are in such shape that the depositors will get 100 cents. That is what the delay did."

Otto T. Bannard, President of the New York Trust Company, took charge of the main office of the Merchants' Trust yesterday, and William V. King, a Vice President of the New York Trust, was in charge at the Fifty-ninth Street branch. The Riverside Bank at Fifty-seventh Street and Eighth Avenue, offered to lend depositors in the Merchants' Trust 50 per cent. on their deposits.

President Receives Brazil's Envoy.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—President Roosevelt to-day formally received the Ambassador from Brazil, Juan Nabuco, with all the ceremony due to his rank. The reception took place in the Blue Room of the White House. The exchanges between the President and Señor Nabuco were cordial and felicitous.

SOZODONT

LIQUID, POWDER OR PASTE

Would Handle Pennsylvania's Iron and Steel Business, Too.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 24.—The construction of an independent freight line from the coal and iron districts near Pittsburg to New York by way of Atglen and the Trenton cut-off is under consideration by Pennsylvania Railroad officers. The plan involves the construction of 443 miles of double track road.

It is proposed to make the low-grade freight line, now under construction between Marysville and Atglen, a distance of eighty miles, a part of the new line which eventually will be extended into this city. The cost of the project will amount to several million dollars, and work probably will begin before the terminal improvements are completed. An electric service for suburban passenger business in this city is a part of the plan.

The announcement was made to-day by an officer of the Pensylvania Railroad who is making a thorough investigation of the cost of both propositions and preliminary reports have been submitted to President Cassatt.

The railroad company's official said to-day: "About 53 per cent. of the tonnage handled by the Pennsylvania is composed of coal and iron and their products. Consequently their classification is the same and the trains transporting them are of the same class. It is, therefore, much easier to operate these trains over two tracks than to mix them up with trains of different classes on four or six tracks. As a consequence, the cost per mile of operation is cheaper, and that is the great question in successful railroad operations.

"With a separate freight system there would be a faster service and fewer accidents. The main line could then be used for through and local passenger service and for fast freight service.

"It is probable that we shall have tunnels here and in Washington, and the electric service will be extended to include the road between New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Washington. When Broad Street Station is enlarged it will be feasible to equip four or more tracks for electric service, and by that time many improvements for the handling of an electric service over a steam road will no doubt be perfected and ready for adoption. Every electrical, mechanical, and civil engineer, together with all operating experts are busily engaged with working out the details, and they will be equal to any emergency."

WORRIED ABOUT DR. HARPER.

Complete Cure Not Thought Possible —Physicians Make Examination.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 24.—President Harper's condition, it was learned to-day, is not as hopeful as his friends might wish. This is evidenced by the fact that his physicians made a thorough examination of the university President last week, and while it is said they found improvement, it is admitted that Dr. Harper is taking the treatment for cancer chiefly in order to prolong his life. The report that the patient has experienced a relapse was partially denied by Prof. A. W. Small, who said:

"Last week Dr. Bevan and Dr. Billings made an examination of Dr. Harper, and at that time they thought his condition was improved. While no one dares hope that a complete cure is possible, we are satisfied that treatment will modify the disease and prolong life."

It is generally believed, however, that Mr. Harper's condition has again reached a critical stage, and that no definite hope is held out for his recovery.

RAPS CHICAGO UNIVERSITY.

Rev. A. C. Dixon Says Rockefeller Wants Change in Bible Teachings.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, May 24.—The Rev. A. C. Dixon, pastor of the Ruggles Street Baptist Church, has published a sharp attack upon Chicago University, following a denial by President Harper of that institution of the truth of a recent statement by Dr. Dixon that when Mr. Rockefeller learned that a prominent representative of Chicago University was "tearing the Bible to pieces" in a course of lectures, he ordered the lecturer to cancel his engagements and go to Europe for the purpose of purchasing a library.

Dr. Dixon mentioned no name, but now that his statement is denied he declares that President Harper was the man to whom he referred. He publishes the text of a letter which he has written to Prof. Matthews, in which he says of Dr. Harper:

"I must confess that I have wished more than once that he would devote himself to education and let the Bible alone. If he lives much longer he will have the same wish, for without doubt the scholarship of the world is now repudiating his destructive criticism views.

"Do you believe that all men are dishonest?" asked Higgins.

"No, Sir," replied Mr. De Ford. "I do not. But I am strongly inclined to the opinion that some of them are, and I find ample warrant for that belief in the records of the Legislature."

Charles F. Matthewson of the Consolidated Gas Company, speaking on the bill reducing the price of gas to the city to 75 cents, said:

"A 10 per cent gas our profits on our investment of $48,056,000 would be only $1,300,000. That would be virtual confiscation.

"The trouble about the findings of the Stevens Committee is that the committee tried to do in four days what it took the Boston Commission four months to do. The result is that its conclusions do not gibe with the facts."

Senator Stevens, Chairman of the Gas Investigating Committee, had a long talk with Gov. Higgins to-day, in which he urged the Governor to recommend that the Eighty-Cent Gas bill be reconsidered at the special session.

CARE AS TO TAINTED GIFTS.

Congregationalists Finally Adopt Mild Resolutions.

PEACEDALE, R. I., May 24.—Following a debate yesterday on John D. Rockefeller's gift of $100,000 to the American Board of Foreign Missions the Congregational Conference considered and adopted a resolution bearing on the subject to-day. The resolution was presented as a compromise, and is milder in expression than the two presented yesterday.

The resolution says: "We recommend to our churches and benevolent societies to consider carefully and in godly conscience the receipt of all charitable gifts as it shall affect the efficiency of our church."

Several delegates declined to vote on the resolution.

FENCES MAR TWO VIEWS.

De Pasquales and Kilsheimers Affected—Judge Helps.

Salvator de Pasquale, a contractor, has a nice little stone villa in Two Hundred and Twenty-second Street, near White Plains Road, in William's Bridge. There are five children in the contractor's family. To the east of his house is that of Edward Kilsheimer, a lawyer. To the east of the lawyer's house is that of ex-Judge Edward Kidder.

The other day a carpenter put a five-foot board fence up between the Kilsheimer and De Pasquale houses. Mrs. Kilsheimer, who employed him, says she was away at the time, and that it was put up only because the Italian family had objected to the hedge that had been between the lots. The contractor's lot is three feet lower than the lawyer's, so that the five-foot fence is eight feet high, in effect, on the De Pasquale side.

After the Kilsheimer fence was up Mr. De Pasquale went to his friend Judge Kidder and got the Judge to put up a fourteen-foot board fence on the other side of the Kilsheimer house.

The situation now is this: Mr. De Pasquale's view is nearly confined to a glimpse of Woodlawn Cemetery's graves and tombs. But if Mr. De Pasquale's view is limited, Mr. Kilsheimer's is more so.

Mr. Kilsheimer was formerly counsel for Mr. De Pasquale.

Representative of Companies Says They Are Blackmailed.

DENOUNCE COMMISSION BILL

W. A. De Ford Asks How Long It Will Take a Gas Concern to Control Three Men.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 24.—What was said before Gov. Higgins at the hearing which he gave to-day on the bill to establish a State Commission of Gas and Electricity and the bill reducing the price of gas to the City Government of New York to 75 cents per thousand cubic feet, was not half so interesting as what was suggested and insinuated. Two of those who appeared to argue on the State Commission bill, one in favor of the measure and the other against it, made statements which ought to furnish a fair lead for an enterprising District Attorney anxious to start an investigation of bribery in connection with gas legislation and the conduct of the gas business.

George Lewis, President of the village of Potsdam, appeared against the State Commission bill. He said that Potsdam was about to operate a municipal lighting plant, adding:

"We are informed that if this bill becomes a law we will be prevented from selling light to the consumers of our village without the consent of the State Commission. Why should we be afraid that we will not get the consent of the State Commission, you inquire? Because the men who are opposed to our getting that consent are the men who are interested in the Potsdam Electric Light and Power Company, and they are the very men who had this clause requiring the consent of the State Commission inserted in this bill."

John F. Wilkie, representing the Empire Gas Association, which is made up of companies from all over the State, and particularly representing the gas companies of Poughkeepsie and Newburg, spoke in favor of the bill. He had the distinction of being the only man to say a word in its favor.

Mr. Wilkie said he thought it would be a good thing for the gas companies of the State if they had a State Commission to which they could appeal; it would serve to protect them from a lot of blackmail to which they were at present subjected by the officials of the localities in which they operated. He told of one specific instance of blackmail which, he said, he personally knew about. He asserted that one of his companies—he did not specify which it was—had been told it could not get certain privileges which it sought unless it agreed to name as its counsel at a high salary a certain lawyer whom the local bosses wanted to have favored.

"It would have been money in our pocket if we had paid a certain amount of bribe money," said Mr. Wilkie, "but we haven't done so, at least not yet. When a company refuses to do what the officials of a city or town demand in the way of blackmail it is made to suffer. Such instances are not uncommon. I think a State Commission would enable the companies to resist such extortion."

Julius Henry Cohen, representing the New York City Citizens' Union, attacked the State Commission bill. He said it was undemocratic and against the principle of home rule.

"When you come to deal with the gas situation in New York," said Mr. Cohen, "you are dealing with a very sick patient, but this remedy which you offer is worse than the disease. The administration which has power over the gas and electric lighting companies of New York City must be such an administration as the people can rebuke if they are dissatisfied with it. This bill provides that the City of New York may not operate a municipal lighting plant without the consent of the State Commission. Why shouldn't the city have the right to operate its own lighting plant? The power which the city has now to build and operate lighting plants if it sees fit is the club by which to hold over the gas and electric lighting companies to make them do right by the municipality and its citizens."

Thomas Gilleran, representing the Municipal Ownership League of New York, suggested that at the special session of the Legislature the Stevens Committee be empowered to investigate the means employed to bring about the defeat of the lighting and gas bills.

W. A. De Ford, also representing the Municipal Ownership League, put this conundrum to Gov. Higgins:

"If it takes a gas company but four days to control twenty Senators, how long would it take the company to control a State Commission of three?"

"Do you believe that all men are dishonest?" asked Higgins.

"No, Sir," replied Mr. De Ford. "I do not. But I am strongly inclined to the opinion that some of them are, and I find ample warrant for that belief in the records of the Legislature."

Charles F. Matthewson of the Consolidated Gas Company, speaking on the bill reducing the price of gas to the city to 75 cents, said:

"A 10 per cent gas our profits on our investment of $48,056,000 would be only $1,300,000. That would be virtual confiscation.

"The trouble about the findings of the Stevens Committee is that the committee tried to do in four days what it took the Boston Commission four months to do. The result is that its conclusions do not gibe with the facts."

Senator Stevens, Chairman of the Gas Investigating Committee, had a long talk with Gov. Higgins to-day, in which he urged the Governor to recommend that the Eighty-Cent Gas bill be reconsidered at the special session.

LEFT BABY IN A SALOON.

It Made Up to Pinochle Player and Mother Asked Him to Hold It.

The crowd at the Builders' Exchange, a saloon at 308 Broome Street, had lots of fun last night at the expense of Louis Sussman, a young bachelor who lives in a furnished room upstairs. Over and over again the story was repeated of how Sussman had suddenly found himself in possession of a real live baby, which clung to his neck until the police interfered and sent it to Bellevue Hospital.

Sussman is a tailor employed on the east side. Tuesday is his day off, and as it was too cold to go to Coney Island he amused himself in the afternoon by playing pinochle in the rear of the saloon. About 4 o'clock a well-dressed young woman entered the place and took a seat near the table where Sussman was seated. She carried a pretty baby about a year and a half old. The baby tugged at Sussman's coat sleeve while the woman sipped a glass of beer. The tailor was about to meld a hundred aces when the baby grabbed hold of his hair.

"That baby is lucky to me," said Sussman. "I meld a hundred aces."

"Well I'm glad the baby brings luck to somebody," remarked the woman.

"Sixty kings," said Sussman, and then he reached over and patted the baby on the cheek.

Again the baby tugged at his hair.

"One hundred and fifty trumps—that puts me out," said Sussman.

"Dot baby brings you too much good luck," chimed in Rosenstein, the bartender. "Vhen a baby vould bring me luck like dot I vould treat."

Sussman treated and then he held the child on his knee.

"Would you mind if I left the baby in your care for a few minutes?" asked the woman. "I want to go over to Grand Street and do some shopping."

Before Sussman had time to reply the woman had gone out the side door. At 6 o'clock she had not returned. Then the crowd chipped in and bought a bottle and some milk. At midnight the baby fell asleep, and Sussman took it up to his room and put it to bed. Early yesterday morning he carried the baby down stairs again, and the news that there was a baby in a saloon spread to the Eldridge Street Police Station. A policeman investigated, and Sussman was escorted to the station, carrying the baby. Sergt. Bauer sent it to Bellevue, and sent out a general alarm for the mother.

Chinese Woman Doctor Cordially Received by President.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Dr. Li Bi-Cu, a Chinese woman, called on the President to-day to pay her respects to him before her departure for her native country to engage in hospital and missionary work.

She was graduated from the Woman's Medical College of Philadelphia. She was reared by missionaries in China, and married a Christian Chinese. Nearly all her life has been spent in the cause of Christianity.

The President received her cordially.

ACCUSED OF BRIBE-TAKING.

Policeman Arrested with Two Alleged Accomplices and Locked Up.

Policeman John J. Campbell of the Mercer Street Station was arrested yesterday afternoon on a charge of attempting to extort $25 from Theophile Frezerrs of 458 Richmond Terrace, St. George, S. I., to "square" a case before the Grand Jury. Frezerrs had been arrested and held for the Grand Jury on a charge of robbing Madge De Vere of 42 West One Hundred and Sixteenth Street of $10 while they were in a room at 30 West Thirteenth Street, the place where May Wilson was killed.

While waiting for the Grand Jury yesterday, he told District Attorney Jerome that Campbell had offered to square the case for him. Detective Reardon was sent to watch Frezerrs place $25, according to agreement, on one of two chairs in a vacant room of the National Building, at Broadway and Twelfth Street. After Frezerrs left the room, Campbell entered.

As he went out the policeman was arrested, together with Robert Burridge and William Hill, the engineer and elevator man of the building, who were charged with complicity. All three were taken to Police Headquarters and searched, but the $25 was not found. They were locked up.

Acting Captain Bourke of the Mercer Street Station said Campbell had an excellent record as a capturer of burglars. He was appointed to the force on Jan. 26, 1902.

ELY IS EXCHANGE SECRETARY.

Had the Place Nearly 20 Years—Older Members Well Satisfied.

At the meeting of the Governing Committee of the New York Stock Exchange yesterday afternoon George W. Ely was appointed Secretary of the Exchange. Mr. Ely was Secretary of the Exchange for nearly twenty years, up to 1899, when he resigned. In 1901 he sold his seat on the Exchange, and since then has been identified with banking institutions.

Mr. Ely, while he was Secretary, was very popular, and his appointment was received with much satisfaction among the older members, although the younger clique was disappointed because the place did not go to C. L. Burnham, the present Assistant Secretary.

At the same meeting yesterday the Governors denied an application to close the Exchange on Monday next, which will fall between Sunday and Decoration Day.

The Governing Committee also considered the question of taking action on the transfer tax, but it reached no conclusion.

CLUE TO BROKER'S SUICIDE.

A possible cause for the suicide of the Mexican mining broker Manuel Fernandez del Valle, Jr., who shot himself in his office at 32 Broadway on Tuesday, is suggested in fragments of a letter found on the floor of the office by Coroner Scholer. Pieced together they read:

Dearest Emanuel: Happy in flat in New York. Do not think how much I was in love with you. I can wait no longer.

Del Valle's home, as indicated by his papers, was in Guadalajara, Mexico.

A letter left by Del Valle was addressed to the Sheriff of New York County, and contained a fifty-dollar Treasury note, with these instructions for its use:

As I am just going to dispose of my life I most respectfully request the authorities not to make any inquiries on that account. I beg to inclose this banknote for expenses for my funeral.

MANUEL FERNANDEZ DEL VALLE, Jr.

The money was sent by the Sheriff to the Public Administrator, who will use it for the purpose desired by the suicide.

CANTON BANK CLOSED.

Heavy Loans to Institution's Vice President the Reputed Cause.

CANTON, Ohio, May 24.—The Canton State Bank, with individual deposits of more than $600,000, closed its doors to-day. The Directors state that the bank will not be able to resume business.

The failure is said to have been brought about by heavy loans to W. L. Davis, Vice President of the bank, by the cashier, Corwin B. Bachtell, without the consent of the other Directors of the bank.

According to a statement made by counsel for the Directors more than $400,000 has been given to Davis for which no adequate security has been furnished to the bank. Davis has deeded to the bank property valued at $200,000. The City of Canton has $76,000 on deposit in the bank. The Canton Young Men's Christian Association and many school teachers were also depositors in the bank.

DUNNE ISSUES A CALL FOR POLICE VOLUNTEERS

Chicago Mayor's Last Resort Before Asking for Troops.

STRIKE STILL SPREADING

More Lumber Teamsters Join the Strikers—Sheriff Swears In Large Force of Deputies.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 24.—The chance for peace in the strike situation seems as remote to-night as it has at any time since the trouble began. As a last resort before calling out troops, Mayor Dunne has asked for 100 special volunteer policemen to protect the non-union drivers. It is not likely that 100 men will offer themselves for this duty. The unemployed would rather remain idle than to risk their skulls in street fights. The Mayor also proposes test trips of the unprotected non-union wagons.

It is quite as remote a possibility that these will be undertaken. If he cannot get police help Mayor Dunne will call on the Governor for the militia. This may be done any day, or in fact any hour, as the Mayor is tired of the fight and would be glad to see some other power coping with it. All militia officers are instructed to be in readiness to put their commands under arms. This can be done in two hours after the order is issued.

Three hundred more lumber and wood trade drivers struck to-night, making 1,200 idle lumber drivers in all.

Final rejection of the union teamsters' demands was officially announced to-day by the employers, thus annulling any present settlement of the strike. The employers demand unconditional surrender.

The strike in the lumber yards is spreading and nearly all lumber business is at a standstill. A few lumber yards are still in operation, but their volume of business is small. A number of planing mills and sash and door factories were compelled to shorten operations to-day and by Friday will be compelled to close entirely for want of lumber.

If Mayor Dunne succeeds in getting extra policemen they will be sworn in as rapidly as applications are filled by suitable men,

ESTABLISHED 1879. 6TH AVE.—19TH TO 20TH ST.

Butterick Patterns for June are ready with a wealth of new ideas—remember only 10c., 15c., and 20c. now.

NEW YORK, THURSDAY, MAY 25, 1905.

Our 8th floor restaurant has the conveniences, music, and service of those where prices are very much higher.

MAY 1905

Annual sale of men's straw hats, $1.50—manufacturer's sample line—values up to $4.

EVERYBODY remembers the sensation our annual straw hat sale created last year, when the price was $2. This year we made a still greater purchase, and the price is $1.50. The hats are better, the varieties greater and we've twice as many. Second Floor.

$1.50 A thousand hats in the lot are a style and quality you can't buy to-day for less than $4 at the exclusive store, and it's impossible for you to select a hat worth less than $2.50. There's none in the lot. Hundreds of $3.50 values included. $1.50

Come at noon.

Extra salesmen will be in attendance during the noon hour rush. Don't fail to come. In five minutes you can find just the hat you want, and be on your way to business again. This sale is for busy men and we've 5,000 hats.

All new styles.

There's a shape that's correct to harmonize with the features of every man. No man should miss this sale. Time is ripe for straw hats. Everybody wears one on Decoration Day; to-day sees New York's greatest sale.

M. S. Mork & Co., 11 Washington place, creators of the celebrated Kismah Hats, and famed as the originators of correct styles in men's straw hats, sold to Simpson Crawford Co. their entire line of road and house samples—some 5,000 hats, at an average of one-third their value. That's why this sale is unparalleled. No other New York house has been able to make a purchase of such magnitude and at such a low price.

These hats are new, clean and perfect—had to be—or the celebrated manufacturers wouldn't have been able to take orders on them. Styles are radically different this year, and these are all new 1905 blocks.

Soft rolling brim for the conservative man. They come in all straws, including Milan, Mackinaw, Split Manila, Java and Porto Rico.

The flat brim or yachting style for the young and middle-aged man. This year the brims are somewhat narrower, but we have them also in medium and even wide brims for those that want them. Some trimmed with extra wide bands.

Also the breezy mashe—Negligee and Telescope styles in plain and fancy bands for the college boys and youths who like smart styles.

More Rochester suits at 11.50. Suitable for Decoration Day.

THAT last Saturday sale was a record breaker, and as soon as this lot of $18 and $20 suits came in yesterday we made up our minds to place them on sale to-day for the benefit of men who want good dressy suits to wear over Decoration Day. They're finely tailored and fit as if made to measure. Second Floor.

$11.50 Our sales are tremendous, and the great Rochester manufacturers naturally depend upon this house to enhance their reputation and increase the demand for their product by selling at about half price their entire sample lines and surplus stocks. The concessions they make enable us to sell $18 and $20 suits at $11.50. And that's the plain fact without the fancies.

Four mammoth groups of swagger suits are included in this Thursday offering. They're of the weight, the style, the fabric that men want now. You'd order the same kind of a suit if you were to go to a tailor and pay $25 or $30. This sale cannot be judged by any in the past. The variety is overwhelmingly complete—every kind of a suit that's needed is here at $11.50.

Blue serge suits—$11.50.

$18 and $20 values—cool and dressy for Summer wear—the word "swagger" was never better applied than to these suits selling elsewhere at $18 and $20.

Fancy worsted suits—$11.50.

$18 and $20 values—suits that express the sound business sense of the men who wear them—single or double breasted—others are asking $20.

Fancy cheviot suits—$11.50.

$18 and $20 values—light and summery—patterns are the swellest any house has ever shown—double and single breasted—sale will make them the talk of the town.

Black thibet suits—$11.50.

$18 and $20 values—by all means include a black suit among your Summer wardrobe—it's inexpensive and likely to be needed any time.

$3 and $4 fancy vests at 1.50

There's a fine new lot for to-day When we plan a fancy vest sale we buy enough to last for several days, and get the price down lower than any other New York store is likely to quote for the same quality. That's why this sale continues with such wonderful success.

You ought to see the snappy new patterns—you'll like them better than any you ever saw—you'll see more at $1.50 than a dozen haberdasheries show at $3 and $4—same quality, too.

$1.50 For all that, we have plenty of the plain white and conservative effects. We aim to satisfy the elderly man of quiet tastes, as well as the young man of more elaborate taste. Vests for every man at $1.50—NO OTHER PRICE.

As to sizes—we've all of them from 34 to 46 inclusive—every man may be fitted perfectly. As to the number you should buy—we'll leave that to you when you come and see what extraordinary values they are, but it is not amiss to say that another such collection of manufacturer's samples to sell at half-price and less is not likely to be offered again.

SIMPSON CRAWFORD CO.

Stirring sale Summer underwear for men & women.

19c for women's 35c lisle vests 95c for women's $1.50 union suits $1.25 for men's $2 union suits
$1.00 for three 50c lisle vests 39c for men's 75c underwear $1.50 for $2.50 Kneipp underwear

MARVELOUS values to offer at the beginning of the season—prices lower than you'd pay other stores in August, when they have their clearing sales. Select a supply to-day. You can't afford to wait. You'll not see such values elsewhere. If you see the same or lower prices the quality's different, and vice versa. We know that buying advantages such as we enjoyed are almost unheard of, and you can depend upon them to enable us to offer the best values in New York. Main Floor.

Warm weather's here at last. Now for a great rush to-day in this department, a repetition of the sale a year ago, when all records were broken. Values still better this time. Can you afford to miss a sale with such a saving?

19c for women's 35c. underwear, 500 dozen ribbed lisle and cotton vests; low neck and sleeveless—plain and crocheted necks and lace trimmed.

39c for Sea Island underwear, 4 cases (144 doz.) men's Summer weight, soft finish, Sea Island cotton shirts and drawers; cream color, beautiful silk finish, pearl button, double stitched, gussetted, drawer straps—these are run of the mill goods, not quite up to the standard of perfect quality—75c. grade, that's the reason they are about ½ price.

95c for women's $1.50 union suits. We purchased from the Ypsilanti Underwear Co. 170 dozen of their "Dorothy" quality combination suits at one-third off their regular factory price. Hence we are able to make the above statement. It's the factory's loss—the goods are A1 and dependable. They are pure white and unbleached swiss ribbed cotton and lisle threads; the reason for their being underprice is that the assortments of shapes are broken—these are all Summer weights—all sizes in the lots, but in high neck, long or short sleeves—knee or ankle lengths.

$1.50 for $2.50 Kneipp shirts. We have left from our former big sales of these well-known goods about 425 garments (all shirts) the celebrated Kneipp Linen Mesh trade-mark on each; shirts long or short sleeves.

90c for $1.50 and $2.00 Shirts. Summer weight gauze white merino shirts, full regular made goods—Furley & Buttrum and Lion Brands; also the well-known American brands in long or short sleeves, all sizes, including extra large.

$1.25 for men's $2.00 union suits; 720 men's extra fine quality, imported swiss ribbed, fashioned union suits, Summer weight, and the man who has tried union suits can vouch for the truthfulness of the statement that a good fitting combination suit is the most comfortable Summer garment a man can wear. These come in ecru and white, long or short sleeves.

35c each or 3 for $1.00 for women's imported swiss ribbed lisle vests, low neck and sleeveless—low neck and short sleeves; also colored cotton vests; 2 inch crocheted neck.

SIX OTHERS ARE SPOKEN

Endymion and Hamburg Passed by Grosser Kurfuerst on Friday—Utowana at Last Seen.

The Fleur de Lys leads the Valhalla across the Atlantic by thirty-seven miles. The two were reported at Sagaponack by wireless from the Minnehaha via the steamer Teutonic. The Minnehaha, outward bound, passed them on the night of Monday, May 22, with the Fleur de Lys in the lead. She sighted the little schooner at midnight. The distance from New York, nor the longitude and latitude, are not given, but figuring from the position of the Minnehaha at 10 o'clock on the same night when she met the Valhalla 1,006 miles east of Sandy Hook, Capt. Bohlin's craft was 1,050 miles out at that time.

The Valhalla had moved up from practically last position to probably fifth in the procession. The exact position as reported by the steamer was 53 degrees west longitude and 40 degrees north latitude.

The speed with which the ship must have advanced with westward winds driving her must have been greater than that attained by any of the schooners.

The message from the Minnehaha read:

At 9:40 P. M. on May 22 she sighted the Valhalla in latitude 40 north, longitude 53 west, in a moderate breeze. At midnight she sighted the Fleur de Lys and the Atlantic thirty-seven miles ahead, with the Fleur de Lys leading.

This is evidently a mistake in transmission, as the Atlantic to be in the location mentioned would have traveled only forty-seven miles in thirty-two hours.

The transatlantic liner Armenian, which arrived yesterday from Liverpool, passed the Atlantic on Sunday at 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon over 940 miles out from Sandy Hook.

Capt. Kelk of the White Star steamer said that when they passed her she was seven miles distant and they could not read her signals, but there was no doubt of her identity. The exact point at which she was observed was longitude 54.11 west and latitude 41.03 north, and the time 99½ hours after her start from Sandy Hook. Her average, therefore, continues ahead of the record.

The Hamburg, Endymion, and Ailsa have been sighted and reported by wireless from the Grosser Kurfurst. They were passed on Friday last when less than forty-eight hours out. The Hamburg and Endymion were together in longitude 67 degrees west and latitude 40 degrees north at 9 o'clock on the morning of the 19th. They had made 300 miles by direct line from New York, but had doubtless covered at least 30 miles further on account of their southern tack, beating against the head winds of the first thirty hours. On this account their average is low, about 7 knots an hour.

The Ailsa was seen at 2 o'clock on the morning of the same day. She was then thirty-eight hours out, and had reached longitude 69 degrees 36 minutes west, latitude 40 degrees north, or about 200 miles in the direct line. Her average is very poor for the same reason.

The wireless report received at Sagaponack is as follows:

The steamer Grosser Kurfurst reported, via the steamer Teutonic and the Marconi wireless station at Sagaponack, L. I., that on May 19, at 2 A. M., she passed the yawl Ailsa, one of the contestants in the trans-Atlantic race, in latitude 40 north, longitude 63.36 west. On the same day at 9 A. M. she passed the schooners Hamburg and Endymion in latitude 40 north, 67.30 west.

The Utowana was reported yesterday for the first time, completing the roster of the eleven. The Standard Oil tank steamer La Campine passed her on Sunday at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, 100 hours out, 540 miles due east of New York. This would be latitude 40 degrees 42 minutes north, and longitude 62 degrees 15 minutes west. It would indicate very slow speed, an average of less than 5.5 knots, and would mean she was the last boat in the race.

From Philadelphia comes a confusing report. The British tank steamer Saxoleine, arriving from Cardiff, reports sighting a three-master, believed to be the Atlantic, in latitude 42 degrees 22 minutes north, and longitude 61 degrees 41 minutes west at 2 A. M. on Saturday. This is 82 miles north of any point heretofore reported for her, and 76 miles east of where she was passed by the Cedric twelve hours later. The two facts make it impossible that the vessel reported by the Saxoleine could have been Capt. Barr's boat. Neither could it be the Utowana, the only other boat answering the description, in view of the later report of her whereabouts. The report reads:

May 20—2 A. M.—Latitude 42.22, longitude 61.41, passed a three-masted schooner, supposed to be Atlantic. Same date at 7 A. M., passed an American bark, supposed to be the Apache. Weather fine, wind west, freshly. Both yachts making fast time.

CROSBY, Master.

The computations of the speed that the Atlantic has shown have been so varied that the discussion regarding her has grown quite heated. Calculations have evidently been made on the basis of longitudinal distances without taking into account the latitudinal progress she has made. Then, too, her average speed on this line has been compared with that of the Endymion's actual log record, all of which calculations are inaccurate and deceptive.

When last sighted, 99 hours out, or at 3 o'clock on Sunday afternoon, the Marshall schooner was, in a direct line from New York, exactly 940 nautical miles out, which would give her an average progress—not speed—of 9.4 knots. On the Endymion's record-breaking run she made the distance to the Lizard, 3,020 miles in a direct line, in 332 hours, an average progress of 9.1 knots. She actually logged further, of course, and averaged in speed 9.6 knots, traveling an entire distance of 3,180 miles.

The Atlantic on the present trip has run a total distance of 997 knots in 90 hours, and has therefore averaged 10.1 knots, or half a knot an hour faster than the Endymion, in spite of the handicap of headwinds for the first 30 hours.

BARON'S SHIP TRUST LOSSES.

Glad He Didn't Invest All His Money—Says Promoters Deceived Him.

At the trial of the action brought by the Commonwealth Trust Company, as successor of the Trust Company of the Republic, against Louis Nixon, Daniel Le Roy Dresser, John W. Young, and others who were interested in the United States Shipbuilding Company promotion, in the Supreme Court yesterday, the testimony of Baron Pierre Calvert Roginat, taken in France, was read. The Baron declared that the promoters of the shipbuilding scheme had led him to believe that it was the greatest chance on earth to get big returns for money invested, and told how he undertook the French underwriting. He said he had spent 60,000f. in advertising and 25,000f. in cablegrams and telegrams in furtherance of his part of the French underwriting. Promises were made, he said, that this money would be returned to him.

He and Mme. Roginat, he said, had been advised to put all of their money into the scheme, but he added that he was glad they did not do it. The Baron said he sent on $25,000 to this city for investment in Shipbuilding bonds, and that it was now tied up in the litigation. He asked the court to give him judgment for $107,000. In referring to certain promoters who visited him in Paris, the Baron said the part they played in the enterprise, so far as he was concerned, was a continuous lie.

The Commonwealth Trust's action is to have awarded to it certain securities of the Shipbuilding Company pledged with the company for advances, and to have declared void certificates for bonds and stock issued by the underwriters.

FRENCH SILK TRADE CRISIS.

Ruin of Industry Threatened — Proposed Increased Duty.

PARIS, May 24.—A serious crisis in the silk industry was brought to the attention of the Chamber of Deputies to-day by the debate on a bill increasing the duty on silks of European origin from 40 cents to $1.50, and placing a duty of $1.80 per kilo on Japanese and Chinese raw silks, heretofore admitted free.

M. Morel (Republican) in reporting the bill, said the crisis had become acute. At Lyons and other silk centres business had fallen off and salaries had been reduced until ruin was threatened if the Government did not intervene. Some regions showed 50 per cent. diminution in production. One proprietor having 100 looms now worked 30, and within ten days he would reduce this number to 5. The chief cause of the crisis was the gradual increase of foreign competition.

The debate will be continued on Friday.

STUDENTS STREET CLEANERS.

If Stockholm Strike Continues Army Officers Will Volunteer.

STOCKHOLM, May 24.—Students of the high schools are cleaning the city's streets in place of the regular street cleaners, who have struck for improved conditions.

Plenty of volunteers seem ready to assist the municipal authorities, and it is said that in the event of a continuance of the strike military officers and civil officials intend to form a street-cleaning brigade and take turns in attending to the sanitary necessities of Stockholm.

BIG PLANS FOR ANTWERP.

Expenditure of $58,200,000 on Defenses and Harbor Works Proposed.

BRUSSELS, May 24.—A bill has been submitted to Parliament providing for the complete reorganization of the defenses of Antwerp at a cost of $21,600,000 and for harbor works which will increase shipping facilities at a cost of $36,600,000.

SAID HE WAS ROEBLING.

Tried to Get $50, Representing Himself as Missing Boy.

When he received a telegram purporting to come from his lost grandson at noon yesterday Washington A. Roebling of 191 State Street, Trenton, N. J., head of the Roebling Construction Company, which built the Williamsburg Bridge, was so overjoyed that he wanted to send immediately the $50 that was asked for in the telegram. But his secretary, Vincent Norman, got leave to take the money instead of sending it.

Mr. Norman, as a result of his foresight, early last night had Policeman Wickman arrest a young man for attempted grand larceny. Mr. Norman declared that the prisoner had tried to get $50 by palming himself off as Siegfried Roebling, the fourteen-year-old boy who disappeared from a private school in Asheville, N. C., last Saturday.

The boy left a note for his mother at the time saying: "I am sick of school. I am going on a tramp." His parents, who are living now in Asheville, have made unavailing search for him since. Yesterday at noon the grandfather received the following telegram:

Please send me $50. I intended going South, but I have no money. SIEGFRIED.

The message came from 1,257 Broadway. That is just across the street from the Imperial Hotel, where the Roeblings often stop in New York. So the happy grandfather, knowing that the hotel was somewhere near that number, thought the boy must be at the Imperial. And he was eager to send money on to "Siegfried." At last he allowed Mr. Norman to bring it. At 6 o'clock the Secretary was in the Western Union Telegraph office a few doors above 1,257 Broadway. Just then some one asked by telephone if "that $50 had come for Siegfried Roebling." Mr. Norman took the telephone, and said, "Yes, come and get it." The young man, who said he was Daniel Dolan, appeared and was arrested. Dolan declared that he was sitting on a bootblack stand at Sixth Avenue and Twenty-eighth Street a few minutes before 4 o'clock when a young man, about twenty-two years old, with light hair, asked him to go down to the telegraph office with a message. He went. He was very indignant when arrested.

Dolan was searched at the Tenderloin Station. He had on him several pawn tickets, a few dollars, and a peculiar apparatus which, the police say, is a "blow-the-burner" outfit, from which one may get an effect similar to that of cocaine or morphine.

MONEY WAGON IN CRASH.

Green Motorman's Car Upset It in Front of Metropolitan Opera House.

A north-bound Broadway car driven by a green motorman collided with a wagon of the American Express Company in front of the Metropolitan Opera House yesterday afternoon. The wagon was upset and several boxes containing money were dumped out on Broadway.

The Broadway car was driven by Edward Walsh, and John McCabe, an experienced motorman, was on the platform with him. The express wagon, which was just leaving the offices of the American Express Company at Fortieth Street and Broadway, after having made a tour of the uptown offices collecting money, was in charge of John Moore of 305 East Forty-eighth Street. Frank Hallinan, a messenger, was guarding the boxes of money.

As the wagon was crossing the street to go downtown the green motorman accidentally turned on the current. The car started forward suddenly and struck the rear end of the wagon, upsetting it. The driver and the messenger were buried under the boxes.

Policeman Brady of the Broadway Squad rapped for assistance and ran to the overturned wagon. Several policemen helped him to right the wagon and pull Hallinan and Moore from under the boxes. The crowd grew so large that some of the police of the traffic squad were called out to keep it back.

The driver and the messenger were taken from under the boxes in a semi-conscious condition. After being attended by a surgeon from the New York Hospital they were sent home. The driver was badly cut about the face and the messenger's shoulder was dislocated.

HUCKLEBERRY ROAD REPLIES.

Tells of the Troubles It Has in the Bronx and the Money It Spends.

President Edward A. Maher and other officials of the Union Railway Company appeared before the State Railroad Commissioners at a hearing in the Bronx yesterday, and defended it from the charge of furnishing insufficient service. Superintendent Carrigan of the road described the condition of the streets and avenues in which the cars of the company run, and the difficulties in the way of running the cars. He said he considered that the schedule was competent to fill all the demands of the public.

It was shown that in the last four years the company had expended $3,708,715 on the road, its extensions, and equipment. Then the hearing was closed.

RENNENKAMPFF LOST SEVERAL HUNDRED MEN

Reconnaissance to Japanese Rear Made at Heavy Cost.

VLADIVOSTOK NOT CUT OFF

Railroad and Telegraph Lines Intact—Oyama Reports Further Minor Successes.

GUNSHU PASS, May 24.—The situation is very tense. The rival commanders are watching each other like hawks, but there has as yet been no decisive move on the part of Marshal Oyama.

Gen. Rennenkampff made a bold reconnaissance at the cost of several hundred casualties, but the correspondent of The Associated Press is not allowed to telegraph the results obtained.

It is possible that it was Rennenkampff's cavalry which penetrated southwest of Fakoman.

CHANCHAVADZE, Manchuria, May 24.—The Japanese commenced an advance near Sha-ho-Tsc. At the same time the Russians advanced and seized two villages in the centre, the Japanese retiring to the further banks of the Kooche and Gertz Rivers.

There has been no serious fighting as yet. The Russians are making daily reconnaissances.

TOKIO, May 24.—Imperial Army Headquarters made the following announcement to-day:

"On the afternoon of May 21 a battalion of Russian infantry and six squadrons of cavalry attacked the northern height at Chin-yang-Pao, but were repulsed.

"On the morning of May 22 a battalion of Russian infantry and three troops of cavalry advanced along the Kirin-Taolu road toward Chien-chen-Tse, and one company of infantry gained the western height near the village, but we repulsed them.

"The Russian cavalry on the right bank of the Liao River commenced a retreat on the morning of May 22, and at 5 o'clock in the afternoon the enemy had reached a point south of Taiun, which lies seventeen miles west of Fakoman."

ST. PETERSBURG, May 24.—Inquiries were sent to Harbin to-day regarding the report telegraphed from Tokio to London that the Japanese had cut the railroad to Vladivostok and isolated that fortress. Replies were received saying that both the railroad and the telegraph lines to Vladivostok were working, and a denial of the Tokio report was authorized.

The news from the front continues to point to the proximity of fighting on a large scale.

Gen. Linevitch sent Gen. Rennenkampff's Cossacks on a daring expedition around Marshal Oyama's left. Rennenkampff succeeded in penetrating to the rear of the Japanese, but paid dearly, his Cossacks being badly cut up.

Many believe that Gen. Linevitch is trying to take the offensive out of Marshal Oyama's hands.

Newspaper correspondents at the front are prevented by the censor from telegraphing any intelligent statement of the situation, and this has always been the precursor of important developments. Gen. Linevitch has taken far greater precautions than did Gen. Kuropatkin to prevent his plans leaking out.

Gen. Linevitch under date of May 23 reports that a Russian detachment successfully attacked the Japanese trenches on the heights north of the station of Chaing-tu-Foo on May 21, forcing the Japanese to evacuate their trenches.

REACTIONARIES ARE ANGRY.

Campaign Against Religious Toleration—Jews Must Leave Kieff.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 24.—The Moscow Gazette, the leading Reactionary organ in Russia, has begun a bitter war against religious toleration, arguing that it will wipe out Orthodoxy in the non-Orthodox sections of the country. The paper declares that 450,000 Russians in Poland will come under the influence of Roman Catholicism if the Catholics are permitted to proselytize. It adds:

"The ukase has already had a deplorable effect on the Russian mujiks, among whom stories are current that the Emperor is under the influence of the Pope. It is even said that the Emperor will become a Catholic, and that the mujiks who do not desire to be converted to Catholicism will be transported and compelled to live in three provinces."

The paper concludes:

"This is not a religious war, but a Russo-Polish national battle."

The Novoe Vremya attacks what it terms the "insatiable demands of the Jews," who, it declares, are "exploiting Russia for the benefit of their pockets, but do not show a particle of patriotism, being the real instigators of the revolutionary movement."

Gov. Gen. Kleigels of Kieff has ordered all the Jews who have not permission to live in Kieff to return within the Pale.

LEAGUE OF LEAGUES FORMED.

Russian National Organization for Liberal Propaganda.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 24.—Professional bodies throughout Russia have now succeeded in perfecting a general national organization for the carrying out of the Liberal propaganda, the first steps in connection with which were taken by the congress of lawyers here. The scope of the organization has been widened, and it now embraces, besides lawyers, doctors, engineers, and other professional men, Polish, Jewish, and other racial organizations.

Headquarters of the "League of Leagues" have been established at Moscow, where delegates representing fourteen organizations met and formed a central bureau, which is now planning a general Liberal agitation in the Autumn.

The Government has taken formal measures to prevent the Zemstvos, Doumas, and other provincial and district institutions from indulging in unrestricted debate, and adopting resolutions on the subject of a change in the form of government.

BARON A BIT IN HIS CUPS.

But Says Police of His Country Wouldn't Have Molested Him.

Members of nobility are becoming common at the West Side Court. One a week has been the average for the last five weeks. Baron de Ketschendorf, who says he is of a noble German family, is the latest. He was arraigned before Magistrate Wahle yesterday charged with creating a disturbance at Hammerstein's Victoria Theatre on Tuesday evening.

"It's outrageous that a gentleman should be dictated to by these impertinent police," he told the court. "I may have been slightly intoxicated, but in my country they wouldn't dare do such a thing."

"We recognize but one class of gentlemen in this country," replied Magistrate Wahle. "That is those who conduct themselves as such. You are fined $5, and I hope it will be a lesson to you."

Policeman Stribel of the West Forty-seventh Street Station arrested the Baron in the lobby of the Victoria Theatre on a complaint that he refused to await his turn in line at the box office and was creating a disturbance.

TEACHERS MUST PASS TEST.

Decision in the Gross Case—He May Go to Court.

The question whether an examination by City Superintendent Maxwell is a necessary qualification for a place on the Principals' eligible list came before yesterday's meeting of the Board of Education when the appeal of Magnus Gross, a Manhattan teacher, who has failed to pass a Principals' examination, and who claims the place on the ground of teaching experience and a college diploma, was turned down. Maurice Thompson, an eligible list candidate, was appointed to the Principalship of School No. 1, in which Mr. Gross is now "Acting Principal."

Notwithstanding the fact that the board has divided against Mr. Gross, he still declares that he is eligible for the position of Principal. He has engaged counsel and will probably take the matter to court.

Grand Duke's Rooms Robbed.

PARIS, May 24.—Thieves yesterday entered the apartments in a hotel of the Grand Duke Nicholas of Russia, who is passing through Paris accompanied by his aide de camp, Col. Brunner. The thieves secured jewels valued at $2,000 belonging to Col. Brunner.

The Wanamaker Store — Store Closes at 5:30 o'clock — The Wanamaker Store

The White Sale Of Men's Summer Furnishings

Begins Today

We place on sale today one of the best and broadest collections of Men's Summer Shirts, Nightshirts, Pajamas, Collars and Cuffs, which we have ever assembled in this store under-price.

That is a pretty broad claim, in view of the famous White Sales of the past, held in this store. We have searched New York over for merchandise to compare with these White Sale offerings, and our shoppers tell us positively that no comparisons exist. All the merchandise to be found elsewhere at these prices is most radically inferior in quality and workmanship.

Some of these offerings have been provided in very large quantities, and will be on sale for several days, at least; other items were choice "plums" that we could only secure in little lots, that may be exhausted before the day is out. Every man who is interested in saving a good part of the expected cost of his Summer Shirts and other furnishings of first-class character will visit WANAMAKER's early today, and see what an extraordinary occasion is presented.

The story in detail follows:

TAFT MAKES DEBUT AS CANDIDATE

Puts Rate Law and Revenue Revision in His Platform.

LAUDS ROOSEVELT POLICY

Tells of "Soft Speaking" with Venezuela and Santo Domingo—Ohio Convention Cheers Him.

Special to The New York Times.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, May 24.—The speech of Secretary Taft before the Ohio Republican State Convention as its temporary Chairman here to-day is regarded by his friends as his formal "coming out" as a Presidential candidate.

The Republican Party has so rarely trusted itself to candidates from the bench that there had been a feeling that Taft was not likely to show the popular qualities that would bring him to the front. But it was forgotten that before he went on the bench he had the experience of several years as Assistant Attorney General, when he acquired a grasp of methods of managing opposition and dissent. It was as Governor General of the Philippines that Judge Taft became known to men in Congress and to his party generally as a broad-minded master of men and affairs.

The speech to-day is taken to mean that Judge Taft accepts for his own issues the rate question and the trust problem. These are cardinal planks of his platform. If any other member of the Cabinet conceives that he may be eligible for the Presidential nomination he is warned to take notice.

Rate control, regarded as a radical proposition, is set forth by Secretary Taft so that the force of the issue politically appears.

Secretary Taft's appearance in the hall was the signal for applause and, when he was introduced as temporary presiding officer the applause was long continued. During the reading of his speech, hearty applause greeted the mention of President Roosevelt and the allusion to the President's actions or policy. The Chairman's plain statement of his opinion as to certain State questions concerning which there had been much adverse criticism was the occasion for some of the heartiest cheering of the day. At the close of the speech, after a few preliminaries of organization, adjournment was taken until 10 o'clock to-morrow morning.

TAFT PRAISES ROOSEVELT.

Secretary Taft's speech follows:

"Fellow-Republicans of Ohio: I congratulate you on the prosperous political calm in which you meet. The tremendous victory of last Fall so stunned our ancient enemy, the Democracy, that as a party it is hardly even now showing any sign of life. When a President like Theodore Roosevelt, a consistent and orthodox Republican, is welcomed with bursts of enthusiasm and admiration in Texas and in the Democratic Iroquois Club of Chicago, we may well liken the present to the era of political good feeling which prevailed early in the last century."

The Secretary sketched the attitude of the Republican Party on the currency question since 1896, referred to the Spanish war and its results, and then said:

"In the campaign of 1904 the Democratic managers ignored the fact that it ever had been in favor of free silver, and sought to make the chief issue the personality of Theodore Roosevelt. Against him they charged imperialism, militarism, usurpation of power, violations of the Constitution, a dangerous foreign policy of intermeddling, and an attempt to introduce a personal government.

"This brought in review the action of the President, notably in the recognition of the Republic of Panama, the settlement of the anthracite strike, the bringing of the Northern Securities suit, and his Philippine policy.

NOT PLUTOCRAT NOR "MOBOCRAT."

"It made manifest the consistent attitude of Mr. Roosevelt in that he was neither a plutocrat nor a 'mobocrat.'

"The managers of the Democratic Party in the last campaign began as friends of certain Wall Street interests, but as the campaign shaped itself even the kings of the Street refused to put their money on a beaten horse and withdrew from the contest, leaving the poor Democratic leaders wallowing in the slough of despond into which their pusillanimous course had led them."

Secretary Taft then referred to the Democratic charges of corruption against the President and the Chairman of the Republican National Committee. The "outburst of indignant denial" from the President, he said, should serve as a lesson to those tempted to calumny at a campaign end. He added:

"It is not true that we Republicans, merely by past success, can escape the responsibility of working out other great questions as to the solution of which all Republicans do not yet seem to be in full accord.

"The Inter-State Commerce law has accomplished much, but inequality and injustice remain. The proposed remedial bill, as it passed the House of Representatives, attempts to give more power to the Railroad Commission, so that its orders when made shall be effective until set aside by judicial hearing.

FOR MODERATE RATE LAW.

"It does not as yet provide for a general fixing of a table of rates by the commission, but only calls for a fixing of a maximum rate upon complaint with respect to a specific instance of injustice. It seems a moderate measure, calculated to give the added power to the commission necessary to effectiveness in remedying specific wrongs in rates without creating an all-powerful tribunal which shall in advance take away from railways the power of rate making and of elastically responding to varying conditions. It will not thus paralyze individual effort in meeting the changing demands of trade.

"We certainly trust our law-givers to respond to the popular demand, and to regulate the railways so far as they ought to be regulated, without interfering with that control over their own property and with that motive for efficient and economic management which are still required to make successful the enormous business of railway transportation in America. This question must be settled by the Republicans.

"The Republican Party by its enemies is falsely charged with being a party of the corporation and a party of the wealthy. The history of its sacrifices in favor of human rights and of its contest for individualism against Socialism is a triumphant refutation of the charge.

BRYANISM'S NEW MENACE.

"Mr. Bryan represents an element of the Democratic Party that is hastening as rapidly as possible toward a doctrine in which vested interests are little regarded. He is now formulating a doctrine in favor of the government ownership of commercial railroads to which he hopes to lead his party. Against this proposition I feel confident the Republican Party will also set its face like flint.

"I only refer to it as Mr. Bryan's remedy for the abuses of which it is said the railroad companies are guilty, and as an additional reason why, if such abuses exist, as, in some measure, we know they do, we should take all reasonable steps to remedy them in the direction of an increased and effective power of governmental supervision and regulation, in order to meet the argument that government ownership is the only cure.

AS TO THE DEFICIENCY.

"It may be that Congress will succeed in cutting down, here and there, so as to reduce the deficit, but the experience of this last session, in which the greatest effort to economize was made, gives little hope that if the revenues continue at the same figure as last year the appropriations may be cut down to a point where no deficiency would exist. Are the people in favor of cutting down the naval or army estimates? I think I hear 'No' from one end of the country to the other. Certainly the Democratic Party heard that 'No' in no uncertain tones.

"Shall we cut down the pensions? No party has the hardihood to suggest that.

"There remain two alternatives: either to impose additional internal taxes or to readjust and revise the tariff. We have repealed the war taxes, which afforded a large revenue, and the eight years of the present Administration have seen a steady increase in the annual expenditures, so that the deficiency continues in serious amount then, in one way or the other, either our taxation on imports or our internal revenue system must be changed to meet the shortage, with every effort to cause the minimum of business disturbance.

"A Congress of the United States has been elected which will meet regularly the first of December, possibly earlier by the call of the President, before which the issue of regulation of railroad rates and the method of meeting the deficiency must come for decision. In the solution of these questions we can be certain that Ohio, represented by Senator Foraker, one of the two ablest debaters and Republican champions in the Senate, and by Senator Dick, who though a war horse in Ohio politics has still his spurs to win in that body, and by an experienced and able delegation in the house, led by those veteran and accomplished statesmen, Gen. Grosvenor of Athens and Congressman Burton of Cleveland, will support her part in bringing about a wise result.

"Mr. Roosevelt has insisted that the United States bear its part in the settlement of those questions between the nations in which, by reason of that guardianship which we maintain over this hemisphere under the Monroe Doctrine, we have always claimed a right to be heard, and in those new questions arising in the far Orient in respect to which, by reason of our ownership of the Philippines and our immense and growing trade with China and Japan, we may properly claim a hearing.

OUR AID FOR DOMINGANS.

"Nearly at our doors in the Caribbean Sea, in the control of which we necessarily have an anxious interest, is one Government, weakened by revolution and insurrection, tottering to a fall. Burdened by a debt whose face value is far beyond the means of the country to pay, it has turned to the United States for assistance in settlement with its creditors. Assuring the world and the State of Santo Domingo that the United States has no selfish purpose of aggrandizement in intervening, the President concluded a treaty by which, if ratified, Santo Domingo will go into the hands of the United States as a receiver. The treaty was not confirmed at the last session of the Senate because there were not enough Republicans present to do so. As all the powers of Europe acquiesce in approving it it seems certain that its provisions are so equitable and its necessity so great that at the next session of the Senate it will be confirmed.

"Some difference of opinion appears as to the extent of the Monroe Doctrine. The President insists that if the United States is to become responsible to Europe for the good conduct of the Governments of Central and South America, then it must be heard by those Governments when it demands that they put their houses in order and so avoid the just complaints of European powers.

"The Monroe Doctrine is difficult to maintain at all events, and it we assert it as we do we should accept the obligations that follow the assertion of the right.

"SPEAKING SOFTLY" TO CASTRO.

"People are prone to say that a large navy induces bravado, pugnacity, and a recklessness of peace. In one of the South American republics we are at present engaged in attempting to rescue the property of American citizens from what is said to be an unjust confiscation by the sovereign under color of judicial sanction. We have asked for arbitration, and it has been refused, and we are waiting now only until Congress before submitting the facts to it for its consideration. Meantime we are exercising toward this republic all the forbearance that is due to a weaker nation. And so it is with the general policy of Theodore Roosevelt that, while he insists upon carrying a 'big stick,' he does, in fact, speak softly and exercise a degree of forbearance that the confidence of strength and a righteous purpose justifies.

"At present the tariff against the Philippines is 75 per cent. of the present Dingley rates, and under this practically no imports reach the United States from the Philippine Islands. The friends of the Philippines look forward to the coming session of Congress with confidence that a measure of justice will be meted out to the islands.

FREE TRADE FOR PHILIPPINES.

"We shall hold the Philippines, certainly for a generation, probably for several generations, in our efforts to lead the people on to education and prosperity and a knowledge of self-government, and during that time we must take those islands to our bosom, so to speak, and give them the advantages of a member of our family. This benefit can never exist as long as we maintain a high tariff wall between us and the islands.

"We have been fortunate in having in the Gubernatorial chair in Ohio in the last two years a clear-headed business man who has not hesitated to cut down the appropriations presented to him in order that the credit of the State might be preserved. He has been attacked with bitterness by well-meaning men who have differed with him in respect to his course upon the liquor question. If I understand the situation aright to-day, the Ohio liquor law is the best measure in the United States.

"It is a law which leaves to the people living in a community of residences the right to exclude an objectionable saloon from close proximity to them, whether in the country or in residential parts of a large city. It is moderate, it is just, it is effective."

THE ISSUES IN OHIO.

Secretary Taft said Gov. Herrick had made few, if any, mistakes in his exercise of the veto power. He regretted that the State, county, and municipal patronage had not been put on a civil service basis. In concluding he said:

"And now, my fellow-Republicans, I have attempted to review the issues, not the issues between the Republican and Democratic Parties, for the Democratic Party is moribund and unable to frame issues, but the issues which in the Republican Party itself have been suggested for National improvement. I have ventured, although almost a stranger to the State, to touch upon one or two living State issues and to point out how much credit the satisfactory financial condition of the State is due to our Governor. We are come to nominate a ticket which we may be reasonably sure will receive the support of a majority of the voters of Ohio, but in its make-up we should not be content simply to obtain a perfunctory victory at the polls, but by the high character of the nominees we should force from the people of Ohio a real expression of continued confidence in that party which has heretofore served them so well. I thank you for the great honor of presiding over this convention."

The Committee on Permanent Organization recommended that the temporary organization be made permanent, and Secretary Taft will preside over the remaining deliberations of the convention.

SARGENT SEES DANGER IN INFLUX OF ALIENS

Commissioner Sounds Warning to Industrial Parliament.

WOULD TEACH IMMIGRANTS

Declares American Civilization Is Menaced by Lax Enforcement of Immigration Laws.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—A discussion of immigration and an address by Gustav H. Schwab of New York on "Foreign Commerce and Ocean Transportation" were the features of to-day's sessions of the Southern Industrial Parliament. The immigration question was discussed by Senator Simmons of North Carolina and Commissioner General Frank P. Sargent of the Immigration Bureau.

Mr. Sargent said if this country desired to maintain the high standard of civilization of which it boasts the immigration laws should be rigidly but humanely enforced. He condemned the practice of steamship lines in bringing in many aliens who were reasonably certain to be turned back. He denounced what he termed the traffic in humanity simply for dollars and cents. There was, he said, a duty for this Government to perform in addition to determining the right of the immigrant to land, and that was to lay before him the advantages of this country. He believed the citizens owed it to themselves to see that every alien before he leaves home is assured of his right to land when he gets here.

What was needed, he thought, was to offer advantages to aliens whereby they may gather some knowledge of the country outside the great centres of population. He urged the delegates to use their influence with Congress to enact a law establishing at Ellis Island a bureau of information for immigrants.

"Many and many an alien," he declared, "comes to America who, if steered out of New York into the open country, would by and by become a good American citizen."

Gustav H. Schwab made an address, in which he dealt at some length with various commercial and industrial problems. He said in part:

"Many of the supporters of our present high protective system recognize the fact that the Dingley Tariff act was purposely framed with a view to permit and invite reciprocal arrangements with foreign nations.

"When it came to the application of the reciprocal principle under this act, however, the protected infant industries did not feel strong enough to stand the shock of the mild reductions proposed by Mr. Kasson, the Commissioner appointed by the President to negotiate reciprocity treaties with important European nations, and the French reciprocity treaty, which was the first result of Mr. Kasson's laborious efforts and which was regarded as opening the way for other treaties, when submitted to the United States Senate for ratification met an ignominious death owing mainly to the vigorous opposition of one industry that feared it might be hurt."

Mr. Schwab denied that the steamship lines did anything to stimulate immigration abnormally.

Gov. Robert Glenn of North Carolina was elected President of the Industrial Parliament.

JOHN DOE INQUIRY TO UPSET BANKRUPTCY

Hudson River Water Power Co. Accuses Rivals of Conspiracy.

CHARGES FRAUD IN PETITION

Some of Names Signed, Says Complaint, Are Those of Fictitious Persons Posing as Assignees.

It came out yesterday that the District Attorney's office has instituted "John Doe" proceedings to investigate a charge that its rivals in business have conspired to force the Hudson River Water Power Company of Glens Falls into bankruptcy. James W. Osborne is representing the company. The case involves the Hudson River Electric Power Company, the National Contracting Company, the C. W. Hunt Company of West New Brighton, S. I., and a number of others.

The Hudson River Water Power Company is fighting the bankruptcy petition filed against it and signed by the National Contracting Company, the C. W. Hunt Company, Joseph L. Ashmead, and Joseph L. Curran, both supposed to be residents of this city.

The charge is made that the petitioners have wrongfully obtained the requisite number of signers through purchase of claims against the power company. It is also alleged that Messrs. Ashmead and Curran are fictitious persons. To this Laflin L. Kellogg of Kellogg & Rose, attorneys for the petitioners, said last night:

"Of course we got these assignments, as we had to under the law. I think it perfectly legal. This proceeding of the District Attorney's office is absurd. Ashmead and Curran are not fictitious persons. We know who they are and what their addresses are. There is no reason why the Hudson River Water Power Company and the District Attorney's office should have them."

To-day Mr. Kellogg will meet a number of representatives of power companies in Albany for a general conference. The Saratoga Gas and Electric Light Company, of which Senator Edgar T. Brackett is President, is to be represented. It is understood that its interests are closely connected with those of the Hudson River Water Power Company.

The action by the District Attorney's office is based on this part of Section 168 of the Penal Code:

If two or more persons conspire to falsely institute or maintain an action or special proceeding; or to cheat and defraud another out of property, by any means which are in themselves criminal, or which, if executed, would amount to a cheat, or to obtain money or any other property by false pretenses, it is conspiracy.

Among those who figure by name in the case are Eugene L. Ashley, Arthur W. Sewell, Vice President of the National Contracting Company; C. H. Peddrick, Jr., President of the Hudson River Electric Power Company, and Controller G. S. Humphrey of Glens Falls.

The petition in bankruptcy was filed May 11 in the United States Court for the Northern District. Charles Angels was appointed receiver.

The complainant company declares that it is solvent; that a receiver had been appointed prior to the entry of a judgment of $554,680; that this judgment had been appealed from, and furthermore, that the only way in which the National Contracting Company could get any hold upon the interests of the Hudson River Water Power Company was by forcing it into involuntary bankruptcy.

On March 31, 1905, litigation between the Hudson River Water Power Company and the National Contracting Company began in the Supreme Court of New York County. Ex-Justice Bookstaver was appointed referee. His report resulted in a judgment being rendered against the Hudson River Water Power Company for $554,680. This judgment was entered April 12 and an appeal was taken.

It is alleged that the Hudson River Water Power Company executed a mortgage to the Knickerbocker Trust Company as a guarantee of the bonds of the Hudson River Electric Power Company of Glens Falls to the amount of $5,000,000. It is further alleged that on April 10 the Hudson River Water Power Company gave a blanket mortgage for $2,000,000, covering all of its property, as security for a loan alleged to have been made by the Hudson River Electric Power Company. It is claimed that both were entered into prior to the judgment of the National Contracting Company.

Foreclosure proceedings were started following the making of the $2,000,000 mortgage. C. H. Peddrick, Jr., was appointed receiver in the foreclosure proceedings.

The Hudson River Water Power Company admits that it owed the C. W. Hunt Company $600. It alleges that within the last month and prior to the opening moves in the bankruptcy proceedings a certified check for $600 was sent to the C. W. Hunt Company, but the check was returned. A cash tender was then made, it is alleged, but the money was refused.

Charles Hovey of Glens Falls, who had a bill for $19.74 against the Hudson River Water Power Company, swears that Walter Chambers of Glens Falls offered $50 for the claim against the company. The offer was refused. Then $100 was offered. That was also refused. Then $150 was offered and accepted. He assigned the claim to "Joseph L. Curran." Who Curran is, Hovey makes affidavit that Chambers said he didn't know.

MAYER UPHOLDS TITLE OF WESTCHESTER ROAD

Attorney General Dismisses Rival's Application to Sue.

WORK TO BEGIN ON JUNE 5

Four-Track Suburban Line to Have Co-operation of Interborough Company—Mr. Mayer's Opinion.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 24.—Attorney General Mayer to-night decided in favor of the New York, Westchester and Boston Railroad Company in the matter of the application of Anthony Stumpf to the Attorney General for permission to bring an action in the Supreme Court against the Directors of the company. His purpose was to obtain a judgment that the company never legally existed and has never acquired the right to construct and operate a railroad company to connect with the Subway system of New York City.

The Attorney General summarizes his conclusions as follows:

"First—That the New York, Westchester and Boston Railway Company has substantial legal grounds for the contention that it is a valid railroad corporation, clothed with attendant corporate rights.

"Second—That both the local public authorities and private land owners have the fullest opportunity, without the intervention of the State, to protect themselves in the courts if they desire to resist the construction or operation of this road.

"Third—That grave injustice might be done if an action were brought or permitted to be brought in the name of the people, in view of the fact that the City of New York already has granted its consent to this company to cross the streets of that city upon terms which have already involved the payment of a substantial sum of money, which is subject to forfeitures.

"Fourth—That in so far as this application involves a contest between two railway companies for important and desirable operative territory, these companies should be left to a contest between themselves without action by the Attorney General."

Anthony Stumpf, who made the application, is a Director of the New York and Port Chester Railway Company, which covers a parallel route. The Port Chester Company secured all necessary consents from the towns in Westchester County, but when it applied for a consent to enter the City of New York its proposed ordinance was held up by the Board of Aldermen and an ordinance passed giving the right to the Westchester Company.

The Westchester Company has deposited with the City Controller of New York securities to the amount of $20,000 to assure the construction of its road, and is required to pay the city an annual rental of $8,000 and an additional forty cents per annum for each foot of single track laid over or across the streets, said rate of compensation to continue for the term of ten years from the date of the passage of the ordinance. For the next fifteen years thereafter the company is to pay a fixed rental of $16,000 per annum and an additional sum of 80 cents per lineal foot for each foot of a single railroad.

The company proposes to construct a four-track, third-rail electric railroad, except the Throgg's Neck branch, which will be double track, crossing all streets or highways over or under grade. The company proposes to maintain a continuous service with five to ten minute headway in rush hours and ten to fifteen minutes the rest of the day.

After receiving information yesterday that the Attorney General had refused to take action asked by the partisans of the Portchester Railway, officials of the New York, Westchester and and Boston Railway Company announced that construction of their lines in the Bronx and Westchester would be begun on June 5.

They intend on that day to celebrate their victory in the long fight with the rival interests. Work will begin on the section in this city, and State and city officials, as well as representatives of Westchester towns and villages, will be asked to be present at the ceremonies.

One line of the new road will run from White Plains, through Scarsdale and Tuckahoe, and will meet at Mount Vernon the main line which will come from Portchester and pass through Rye, Harrison, Mamaroneck, Larchmont, New Rochelle, and Pelham. Connection will be made with the east side subway extension at the Bronx River, but the line will be continued to the Harlem River at Second Avenue. A branch will run from the Bronx River to Throgg's Neck.

Close connections will be made with the Belmont lines. The interests are so closely allied that a joint terminal station will be erected to care for the traffic between roads. It is expected by the promoters that ultimately through trains will be run from all points on the Westchester lines by way of the Subway and elevated to the Battery.

William L. Bull, President of the Westchester Company, said yesterday:

"We have completed our organization and now have in the field more than fifty engineers, whose work has so far progressed that construction work could be started to-morrow, if necessary. Our chief consulting engineer, William Barclay Parsons, lately has been spending a great deal of time in the Bronx, looking over the field and passing upon the problems that constantly come up now that we are on the eve of building operations.

"We have never had any doubt as to the outcome of the proceedings before the Attorney General, brought in the interests of the Port Chester Company to delay the work. While we expect other suits, we are prepared to meet every attempt to prevent the completion of the New York, Westchester and Boston Railroad within the shortest possible period of working time."

WHISKY FIRM RECEIVER.

Member Seeks to Dissolve Partnership Started by Advertisement.

Judge Davis of the Supreme Court has appointed Albert Ritchie receiver of the assets of the firm of Crohen & Frankl, dealers in warehouse certificates for whisky, who did business under the style of the Woodland Distilling Company at 82 Beaver Street, in a suit brought by Charles Frankl against Theodore Crohen for a dissolution of the partnership and an accounting.

Mr. Frankl was a whisky salesman, and Mr. Crohen was induced to become a partner by an advertisement in a daily paper. The partnership was formed on Feb. 14, 1905. Mr. Crohen said he put in all the capital, $4,000, and Mr. Frankl went out on the road selling the whisky certificates. The business had been running about a month when Mr. Crohen says he received a letter from Crigler & Crigler of Covington, Ky., warning the New York firm to stop using the name of the Woodland Distilling Company, which had been the brand of the Covington firm for many years. On account of this and some other things Mr. Crohen closed up the business on March 27.

A statement of the firm's condition showed assets of $6,586 and liabilities of $6,421. Mr. Crohen says he is entitled to $3,423 of the capital put in by himself, and that Mr. Frankl is entitled to him to the extent of [illegible]

WILL REJECT ASPHALT BIDS.

Lowest Tender, Says Mr. Ahearn, Is of Unsuitable Quality.

Borough President Ahearn announced yesterday that he would decline all bids on the thirteen Manhattan asphalt contracts as presented on May 10, and would readvertise for new bids as soon as possible. In making this announcement the Borough President said that he at least was not in alliance with President Castro of Venezuela to injure the business of the New York and Bermudez Company, and that he was not seeking to play into the hands of the opponents of that aggregation.

The Uvalde Asphalt Company bid $1.05 a square yard for the work on the thirteen contracts, and was understood to be in line for the contracts. A protest was made by the Asphalt Construction Company, which bid 75 cents a yard, but President Ahearn threw out the bid on the ground that the asphalt offered did not come up to specifications.

The other bids were higher than that of the Uvalde Company. While Borough President Ahearn says that he had the right to threw out the bid of the Asphalt Construction Company, he intends to readvertise, and then go to the Board of Estimate to have his rejection of that bid confirmed if the figures are the same on the next bidding.

The asphalt of the Asphalt Construction Company does not come from the Bermudez Lake in Venezuela, while that of the Uvalde Company does.

KEEP THE PARK INTACT.

Board of Trade Protest Against Proposed Fifth Avenue Slicing.

At the regular monthly meeting of the New York Board of Trade and Transportation yesterday, at 203 Broadway, a resolution was adopted protesting against the proposition to remove the wall forming the eastern boundary of Central Park, and to widen Fifth Avenue so as to embrace a strip of Central Park ninety feet in width, from Fifty-ninth Street to One Hundred and Tenth Street, taking about twenty-seven acres from the Park.

The resolutions in part say:

"Of all the propositions to appropriate portions of the Park for other purposes than as a place of recreation for the public of the city this is the most insidious, because, as we understand, it would aid in forming a most attractive avenue for those whose residences border on the Park, and incidentally all the people might walk through it and admire it. This, the last request of the Park Commissioners, should be denied, and the integrity of the Park land should be preserved intact."

A resolution "that nothing but the most urgent necessity should lead to the granting of permission to construct any additional elevated railway tracks in the streets or avenues of the Borough of Manhattan" failed of passage.

HIRE NO NEW ROCKMEN.

Employers' Yards Closed—All to be Open Shop Hereafter.

None of the yards of the members of the Contractors' Protective Association who locked out their men was opened yesterday for the employment of non-union men or their old employes as individuals. In all about 12,000 rockmen and excavators were idle, and they were more or less anxious as to the next move of the contractors.

The eighty contractors who locked out their men are not under bonds to the builders, for whom they act as sub-contractors. The Emergency Committee of the association decided yesterday not to press those who are under bonds to the general contractors to finish contracts in a given time to lock their men out, as this would involve the risk of forfeiture of the bonds. The committee, however, decided in favor of recommending to these contractors at a general meeting this week to pass a resolution declaring for the open shop in the yards of these contractors, to go into effect as soon as their present contracts with the builders expire. This may take from two to three weeks, but several of the bonded contractors will declare for the open shop to-day.

It was learned yesterday that work on hundreds of building contracts in Manhattan and the Bronx had been stopped by the lock-out.

DANCED BEFORE RETIRING.

Mrs. Berrian Took a Chair for Her Partner, Says Witness in Will Contest.

Another hearing was held before Surrogate Noble at Jamaica, L. I., yesterday in the contest over the will of Phoebe Ann Berrian of Flushing, who left all her property to Elmer Augustine Holden of Franklin, N. Y., a salesman, who was almost an entire stranger to every member of the family. The contestants allege that she was of unsound mind. At a hearing last week Surrogate Noble ordered Holden to be present yesterday, and he was on hand.

Mrs. Bertha Hahn, a niece of Mrs. Berrian, testified. She said her aunt had been accustomed to dance with Mr. Berrian each night before retiring, and that after her husband's death she had not given up the custom of dancing, but had amused everybody who happened to be present by circling about the room with a chair for a partner. Mrs. Hahn said Mrs. Berrian often wore a stocking of one color on one leg and a different color on the other. She was so attired when she died.

Holden testified that he corresponded with Mrs. Berrian at intervals of perhaps a month.

"I knew Mrs. Berrian for ten years," he said, "but I had not the slightest idea that she meant to leave me a penny of her money."

SHOOT UP CHINESE LAUNDRY.

Bullets Miss, but Blow Fells Chinaman —One of Two Thieves Caught.

Young Pell and Sing Lee were in their laundry at 245 East Twenty-fifth Street Tuesday afternoon when two men entered with drawn revolvers and began firing. Pell was counting money at the time, and his partner was lying in a bunk in the rear room. After shooting without doing any damage one of the men struck Young Pell over the head with something or other and stretched him unconscious on the floor. The shots had aroused Sing Lee, and he began shouting. The intruders got frightened at this and ran to the street, where they separated.

Policeman Leonard caught one of them at Twenty-fourth Street and Third Avenue, the other getting away. At the station house the prisoner gave his name as Henry Wundrach, eighteen years old, of Peekskill. He said his companion's name was George Titus of 411 East One Hundred and Twenty-third Street. He said that they both came from Peekskill last Sunday.

One of the revolvers used by the men was found in the laundry. Wundrach was arraigned in the Yorkville Court yesterday and held for trial.

The police said they found on him two revolvers and a blackjack.

Third Meningitis Death in One Family.

The death from cerebro-spinal meningitis at Bellevue Hospital yesterday of Cecelia Halpern, two years old, of 221 East Ninety-ninth Street, was the third death in the family within a fortnight from the same disease. The other two deaths were of children four and five years old. Mrs. Halpern went to the hospital yesterday to ask for the body, but the regulations of the Board of Health require that it be buried from the Morgue [illegible] twenty-four hours, and the re-

At last a defense has been offered for the "mercerized cotton cheat." No maker or seller of the stuff of any consequence has said a word in its behalf; but the textile trade journals, moved by the helpless condition of our "mercerized" friends, present a defense in substance as follows:

"An honest mercerized worsted is better for the wearer than cheap, shoddy wool; considering that a multitude of men have to wear suits at less than $15, the legitimate mercerized cotton has its place in the market," etc., etc.

Just notice what this argument means; it is intended as a defense; it is really an accusation. "Mercerized cotton" fabrics are compared with cheap shoddy wool as a standard of wear. They are said to be justified by the requirements of low price; as a matter of fact they are actually more costly to the wearer than good all-wool.

It appears that the "mercerized cotton" cheat is tending to lower not only the standards of quality in the clothing business, but also the standard of morals.

We shall maintain the highest standard of both; all-wool honesty, at a fair price; the clothes always worth more than the price. Our label means that: it's a small thing to look for, a big thing to find.

THE POLITE BURGLAR; HE CALLS TO APOLOGIZE

Leaves Word for Mrs. Wright That Her House Is Safe.

THREE WERE SENT TO JAIL

Two Join in Regretting Their Nocturnal Intrusion, and the Third Is Still in Prison.

The "gentleman burglars" who took Mrs. George W. Wright's baby from the cradle and soothed it with a lullaby when they visited her house, at 164 Palisade Avenue, Jersey City Heights, four years ago, are furnishing fresh proof of their acquaintance with the etiquette of their profession. There were three of them—Louis and Thomas Coughran, brothers, and James Cody—who were caught and sent to State's prison. Louis was pardoned a year ago. His brother was released a few days ago because of the expiration of his sentence.

Tuesday afternoon the door bell of the Wright home tinkled and a neatly dressed young man asked for the mistress of the house. She was not at home, but the card he handed to the maid was delivered to Mrs. Wright's brother. The brother did not recognize the name, "Thomas Coughran."

"I don't suppose you recognize me," Coughran said.

"No, I confess I haven't the pleasure of—" the host stammered.

"Well, I'm one of the 'gentleman burglars.' I have come to pay my respects to Mrs. Wright and to apologize to her for—er—waking the kid the night me and my partner called on her uninvited."

"Oh! Ah! That's it, eh! Well, I'll deliver your message."

"I should 'a' been so delighted to see her," the young man went on, "but she's not at home and I can't wait. Please remember me kindly to her and assure her that she need not fear another midnight call from me—that I've gone out of the business. I didn't know but that if she heard my term was ended she might be apprehensive. Good day."

The burglar bowed and retired.

"He is the second of the three," said Mrs. Wright yesterday, "to pay me a visit to apologize. I'm glad I was not at home. It would have been so embarrassing, you know. I hope that the third one will have forgotten this part of the etiquette of his profession by the time his term expires."

The two Coughrans are said to have enlisted in the army.

HAD TO PAY BONDSMEN.

Peddlers Say They Were Assessed $1 Each In Police Station.

Charges of extortion were made in the Tombs Court yesterday, when fifty old-clothes peddlers captured in a police raid at Bayard and Elizabeth Streets Tuesday night were arraigned. One of the peddlers said they had been forced to pay $1 apiece at the Elizabeth Street Station. A policeman retorted that there wasn't $1 in the whole crowd.

Pressed by Magistrate Crane, however, he admitted that the thirty-three who were bailed might have paid $1 apiece to their bondsmen. The seventeen who spent the night in cells said that they would have been at liberty if they had had $1 with which to buy their freedom.

Magistrate Crane discharged the peddlers, telling them to repeat their charges to District Attorney Jerome. He said to the policemen present that there were more obnoxious nuisances in the streets to which they might better devote their attention. The peddlers ran from the courtroom shouting their thanks to the Magistrate. They derided a little knot of clothing merchants who keep stores along their particular field and who had urged in court that they be sent to prison.

Rockefeller's Man Robbed on a Car.

George Greenfield of 239 West Thirty-ninth Street was a prisoner before Magistrate Baker in the Harlem Police Court yesterday afternoon, charged with picking a pocket. Robbery was another charge against him. He was held for examination. The complainant in the pocket-picking case was James Argue, caretaker for John D. Rockefeller at his estate at Pocantico Hills. Argue was riding on a cross-town car Tuesday evening when a pocketbook containing $5.25 was taken. Mrs. Catherine Smith of 2,118 Eighth Avenue and Mary Higgins also identified Greenfield as the man who, on May 19, tried to rob the residence of Mrs. Smith while she and Mrs. Higgins were absent. Mrs. Higgins discovered a man in the house, and he knocked her down and made his escape.

STRANGER SHOOTS DOWN WOMAN IN HER HOME

Chases Her to Kitchen After Asking for a Job.

MOTIVE A PUZZLE TO POLICE

Man Vanishes After Mortally Wounding Mrs. Maisel in Williamsburg—She Says He Demanded Jewels.

Mrs. Max Maisel, wife of a shirt manufacturer of 200 Hopkins Street, Williamsburg, was shot and probably fatally wounded at her home yesterday morning by a man whom neither she nor her servant had ever seen before. After the shooting the man, whom the police believe is a maniac or a robber or a man whom Mr. Maisel had discharged, vanished, as the police put it, in thin air.

Mrs. Maisel was shot down in her kitchen, where the man chased her from the front door, and fell before one of her five children, a two-year-old girl, and near the cradle, where the youngest of the family was.

At the Eastern District Hospital, where Mrs. Maisel was taken, it was said last night that she was dying.

The Maisels live in a flat on the second floor of a three-story frame building. Mr. Maisel goes to work every morning at 7 o'clock. Mrs. Maisel's servant, Lena Barbowitz, at 10 o'clock yesterday morning was in the kitchen when the bell rang. Mrs. Maisel answered it. She found a young Jew when she opened the door. He asked her, it is said, for a job, speaking in Yiddish. The man is described as being not more than twenty years old, 5 feet 7 inches in height, with dark complexion. He wore dark clothes and a black derby hat.

"I have no work for you," Mrs. Maisel told him. "Go and see my husband, on Manhattan Street. He might find a job for you."

The visitor turned away, as if to leave, and Mrs. Maisel shut her door. There was a second ring at the bell, and for the second time she answered it. The same man was there. As to what then happened accounts differ. Mrs. Maisel said that the intruder demanded her jewelry—she was wearing a pair of diamond earrings worth several hundred dollars—and when she declined to turn over her valuables to him he drew a revolver and followed her into the flat. Lena Barbowitz says that there was no attempt at robbery. This is the story Lena told Capt. Velsor of the Vernon Avenue Police Station:

"When Mrs. Maisel went to the door the first time I didn't pay any attention. When the bell rang the second time I watched her as she answered the call. I had a good look at the man, who was waiting. The first thing he said was, 'I guess I'll shoot you anyway.' Then he pulled a pistol from his pocket, and Mrs. Maisel ran to the kitchen window, screaming for help. I was so frightened that I couldn't do a thing. She was at the window when he shot her twice. One bullet hit her in the back and the other under her right arm. She fell to the floor, and the man turned and ran. There was no talk of jewelry that I heard."

Charles Popp of 506 Marcy Avenue was sitting on the stoop of the adjoining house when the man who did the shooting appeared. Popp noticed him particularly. He saw that one of his upper front teeth appeared to be almost solid gold. Shortly after the man entered the Maisel house Popp heard a woman scream. Then two shots rang out. He called Charles Miller, who works in the factory at 198 Hopkins Street, and told him to watch the front door of 200, and see that nobody came out. Then Popp ran for help. He found Policeman Donovan at Broadway and Flushing Avenue. Donovan sent in an ambulance call, and hastened to the house. Capt. Velsor was communicated with, and joined Donovan just as the ambulance came. Mrs. Maisel was conscious, and made a statement in which she said that the man who shot her first demanded her jewelry and then opened fire.

Miller, who was on guard at the street door of the Maisel home, says that he saw nobody come out after the shooting. His declaration puzzled Capt. Velsor greatly. At the hospital Mrs. Maisel told the Coroner that she hadn't an enemy in the world, and that she was sure robbery was the motive of the man who tried to kill her.

Max Maisel, the husband, said last night that several weeks ago he had occasion to discharge a man who answered the description of the man who shot his wife. The police had been working all day on different clues when he said this. He said he could not remember the name of the man, but didn't know where he lived. Capt. Velsor at once ordered his detectives to try to find the man.

There was much excitement after the shooting on Hopkins Street, and a crowd of several hundred men helped the police search for Mrs. Maisel's assailant. They could find no trace of him.

"POLY" ATHLETES WIN.

Boys' High School Loses Dual Meet by Eight Points.

The young athletes of the Polytechnic Preparatory High School and the Boys' High School of Brooklyn met in their dual track competition yesterday afternoon at Grand Street Park, Maspeth, L. I. Thirteen events were on the programme, and after an unusually close contest, the Polytechnic boys won the meet and the trophy by a total of 62½ points to 54½. It was the pole vault that decided the contest. Roberts and Crafts, both of the Polytechnic School, tied at 9 feet 1 inch, thus giving eight points to their school. Crafts afterward attempted to do better, but the pole broke as he was going over the bar.

The loss of the annual meet was a hard blow for the High School athletes, as they have held the cup for the last two years. Summary:

FOR LIFE PRESERVER FRAUD.

Nonpareil Officials on Trial—Iron in Cork Blocks, Says Witness.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, May 24.—The trial of the officers of the Nonpareil Cork Works on an indictment for conspiracy to defraud the United States Steamboat Inspectors by placing in life preserver cork blocks iron bars to make them come up to standard weight began in the United States District Court here to-day, and the pains taken in selecting a jury shows how hard the case will be fought. The indicted men are James H. Stone, H. C. Quintard, James Russ, and Charles W. Russ.

Louis N. Kahnweiler was the first witness for the Government, and told of finding the iron. Counsel for the defense objected to his testimony on the ground that it had not been shown that the Government ever received any cork blocks from the Nonpareil Cork Works and, therefore, an indictment could not lie against his clients, because they had no relations with the Government, but with Kahnweiler Sons.

Counsel for the defense attempted to show that Mr. Kahnweiler could not tell whether a piece of cork block handed to him contained bar iron. Mr. Kahnweiler said it did, and, under direction of the court, broke the block and the piece of iron dropped out.

James H. Jones, a negro employe, testified to receiving instructions from James Russ, the Superintendent, to place the pieces of bar iron in the special order of 250 blocks to go to Kahnweiller.

MILLINERS' UNION NOW.

Get Only $3.50 to $8 a Week, and Only Half the Year, They Say.

A new organization, for the protection of the interests of milliners, has been formed in this city, and is working under the auspices of the Church Association for the Advancement of the Interests of Labor, of which Miss Harriet A. Kayser is Secretary. A meeting of the organization, which numbers about 150 members, will be held this evening in the Progress Assembly Rooms, 28 and 30 Avenue A.

There are 21,000, it is said, in the wholesale and retail millinery trade. The new organization was quietly formed last January, it is declared. They are organizing because many of the workers get but $2.50 a week, after having obtained experience, and that the highest price is $9 a week. The majority get from $3.50 to $6 a week. They have only about six months' work in the year.

WESTERN BETTORS' COUP.

Big Winning Made by C. E. Rowe Stable on La Sorciere.

A betting coup of large proportions was made at the Belmont Park race course yesterday when, with the colt La Sorciere, the St. Louis racing stable of C. E. Rowe and the Western connections were reported to have won over $100,000 when La Sorciere was first for the second race. The Rowe stable, owned in partnership by Rowe and Otto Stiefel of St. Louis, has in it the favorite entry for the Brooklyn Handicap to-day, Colonial Girl and First Mason, and the plunge made on La Sorciere attracted the more attention because of the prominence of the stable's horses in to-day's big event.

Rowe bought La Sorciere for $14,000 in the West and brought him to New York with a "killing" in view, though the owners had to accept a much smaller price than they expected. La Sorciere was backed from 4 to 1 down to 3 to 1 at the race track, but it was said that a great sum, in addition, was placed by Western men in the poolrooms wherever poolrooms now are open. It was estimated that the Western backers of the colt won about $50,000 from Belmont Park bookmakers.

ROADS NOW OPPOSE THE ELSBERG BILLS

Urging Veto of Measures Shearing Aldermen of Powers.

FEAR SUBWAY WORK DELAY

Pennsylvania-New Haven-Metropolitan Interests Change Front—Higgins Said to be Against Bills.

Owing to the many vexatious legal delays which might be placed by the Aldermen in the way of further rapid transit construction should Gov. Higgins sign the two Elsberg bills depriving the Aldermen of all power over public service franchises, efforts now are being made by interests formerly favorable to the measures to have the Governor veto them or allow them to die a natural death with the rest of the thirty-day bills on June 4.

Word reached the City Hall and members of the Rapid Transit Board yesterday that the Governor had come to the belief that the best interests of the city would be served by vetoing the measures, and that such action was expected on his part. Several Rapid Transit Commissioners as well as some of the interested city officials were inclined to credit the report at face value, and even some men connected with the Pennsylvania Railroad, which had forced the bills through the Legislature in the first instance and then again after Mayor McClellan had vetoed the measures, admitted that they had heard intimations that the Governor might act adversely on the bills.

A member of the Rapid Transit Commission said he believed that the Pennsylvania-New Haven-Metropolitan combination, which backed the bills, and which is counting heavily on landing the contract for the next Manhattan subway, had suddenly lost interest in the measures because of the fear that their position would be worse after the enactment of the bills than it is now. Two causes are given for this change of front. One is that the present plans of the Pennsylvania-New Haven-Metropolitan interests for subway construction, which have been approved by the Rapid Transit Commission, might be delayed for five years if the bills are signed and the Aldermen should carry out their threat to contest their constitutionality not only to the Court of Appeals, but to the Supreme Court of the United States. That length of time might easily be consumed in the litigation, and in the meantime no subway work could be undertaken for the simple reason that the contractor would not take a chance at going ahead with what might turn out to be an invalid contract. The other reason given is the fear on the part of the Pennsylvania-New Haven-Metropolitan combination that they would have less to expect in the way of favors from the Board of Estimate even than from the Board of Aldermen. They realize also that they have antagonized Mayor McClellan by their action in going to the Legislature.

Mayor McClellan smiled when he heard the report, and said that he had nothing further to say about the Aldermanic bills beyond what he had said on April 29 in his veto message to the Legislature. The Mayor then said that the only argument in favor of the bills was that the Board of Aldermen had abused their powers, and that it might just as well be held that the Board of Estimate might be guilty of the same abuse.

Two other bills, both backed by the Pennsylvania Railroad, occupied the attention of the Mayor yesterday. They extend the time of the New York Connecting Railroad to complete its proposed railroad across Long Island and its proposed bridge across the East River, granting also the consent of the State to the enterprise. Edward M. Shepard, who has appeared as the counsel for the Pennsylvania and Metropolitan systems in various like hearings, urged the approval of the measures by the Mayor.

"Why were these bills sent to me?" demanded the Mayor.

"As all the work is to be done in the city limits, we thought some legal question or dispute might arise in the future, and we wanted to be on the safe side," said Mr. Shepard.

"In other words, you want the Mayor to commit himself to approval of the State's consent in advance of passing on the question in the usual form," said the Mayor.

The idea was conveyed that the Mayor would refuse to act on the bills at all on the ground that they were improperly before him.

SULZER BOOM FOR MAYOR.

Municipal Ownership League Discusses Him as Candidate.

The latest move on the chess board of the Municipal Ownership League, which includes many of the followers of Representative William R. Hearst, resulted yesterday in putting Representative William Sulzer in the Mayoralty row in place of Judge Samuel Seabury of the City Court, who has been most talked of for the nomination.

The Hearst managers say that Sulzer has great strength on the east side and would bring hundreds of votes to the municipal ownership ticket. They are also figuring that Sulzer doesn't stand as strongly in Tammany Hall as he once did; that he was only renominated in 1904 as a personal favor to Richard Croker.

DISPUTE GRAND JURY'S RIGHT TO SEE BOOKS

Counsel for Witness in Contempt Would Limit Tobacco Inquiry.

NO ONE ACCUSED, SAYS ROOT

He Denies Authority of Accessory of Federal Court to Engage in a Fishing Expedition.

Before Judge Wallace, in the United States District Court yesterday, argument was heard on the petition of Edwin F. Hale for a writ of habeas corpus. Mr. Hale had been adjudged guilty of contempt of court and was sentenced to pay a fine for refusal to answer questions put to him by the Federal Grand Jury in its secret investigation of the affairs of the American Tobacco Company. Elihu Root and De Lancey Nicoll made the arguments for the writ, and Mr. Hale was also represented by John D. Lindsay and Junius Parker of counsel for the Tobacco Trust. Henry W. Taft, acting as a special United States District Attorney, appeared for the Government.

Mr. Hale, who was Secretary of the firm of McAndrew & Forbes, licorice manufacturers, refused to obey the order of the Grand Jury for the production of books, letters, and agreements of the firm. Mr. Nicoll contended that a Federal Grand Jury had not the right to require private papers in an inquiry not involving a charge against anybody, but merely designed to determine whether a crime had been committed. He argued that the provision of the anti-trust law affording protection to a person testifying only applied to a witness in a "proceeding, suit, or prosecution" under the Sherman act, and that the secret inquiry could not be considered as any of these.

"No charge has been made by any one against any one," said Elihu Root. "Mr. Taft is conducting a general inquisition. There was nothing to indicate that the investigation was being made under the Sherman law. Mr. Taft divulged that later. The whole thing was a general fishing expedition. There is no warrant for a Grand Jury to convert itself into a body for the performance of police duties. A Grand Jury has no right to conduct a general investigation. There must be a specific charge in some form against somebody."

Mr. Root said that the demand made by the Federal Grand Jury for the production of books and papers of Mr. Hale's firm was "as illegal as would have been an order on my law clerk to grab the papers in my office and haul them to the jury room for inspection in a case involving no charge against any one. No man is entitled to see my private papers, except when, if there be a valid question pending before the court, I must yield my private rights to my public duty."

Mr. Taft said there was no question that the Grand Jury had acted properly when it endeavored to investigate "a criminal violation of the anti-trust law." He said it was only through Grand Juries that the Federal courts could do their work, and the Supreme Court had decided that to these juries belonged the powers necessary for performing their functions as accessories of the courts.

Judge Wallace said he desired to have the case disposed of as soon as possible and said that briefs should be sent to him within a week.

The Ultimate Passion

A young man of high ideals playing into the hands of a powerful corrupt political ring in order to gain power through their influence and ultimately to defeat them—this is a hint of the plot of this strong, virile novel. It is a work of unusual power, an absorbing story, showing the machinations of political schemers and others prominent in social and business life in New York. The startling incidents that the political situation brings forth are closely woven in with a charming love-tale. Mr. Mighels will be remembered as the author of Bruvver Jim's Baby.

The Slanderers

"This novel, by Warwick Deeping, author of Uther and Igraine, so agreeably remembered, shows that he is as much at home in his portrayal of modern life as he was in the region of Arthurian romance. The style is insistingly picturesque—warm and glowing."—The Beacon.

The Masquerader

Things move so fast nowadays that even the most successful book can hope to be hardly more than a nine-day's wonder. And yet The Masquerader, which instantly sprang into popular favor on its appearance months ago, still holds its own. It is a novel of such tremendous force, a story so full of life interest, that it continues to hold the whole reading public fascinated by its magic power.

Of

EDITH WHARTON'S Story "THE HOUSE OF MIRTH"

The New York Sun says:

"Attention focuses particularly upon Mrs. Wharton's heroine in "The House of Mirth" because with each instalment of the story she seems to lose the balance of values as well as the integrity of morals which even the fashionable woman's code respects and protects. From being a somewhat careless and unfortunate but sprightly and attractive virgin she is deteriorating to the level of the unprincipled promoter of dishonorable schemes, and involving herself in a tangle from which it will be difficult to rescue her with a shred of self-respect. The general consensus of opinion is that Mrs. Wharton's heroine is a real personage, and that the picture she presents of modern society is none too highly colored. There are critics who go so far as to say that if the story be true it should not be told, and if it be not true then certainly it should not be written. It is the old question: Is it or is it not; and if so, where are we?"

ISOLATING VLADIVOSTOK.

The report that the Japanese have cut the Eastern Siberian Railroad and thus isolated Vladivostok is not very well authenticated. There is little in its favor but its intrinsic probability. This is considerable. It is perfectly possible that the Japanese intend to repeat at the northern port of Russia what they so successfully accomplished at the southern, to invest Vladivostok as they invested Port Arthur, and to prevent the bulk of LINEVITCH'S army from coming to its rescue as, by the battle of Nanshan Hill, they prevented KUROPATKIN from coming to the rescue of Port Arthur.

It will readily be seen how direct is the bearing of this report upon the speculation which we published yesterday that it may not be the intention of the Japanese Admiral to prevent the combined Russian squadrons from making their "nearest home port"; that at all events he will not risk a decisive naval battle to prevent them from reaching it. Naturally, he will try to do them all the harm he can en route without exposing Japan's only warships. But it would almost be worth his while to "shepherd" them into Vladivostok if he were sure that the place would be beleaguered and cut off from help or supply from the landward side as soon as they arrived. Then they would be in the precise predicament in which their predecessors under MAKAROFF and WITSOEFT found themselves, and could not but be depressed by the ominousness of the situation.

ENGLAND IN CHINA.

It is beginning to be realized in England that that country has made serious mistakes in its policy in reference to the trade of China. The London Times has lately printed a letter from its correspondent at Shanghai, enumerating some of them, and pointing out the mischief they have done. The first and most serious of all he does not mention. That, of course, was the acquiescence of Great Britain in the triple bullying of Japan by Russia, France, and Germany, ten years ago, in order to make Japan relinquish the control of Manchuria to Russia. Lord ROSEBERY, then Foreign Secretary, and the Liberal Party must bear the brunt of that blunder. The succeeding blunders, however, were those of a Conservative Government. So that there is no chance for the making of a fair "point" in British politics for or against either party.

Russia got her share of the spoils of the bullying in the control of Manchuria, the Eastern Chinese Railway, and Port Arthur, and ultimately paid for it by the present war. Germany got hers in the "lease" of Kiao-Chow with its appurtenant privileges, without objection from any other European Power. What France has got except the gratitude of Russia for pulling the Russian chestnuts out of the fire has not yet transpired.

It was at this point that Great Britain made her second great blunder. What she wanted in the East, as was said at the time, was "not territory but trade." To insist upon the open door and to resist the partition of China were her plain interests. She abdicated her power of advocating them with any effect when she took Wei-hai-Wei, which Lord SALISBURY owned was of no use to her, by way of "compensation" for Port Arthur and Kiao-Chow. She estopped herself still more completely when she consented to accept the Yang-tse Valley as her "sphere of influence." Of course nothing that she could say after that against the Russian and German encroachments could carry any weight. She left it to the United States, whose hands are as yet clean, to take up her abandoned mottoes and policies, as under the guidance of Mr. HAY we have ever since been doing.

Great Britain has taken absolutely nothing by her new motion. While Germany officially responded to Mr. HAY'S appeal by saying that the Imperial Government had "not only asserted but practically carried out to the fullest extent in its Chinese possessions the absolute equality of treatment of all nations with regard to trade," it is the fact, according to The London Times's correspondent, that there is no more a British merchant established at the Treaty ports of China than there was one established at Port Arthur before residence there became undesirable for foreigners and non-combatants. Moreover, upon the same authority, the "concessions" are of no use at all, while her acceptance of them has had the effect of "identifying England in the eyes of the Chinese with the policy of spoliation." His conclusion is that Great Britain ought to retrace her steps, to give up all her own exclusive privileges, and to insist that other countries shall give up theirs, to the extent of a really "open door" throughout China. In other words, she is exhorted to follow the lead which she abandoned to the United States. That would be a very practical compliment to Mr. HAY'S diplomacy.

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP.

The unmistakably rapid growth of a sentiment in favor of the public ownership and control of all public utilities indicates a cheerful optimism which is difficult of comprehension when it is remembered in how many ways every large municipality fails to discharge the duties and obligations it has assumed anything like as well as it would expect and demand that these should be discharged by private corporations. In the Reform Club discussion on Monday evening this phase of the subject received very little attention.

New York will furnish as many illustrations of municipal mismanagement and neglect as are necessary. Our streets are pre-eminently a municipal responsibility. In what condition are our pavements habitually maintained? True, even good pavements wear out, but it is not of legitimate wear that the citizen has reason to complain. What he has a right to object to is the persistent neglect of repairs which, if made when needed, would keep pavements in fairly good condition for many years longer than their present average life. The sidewalks are a municipal responsibility everywhere and at all times. Why is it that in so many streets the sidewalks are permitted to fall into such a condition of disrepair that one must walk circumspectly if he would avoid being tripped by abrupt changes of level, by the obtruding edges of misplaced flagstones or by other obstructions to which little or no attention is paid? Street cleaning is a municipal responsibility, and upon the way in which it is done depend the public comfort and the public health. Looking back through, say, twenty-five years, during how many administrations has street cleaning been other than a scandal and a disgrace? WARING did splendid work, but it was absolutely the first of its kind New York had ever known, and since the expiration of his brief term we have at times had to be content with very inferior service.

Street lighting is a municipal responsibility, at least to the extent of maintaining the lamps in good order. Is this habitually done? Many of the problems of health and housing are municipal responsibilities; in how many of the administrations of a quarter of a century have they been well or sufficiently attended to? Building in New York is under municipal control, and must in theory be done on approved plans and specifications, and in accordance with the specific provisions of a building code. How is it that the number of buildings which have collapsed since Spring set in has been so large that the usefulness of the Bureau of Buildings has been called in question? The policing of the city is something of which the municipality enjoys a natural monopoly. Has there ever been a time within the recollection of the present generation of citizens when the police management has been anything like satisfactory?

In some of the larger things of public interest the results of municipal ownership and control have not been so conspicuously good as to warrant enthusiasm. The management of the water supply system of New York has been in the main very extravagant and extremely short sighted. For years considerably more than half the water brought into New York has been lost from leaks in the underground distribution systems, and we have several times come in sight of scarcity with water enough available to supply every use and waste of a city three times greater than this. It is the public duty to build and maintain sewers. If the condition of the sewers of New York were known it might not create a panic, but it would afford grounds for grave uneasiness. It does not follow, of course, that it would be of public advantage to contract for our water supply with the Ramapo "syndicate," or to turn over our sewers to private control; but from the facts as they are one may properly reaoh the conclusion that there are a great many problems which do not find a satisfactory solution in public ownership and control, and that until we have educated our communities up to a realizing sense of what public responsibility really means, what we may want to municipalize would be no better managed as a public trust than what is already municipalized.

THE TERMS OF PEACE.

Notwithstanding the desperate bluff of the "second and third squadrons," it must be becoming plainer to reasonable Russians that it behooves Russia to make peace. Of course the Russomaniacs like Count CASSINI, who maintain that a nation fairly beaten in war is on the same footing as if she were victorious, and that Japan must admit that she is beaten before Russia will conclude peace, the events of the last fifteen months go for nothing. But that peace is needful to Russia, both to safeguard her position in Europe and to safeguard her internal situation. Of course, this latter cannot be permanently conserved without a great modification and modernization of the existing system of government.

Meanwhile Japan is and must be sincerely desirous of peace on any terms that recognize the result of the war and obviate the necessity of having to fight it over again. The latest version of her terms is that given out from Tokio by Count KATO, former Minister of Foreign Affairs and former Minister to Great Britain:

We shall require Russia to return Manchuria to China, recognize our suzerainty over Korea, cede Saghalien to us, remove permanently the fortifications of Vladivostok, and pay an indemnity of at least 2,000,000,000 yen, ($1,000,000,000.)

Paying any indemnity at all will be a bitter pill to Russia. She insists that an indemnity is inadmissible unless Japan is actually in possession of unquestionably Russian territory, for the evacuation of which the indemnity is taken as an equivalent. There is every reason to believe that, if Russia really insists on this condition, Japan will see her way to fulfill it. Meanwhile, the figure named by Count KATO is less than a year's cost to Russia of the continuance of war, as Russia makes war. And the other terms are, really, of a surprising moderation. Russia's friends, and still more the friends of the actual governing classes of Russia, would advise her to accept them. It is the enemies of Russia who would stand out against their acceptance.

ITALIAN IMMIGRANTS IN THE SOUTH

The manager of the great Corbin plantation near Greenville, Miss., states some facts of interest as to the opportunities offered in the South for Italian immigrants. Speaking from personal observation, he says that as a cotton grower the Italian is in every way superior to the negro, and that he will make an average profit of $5 from cotton where the negro makes $1. He thinks that the only solution of the labor problem in the Mississippi delta is to be found in the encouragement of Italian immigration. Of those who have already gone there he says they are industrious, frugal, and enterprising. Thousands have been established in colonies in Mississippi, where they are prospering. It is the rule among them that the immigrant acquires land, builds himself a good house, keeps out of debt, and quickly becomes an independent, prosperous citizen.

Special statistics compiled for the census by Mr. ELIOT LORD of the Census Bureau, by Mr. J. D. TRENOR, Chairman of the Immigration Committee of the National Board of Trade, and others for whom the subject has interest, confirm the conclusions above quoted. A number of Italian agricultural colonies have been planted not only in Mississippi, but in other parts of the South. In California, for example, more than 3,000 farms, ranches, orchards, and vineyards are owned by Italian immigrants, and more than a thousand firms of Italians are doing business in that State, with an aggregate capital of about $20,000,000. Efforts to interest Italians in sugar growing on the cane plantations of the Lower Mississippi Valley have been attended with gratifying success, and thousands of them are profitably engaged in truck growing. They are so much preferred to negro labor that very attractive inducements are offered to them, and negotiations begun on responsible authority for groups or colonies of Italians who in the cities would have very little opportunity for anything more satisfactory than organ grinding, banana peddling, or following the unskilled occupations which are always precarious, will be met with enthusiastic co-operation by Boards of Trade and industrial associations everywhere throughout the South. The conditions of climate and temperature are there more congenial to the Italian peasant than are those of the North and West.

This would appear to offer opportunity for some well-directed effort by the representatives of the Italian Nation in our citizenship who are desirous of helping their own people. Under almost any conditions the Italian will do better out of the cities than crowded into their "slum" neighborhoods. The census of 1900 showed that there were nearly half a million in the United States, of whom only about 132,000 were found outside the North Atlantic States. New York City alone had 145,433. The totals are now somewhat larger, but it is probable the ratios of distribution are pretty much the same as in 1900. The natural field of usefulness of the Italian peasant is the South. His tastes are agricultural, and experience has shown that under favorable conditions he quickly becomes ambitious and prosperous.

A BENEFICENT "TRUST."

When Lord GREY came over to Canada to assume the highly important duties and powers of Governor General, he was obliged to abandon temporarily a work of peculiar interest with which his name has been associated in a manner extremely creditable to him, that of President of the Public House Trust. It is not too much to say that in this he demonstrated his possession of qualities as valuable and rare as those demanded by his more conspicuous post. New difficulties undoubtedly await him in Canada, of which he has already had a taste, but his sound judgment, tact, unselfish devotion to duty, and his high standard of public service, shown in the supervision of the Trust, can be relied upon to overcome them. Fortunately, in Lord LYTTON a worthy successor has been found.

The purpose of the Trust—The Public House Central Trust Association is its full title—is to replace as many of the drinking houses of the United Kingdom as possible by houses in which liquor is, indeed, sold, but sold without profit to the manager, and sold in connection with unintoxicating drinks, with food, and associated with attractive and innocent social amusements. This purpose has been pursued in part by buying out houses possessing licenses, in part by establishing new houses where permitted; and this has been done chiefly by private funds, but in some cases with the co-operation of the local authorities. At present there are 170 public houses owned by the Trust or by its associated organizations, and though the rate of progress has naturally diminished as the number of licenses available for purchase has lessened, progress is still steadily making. One source of interest in the work has been developed that is especially encouraging. It has strongly appealed to land owners planning the improvement of their property and desirous to secure as good a type of neighboring residents as possible. In these cases, the money expended in promoting the work of the Trust has been found to be returned amply in the increased value of the real estate in the vicinity of the Trust houses. In other instances it has been found that the popularity of the houses has been so great that the profits from their quite harmless, or relatively harmless, traffic have been sufficient to establish libraries, assembly halls, gymnasiums, and like aids to a decent and intelligent standard of living in their neighborhood.

It is not surprising, though it is sad, that the chief opposition to the work of the Trust, beneficent as it clearly is, comes from the extreme temperance people, the "teetotalers," as they are still called in England, with a curious survival of Yankee slang. These unfortunately can see no good in reducing evil if they cannot wholly abolish it, and they take no account of the tendency, regrettable undoubtedly but inevitable, of poor human nature to do that which is absolutely forbidden simply because it is forbidden. But the work is advancing steadily, and there is now a fair prospect that it will attract official support.

RACING SUICIDE?

The rich stakes and purses of the Brooklyn Jockey Club are as nothing to the hazard the track managers are playing at Gravesend to-day. PETER DE LACY, king of the virtuous and law-enforcing poolroom men, has forced the track authorities into the confitent, though not on that account penitent, attitude of renouncing the $7,500 illicit revenue hitherto exacted from the bookmakers for the privilege of speculating on the races with their patrons. This is manifestly suicidal, or at any rate sacrificial, for the Eastern racing interests, should the public fail to respond in their accustomed numbers to the heightened admission requirements of the situation. The $7,500 must be retrieved in some manner, if not by crooking the public within the racing fold, then by hooking them at the gate. The sportive individual who longs for the shady luxury of a grand stand seat from which to pick the winner may conclude that it is cheaper to join the Stock Exchange and gamble there. The impecunious "piker" may prefer to stay in town with PETER.

The race-track men cannot abandon the policy they have deliberately declared and instituted. It carries with it a confession of the legal untenableness of their former partnership with the bookmakers. The vengeance of the poolroom gentry for the removal of their Western Union privileges last Summer has been taking the form indicated by the litigious DE LACY when he said on Tuesday that warrants were being obtained from a "certain Judge who is favorable and is sitting in Kings County" for the purpose of haling the bookmakers and their accomplices before him. At this statement the accomplices have found reason to quail. Nobody cares what happens to the bookmakers at the hands of their gentle kin in Manhattan, but some personages aspiring to a legal respectability will count the gate receipts to-day with anxious fingers.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Misunderstanding and Denunciation.

To do one thing and then to be called a fiend in human form for doing something quite different is, presumably, the occasional experience of everybody whose daily wont it is to write pieces for a newspaper, but it is an experience that repetition does not make easy to endure, and every time it comes the victim feels an irresistible impulse to make public moan over his wrong. Hence: The other day we had occasion gently to reprehend a clerical correspondent because he appealed to millionaires for money with which to make decently comfortable the declining years of 600 destitute clergymen. Our argument was that such destitution must be caused either by the failure of congregations to pay living salaries or of the clergymen to exercise a sagacious economy, and our conclusion was that the best remedy for the conditions stated was not the "striking" of a millionaire, but the removal of the cause of the trouble by the payment of better salaries or the exercise of more economy. And now the same clerical correspondent, who apparently objected, the dear, sensitive man, to our statement that his decency was marked by some of the truculency shown by sturdy beggars, vehemently attacks us—for what? Listen: The writer of the paragraph, he says, "attempts to defend the trusts and the rich who fail to give as they are able. He spurns the idea of a pension without a gentleman," who does not say by the use in his old age a portion of his $700 a year salary, which is the average of all the clergy in the United States. * * * He has nothing to say of the army and navy, who [sic] on double the salary are regularly pensioned; nothing to say derogatory of the police of New York; nothing of Mr. CARNEGIE'S gift of $5,000,000 to the pension fund of university professors, a much better paid class of men than the clergy or of a dozen other sets of men, none of whom have the expenses of the average clergyman. The latter must live like a gentleman, show hospitality as a Christian, purchase books and keep in touch with the thought of the world, keep up a life insurance for his family, travel to conventions, educate his children, devote his entire time to his clerical duties, and, when he comes to the desert of old age, must have laid up enough to support him and those dependent on him." Now, isn't that really too bad? Of course we denied not one of the facts here presented, made none of the assertions charged against us, and set down no remotest intimation derogatory to poor clergymen. The trouble with our indignant correspondent—apart from his unsound finance—is inability to read plain English with understanding. When he acquires that power he will see that we were after, not the destitute dominies, but the congregations that expect so much and reward it so ill, and that it irritated us when said congregations were helped to unload their responsibilities upon the ever-convenient millionaire.

Lighted on a Happy Description.

We find a very toothsome flavor in a phrase which has been invented by The Richmond (Va.) News Leader for application to the troublesome folk, North and South, who can find no better way to call public attention to themselves than by demonstrating that they still preserve unmitigated the animosities of a war-time now remote—the people who protest, for instance, when surviving representatives of the Union and Confederate armies unite on Memorial Day in decorating the graves of all those who fell in the great conflict. These, according to The News Leader, are "the invisible in war and the invincible in peace," and it would have been a source of great delight to us if we had fallen upon a characterization at once so accurate and so humorous. It is a fact that even during the resort to arms and immediately after it, the men who did the real fighting on both sides had a compelled respect for their adversaries that saved them from hatred and tended toward the speedy re-establishment of friendly relations, and the better and greater the soldiers, the readier were they to let by-gones be by-gones. The lasting bitterness was for the non-combatants, some of whom wouldn't fight for bad reasons best known to themselves, and some of whom, like the women, couldn't for good reasons known to all. These provided the invincibles in peace, and in both ends of the country a few of them still survive. They can do no measurable harm to anybody now, and, as they were as much the inevitable products of their time as were the people with better tempers and manners, they deserve commiseration much more than indignation or even derision.

Forgers on a Pension.

Those who find—and who doesn't?—their daily task occasionally a heavy burden must have had some trouble to refrain from envying the five clever forgers who, according to revelations made in the Tombs Court this week, receive comfortable salaries from the Bankers' Association for doing nothing harder than doing nothing at all. We have our doubts if any such salaries or pensions are really paid, but if they are—well, it is not exactly nice, after all, to live at ease only so long as one does not do the thing for which one has a positive genius, and therefore must be yearning all the time to be about. Yet the five forgers, if that is the correct number, must have their compensations. They enjoy the very highest recognition that can come to members of their profession, for they have the acknowledged fear of rich and powerful enemies; they are living what probably seem to them to be perfectly virtuous and respectable lives, and they have exchanged danger for security at the cost of renouncing only an uncertainty. If there are any such men, there ought to be at least one among them capable of describing his present emotions on paper, of telling us whether he is happy or not. It would make a story surely interesting and probably valuable, and it is to be hoped that it would put an end to the envious first thought which their lot must have inspired in those who find—and who doesn't?—their daily task occasionally a heavy burden.

What a Diplomat Is.

Referring to the recent banquet given Mr. Choate by the bench of the Middle Temple, The London Pall Mall Gazette makes a pretty play with the word "diplomatist," interpreting it as "one with a double duty, and a double responsibility"—to his own country and the country that receives him. The evolution of "diplomatist" from the Greek verb for "to double" is very curious. "Diploma," a doubling, was specialized as a folded paper, and particularly, in Roman times, an official passport or license. Thus "diplomatic science," down to the end of the eighteenth century, meant the science of manuscripts and documents, which explains a modern writer's strange remark that "there is not a shadow of diplomatic doubt thrown over the integrity of the Third Gospel." Dr. Murray's Dictionary assigns the translation to the modern meaning to Leibnitz's "Codex Juris Gentium Diplomaticus," (documentary code of international law,) and the title of a similar French work. "Diplomatic" came to be considered as meaning "international-documentary," and then the "documentary" dropped out.

King's Gift a Forgery.

One of the four pictures presented by the Prince of Wales to the proposed National Gallery for Ireland is reported to be a forgery.

The statement is made on the authority of the Belfast correspondent of Lloyd's Weekly News of London.

It will be remembered that his Royal Highness offered the pictures during his recent visit to Ireland, and it is one of the landscapes, said to be by Corot, which is now declared to be a forgery.

Indignation has been aroused in Glasgow by recent swindles in connection with the sale of pictures. Many spurious works, bearing the initials or signatures of popular dead painters, have been sold at high prices.

Complaint is also made of the "faking" of various articles, and it is rumored that at least one Burns relic, which was sold at a fancy price, was spurious.

Alcohol from Sawdust.

From The London Globe.

Prof. Classen of the Technical High School, Atx-la-Chapelle, has brought out a process of making alcohol from sawdust, of which great things are expected. The cellulose is treated with gaseous sulphuric acid, and glucose formed, which is converted into alcohol by fermentation. A ton of sawdust yields about 50 gallons of crude alcohol, or 25 gallons of absolute alcohol. It is expected, however, that in time 30 gallons or more will be obtained. Taking into account the cost of sawdust and grain, it seems that the new process will supersede the old. The cellulose removed from the sawdust is the only component having a fuel value, and the residual sawdust can be utilised as fuel in the process of manufacture. To this end it can be pressed into the form of briquettes.

FERRYING AUTOMOBILES.

Conditions at the Long Island Ferry Alleged to be Dangerous.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As a passenger on the ferryboat leaving Thirty-fourth Street for Long Island City at 12:40 P. M., on Saturday last, I observed what surely must have been apparent to many of my fellow-passengers. The boat was absolutely packed with humanity, every available footing space inside the railings being occupied. The other part of the boat's cargo consisted of several automobiles, which were closely hemmed in and surrounded by foot passengers.

Granting that the automobiles are all first-class, modern machines, in fair condition, it is even then most decidedly wrong that they should be carried on the same boats with general passengers. The machines are run under their own power, both on and off the boats, and some of the motors are allowed to run during the whole time of the passage across the river.

Many of the machines are leaky and racked, and the operators can often be seen making slight repairs, while at the same time enjoying a few moments' smoke, even though it brings their lighted tobacco, carelessly or otherwise, dangerously near the explosive gases. Besides, the passengers hemmed in and about are smoking and relighting their pipes.

Should that happen, which is so much more than probable, the horrible result would be, without any question of doubt, far beyond the power of imagination.

It is not in order to look to the company operating the ferry for the remedy; it is, of course, better informed regarding these matters than the mere chance passenger whose protest would have little or no weight. Furthermore, one of our recent harbor disasters has proved to how little an extent Directors are liable.

My suggestion is that our Mayor McClellan appoint an investigating committee to look into the matter, or that he himself visit the scene, say, next Saturday, making one or two trips, and if he finds the conditions no worse than I have attempted to draw them, I feel certain that he will at once get after the proper authorities who sometimes sleep too long.

BARGES FOR CANAL SUPPLIES.

The Idea Utilized in Connection with the Old Panama Company.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

So many "new things" have been published about the Panama Canal since we have become the owners of that waterway that I sometimes marvel whether anything has been done there under the former owners.

This morning, in your paper, under the caption "Barges for Canal Supplies," I read that shipping men say that, although no cargoes have ever been sent to Colon in barges, the scheme of doing so is practicable.

The said shipping men are certainly correct in saying that the scheme is practicable, but they are saying nothing new. While I was the agent of the former Panama Canal Company in New York, I sent six common barges, built here, fully loaded with an assorted cargo, to Colon. These barges were towed by an English steamer and arrived safely. This experiment, I believe the first ever tried, had such an effect that subsequently more barges were sent in the same manner. The insurance companies, which charged me 18 per cent. for the first lot, subsequently came down, if I remember right, to 8 per cent. Growing out of this experiment, the large dredges, the largest then, built in Philadelphia for the canal company, were also towed to Colon, and arrived there safely.

Concerning the purchase of machinery, &c., at home for the canal work, it may perhaps be interesting to state that during my incumbency of the position of agent of the canal I persuaded the Paris company to make large purchases in this country, consisting of locomotives, excavators, railway materials, &c., simply because I knew that such were of excellent quality and efficient for the work intended, though these materials were higher in price than could be purchased in Europe.

Permit me to say, also, that the most serious problem that now confronts the Panama enterprise is the question of climate and health. The experience of the French company has been a sad one. The problem is not an easy one, and will be an important factor in the prosecution of the work. It will be seen that climate in Panama, as elsewhere, is no respecter of persons when I state that the Director General of the works of the French company lost his entire family while in Panama.

That we now have good men at the head of the canal is acknowledged, but there are many things yet which will be revealed to them as they go along, but which they cannot anticipate, not having had any experience in the country. The undertaking is immense and will need much attention and care.

CHARLES COLNE.

New York, May 22, 1905.

The Duty of Self-Preservation.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"Self preservation is the first law of nature." The first duty of every man is to provide a subsistence for himself—"by the sweat of his brow"—and for his family. In the face of this law we find many classes of people in our rich country crying aloud for charity. "A Clergyman," in to-day's TIMES, says that "at least 600 of the clergy in the Episcopal Church are on the ragged edge of destitution," and that "it is a shame and disgrace to the Episcopal Church."

Whose shame and disgrace is it that these 600 men have not observed the law? "Think of it," ye people who do think. Teach the law, ye teachers, especially to the young—more good will be accomplished by preserving than by efforts to redeem. Show them the way, ye teachers, and let them take care of themselves.

Treatment of Female Criminals.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The semi-hysterical condition of our people and our newspapers is strikingly shown in the general tendency to palliate the offenses of female criminals. All classes furnish protectors for the woman accused of murder, and demagogues do not hesitate to attack the public prosecutor who is honest enough to do his duty in such cases.

Not only is there a general demand for the exculpation of these women, but they are also fawned upon, flattered, and generally well supported after acquittal by the neurotic public. Nay, numerous hysterical males have the most intense desire to marry them; probably a reversion to the arachnid instinct that renders the male indifferent to the certain death that follows his nuptials with Madame Spider.

How much does this disgusting flattery of criminals and perverts do toward the encouragement of the good, honest woman who alone should be loved and protected by every sane and honest man? C.

A Good Thing to Know.

From London Truth.

Prince Eitel Fritz of Prussia, second son of the Emperor William, is on a visit to the Duchess of Albany at Claremont. Several of the papers announce that the young Prince will be "received" by the King. It is only individuals who are not royal who are "received" by a sovereign; Princes and Princesses "visit" a sovereign. There is an enormous difference between the two expressions in the eyes of Court and diplomatic people.

RUSSIAN INQUISITIVENESS.

Why Ambassador Meyer's Special Messenger Service is Justified.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A telegram from St. Petersburg which appeared in this morning's TIMES informs us that the Russian press is disposed to criticise Ambassador Meyer for establishing a special messenger service to carry official dispatches beyond the Russian frontier. I quote: "The Novosti says the new American Ambassador evidently puts slight faith in the Government's Postal Service."

That your readers may know what excellent reasons Ambassador Meyer has for trying to safeguard his official correspondence, kindly allow me to show, on the authority of Bismarck, that in Russia diplomatic correspondence has always been tampered with by Russian officialdom. Describing some of his experiences in St. Petersburg as the representative of Prussia, he says:

"A gentleman (Russian) who on one of these occasions made a confidential communication to me, turned round as he reached the door and said: 'My first indiscretion necessitates a second. You will, of course, communicate this matter to Berlin. In doing so, do not make use of your cipher, number so-and-so; we have been in possession of that for years, and as matters stand our people would at once conclude that I was the source of information. You must further oblige me by not suddenly giving up the compromised cipher, but using it a few months longer for unimportant telegrams.' At the time I thought, in the tranquillity resulting from this communication, that I might infer the probability of only one of our ciphers being in Russian hands."

Again: "At the time of the war between Austria and France, the Emperor Alexander, in the course of a confidential chat, complained to me of the violent and offensive tone in which Russian politics were criticised in the correspondence between German princes and members of the imperial family. He ended his complaint of his relations by the indignant words: 'What is specially offensive to me in the matter is that my German cousins send their rude remarks through the post in order that they may be sure of coming to my personal knowledge.' There was no malice in the Emperor's admission; he was simply under the impression that it was his right as a monarch to make himself acquainted, even by such means as these, with the correspondence which passed through the Russian Post Office."

Is not the Russian press making itself rather ridiculous? ALVAH E. KNAPP.

MEETING THE BALTIC FLEET.

Rojestvensky's Guns Trained on a British Cruiser.

From The London Mail.

The story of how the British cruiser Sutlej, rigged for battle, met Admiral Rojestvensky's fleet in the China Sea is vividly told in the letter of a British sailor to his parents in England.

The Sutlej was at Hongkong when news came of the Russian warships, and, being ready for sea, she was immediately dispatched south to Singapore. Here is the sailor's narrative of what occurred:

"During most part of the following day the hands were employed in preparing the ship for battle, rigging up splinter nets, and getting up projectiles for every gun.

"At 5:45 on the morning of April 11 I was awakened by the buglers sounding 'Saluting guns' crews to your stations!' Hurriedly dressing, I rushed up to the forecastle, where I found we had sighted a number of ships on the starboard bow. Great excitement prevailed. As they drew near they were made out to be the Russian Pacific squadron, under the command of Admiral Rojestvensky.

"At 6:10 we were abreast the Russian flagship Kniaz Suvaroff. We then hoisted the Russian ensign at the foremast head, and fired a seventeen-gun salute, which, however, was not returned.

"All of a sudden the nearest ship, the Oleg, a three-funneled cruiser, altered her course, and came steaming toward us. When at a distance of about two cables she sheered off and passed under our stern, with the intention apparently of seeing our name. As she approached we could not help noticing that she had every gun trained on us, and also that her forward torpedo tube was open with a torpedo ready to be discharged.

"So that her nationality should not be mistaken, she had her largest ensign flying from the peak. Her sides were covered with coal dust. The fleet did not appear to be in any way prepared for battle, as some of the ships were seen to be coaling, and one was even noticed to be hoisting out her steamboat.

"The fleet, steaming at about six knots, was out of sight by 7:45 A. M. The bands then unrigged the splinter nets, &c., and we proceeded on our way. We reached Singapore at 3:30 on Wednesday."

Latitude in the Pulpit.

From The Philadelphia Public Ledger.

There was an old darky preacher down in Georgia who refused to become ordained, but was content to remain simply an exhorter. This dissent appeared strange to some of his congregation, and one day one of his flock asked him about it.

"Well, it am dis way," he replied, "when you's a real preacher you's gotter have a text and stick right close to it, but if you is only a exhorter you kin branch."

Avoidance.

From The Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"Do you really think I begin to show my years, Ella?"

"Do you want me to answer frankly?"

"Why, yes, of course."

"Then let us change the subject."

THE GARDEN OF PLAY.

Out in the Garden of Childhood gay
Romp three glad youngsters with merry cries,
Startling the birds with their boisterous play,
Lightheart and Laughter and big Brighteyes.
Ever you see them and hear them there,
Morning or evening or blossomy noon,
And oh, but the Garden of Youth is fair,
And oh, but the years of it pass too soon!

Over the Garden arch cloudless skies,
(Ah, but the skies of all Youth are blue!)
Lightheart and Laughter and big Brighteyes
Find in each nook something rare and new.
Cool is the shade of the coaxing trees,
Bidding them hide from the sun at noon,
And oh, but what glorious days are these,
And oh, but the hours of them pass too soon!

Rare is the Garden with fragrant flowers,
(Ah, but the flowers of Youth are fair!)
Garlands they weave of the golden hours,
Sweet with the song of the birds in air.
Splashed all the earth with a rosy light,
Light of the sun at its splendid noon,
And oh, but the sunshine of Youth is bright,
And oh, the light of it dies too soon!

Sweet to mine ears from the Garden gay
Echo their calls and their merry cries,
Startling the birds with their boisterous play,
Lightheart and Laughter and big Brighteyes.
Dips the red sun to its shadowed west,
These are the years of mine afternoon,
And oh, but the years of my youth were best,
And oh, but the joy of them passed too soon!

WILLIAM ZIEGLER DIES; ARCTIC SEARCH GOES ON

Expedition for Fiala's Relief Uninterrupted, Family Says.

HE BEGAN AS PRINTER'S BOY

Son of Pennsylvania Farmer, Studied as He Worked—Made a Fortune in Baking Powder.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., May 24.—William Ziegler died at his Summer home, on Great Island, Darien, Conn., at 6:45 o'clock this morning. The direct cause of death was apoplexy. He never had fully recovered from injuries sustained in a runaway accident last October, and to this was added worry over a serious accident to his adopted son six weeks ago.

Mr. Ziegler suffered a stroke last Sunday, and on Monday night Dr. Avery, the attending physician, gave up hope. The son, who is thirteen years old, will not be able to attend the funeral because of his injuries.

Mr. Ziegler's secretary, Mr. Champ, who is at Tromsoe, Norway, was notified by cable of Mr. Ziegler's death. He is in charge of the relief expedition sent out in search of Anthony Fiala. It was stated positively to-night that he would sail for the arctic regions early in June.

Mr. Ziegler's funeral will be held on Saturday at noon at the residence on Great Island. The Rev. L. M. French, rector of St. Luke's Church, Noroton, will officiate. Entombment in the Ziegler mausoleum, at Woodlawn, will follow. Special cars will be attached to the train leaving New York at 10:04 Saturday morning for the New York friends. A special train will carry the mourners from Noroton to Woodlawn.

William Ziegler, who sent at his own expense three large expeditions to find and plant the American flag at the north pole, devoting a larger sum to the cause of arctic exploration than any other man in the world, began life as a printer's apprentice. At his death, it is estimated, he was worth more than $10,000,000.

Mr. Ziegler was sixty-two years old. He was born in Beaver County, Penn., of German parents. As a child he was taken to Muscatine, Iowa, where his father bought a farm. He was educated in the public schools there and became a printer's apprentice in a newspaper office. He later became a clerk in a drug store and studied telegraphy and chemistry.

In 1870, with J. C. Hoagland and John H. Leal, he organized the Royal Chemical Company, which he developed into the Royal Baking Powder Company. The entire capital stock was $60,000. Ten years later it paid 70 per cent. dividends on 1,600 shares of $100 par value. In 1881 it paid 100 per cent. In 1888, after a long and bitter legal fight with his partners, whom he accused of trying to force him out, Mr. Ziegler sold his interest for $4,000,000. With the proceeds he bought the Price Baking Powder Company of Chicago and the Tartar Chemical Company of Jersey City.

In 1901 Mr. Ziegler became interested in polar research and fitted out his first expedition, consisting of the two ships America and Belgica, which he placed in charge of Evelyn Briggs Baldwin.

"A dash for the pole" was Mr. Ziegler's novel idea. The next Spring Mr. Ziegler sent out his private secretary, William S. Champ, in charge of a relief expedition on the ship Frithjof. Baldwin's differences with his sailing master, Johansen, were followed by his recall. Upon the explorer's arrival in this country it was announced that all relations between him and Ziegler were off.

The third expedition fitted out by Mr. Ziegler, and which is yet in the arctic regions, was sent out in the Summer of 1903 under the command of Anthony Fiala and Capt. Edward Coffin of Edgartown, Mass.

In January last year Mr. Ziegler was indicted for bribery in connection with the baking powder scandal in the Missouri Legislature. Gov. Odell declined to honor the requisition issued by Gov. Dockery, and Ziegler was never tried on the indictment. He declared he could prove an alibi, and that Baldwin had instigated the charge.

Mr. Ziegler at one time owned the sloop yacht Thistle, now in the race for the Kaiser's Cup. On one of his yachting expeditions to the South in April, 1895, he was reported drowned. In three days he turned up. Grief over his reported death, it was said at the time, killed John G. Demorest, his brother-in-law. Mr. Ziegler in 1886 married Mrs. E. M. Gamble, a sister of Mrs. V. Jennings Demorest of this city.

He was a Director of the Irving National Bank, and a member of the following clubs: Union League, Atlantic-Larchmont, New York Yacht, Downtown, Brooklyn, Robins Island, and the Union League of Chicago.

A $55,000,000 BOND ISSUE.

Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railroad Prepares for Improvements.

CHICAGO, May 24.—The Directors of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railroad have decided to make a new issue of bonds amounting to $55,000,000. The proposition will be submitted to the stockholders at a special meeting to be held in Chicago June 29.

Of the proposed bonds $34,620,000 will be used to retire the existing indebtedness in bonds by mortgages to run fifty years at 4 per cent. The remainder of the funds will be used for improvements. A new double-tracked line between Chicago and St. Louis will be part of the improvements.

CANADIAN CLUB DINES.

Rev. Dr. MacArthur Urges Dominion to Remain a Dependency.

Canadian residents of New York City honored the birthday of the late Queen Victoria, or Empire Day, as it now is known, by the annual banquet of the Canadian Club of New York at the Hotel Astor last night. More than 100 Canadians and their guests attended.

Guests of honor were ex-City Chamberlain E. R. L. Gould, ex-Senator Walter C. Burton, the Rev. Dr. Robert S. MacArthur, William B. Ellison, Charles S. Mackenzie, F. F. Mackay, Evelyn Briggs Baldwin, and W. A. Higginbotham. Letters of regret were received from Earl Gray, Governor General of Canada; Sir William Van Horne, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Premier Murray of Nova Scotia, Mayor McClellan, District Attorney Jerome, and Frank S. Black.

The Rev. Dr. MacArthur, in his address, made a plea to Canadians to oppose agitation for the establishment of the Dominion of Canada as an independent Government, urging that Canada remain a dependency of Great Britain for the preservtion of the peace of the world. Ex-City Chamberlain Gould and ex-Senator Burton interested the guests by locking horns on the subject of partisanship in municipal affairs.

Dr. Gould contended that partisanship was mainly responsible for graft in City Government, while ex-Senator Burton contended that the advantage of non-partisanship were not material or lasting. He also defended the Legislature and politicians in general.

Mr. Baldwin spoke to the toast "Canada's Most Northerly Possession, the North Pole," Dr. Neil McPherson, the President of the Club, was in the Chair.

HAMMERED AWAY HIS FAT.

Mallets Helped Townsend Baldwin to Reduce His Weight.

Townsend Burnett Baldwin of the Pennsylvania Railroad, a member of the New York Yacht and other clubs, who formerly was very stout, returned from Europe the other day looking as athletic as a football player. When Deputy Collector John Castree Williams asked Mr. Baldwin how he reduced his weight the railroad man smiled and said:

"I invented the remedy myself and here is the prescription. Every night for months, when the time for all good citizens to be in bed came, I wrapped two or three blankets around me. Then I lay flat on my back. Near by I had two big mallets such as marble cutters use. Taking a mallet in each hand I began to pound myself and kept it up for half an hour or more. Then I removed the blankets and went to sleep. The mallets, not the blankets, did the work. I only used the blankets to lessen the force of the blows. It is a fine remedy, and is just as good for rheumatism as it is for undue fat."

BOER WAR DRESS REHEARSAL.

All the Electric and Night Appliances at To-night's Test.

The final rehearsal of the Boer War Spectacle at Brighton Beach will be held this evening when all the night effects will be tried and the horses familiarized with their parts under electric lights. The large searchlights which illuminate the grounds in the evening are now ready and throw upon the arena a flood of light almost as bright as sunlight.

The training of the horses for the water jump, the thrilling scene depicting De Wet's escape, has been accomplished, and this spectacle, it is promised, will be given with even greater effect than it was at the World's Fair.

GLITTER WITH BOUQUET.

It's a Diamond Necklace, but of Course the Actress Will Send It Back.

As Julia Sanderson was leaving the stage after having finished her rickshaw song in the second act of "Fantana" at the Lyric Theatre last evening, a big bunch of sweetpeas was thrown over the footlights by a young man sitting in the left-hand box nearest the stage. As the bouquet hit the boards, something fell from it—something that glittered. When Miss Sanderson made her re-entrance a moment later a diamond necklace, or what looked like one, encircled her neck. A note had come with it signed by a youthful student at Columbia.

"What shall I do with the necklace?" Miss Sanderson said. "I shall send it back, of course. I do not know the writer, though he has written me similarly before."

She had visited the United States.

300 JUVENILE BANDSMEN GIVE A FEAST OF MUSIC

Exhibition by Boy Players from Charitable Institutions.

HOST OF LISTENERS PLEASED

Youngsters Applaud One Another Liberally at Armory Show—Good Incentive, Mr. Grout Believes.

An interesting concert was given yesterday afternoon in the Twelfth Regiment Armory, on Columbus Avenue. Nine military bands representing as many juvenile charitable institutions took part in it, while among the host of interested listeners were many men prominently connected with the education of unfortunate or wayward children. The concert was given at the suggestion of Controller Grout, who attended, and was arranged by Dr. D. C. Potter, the head of the Charitable Institutions Division of the Department of Finance. It was an exhibition, not a competition, its double purpose being to let those interested in institutions of this kind see with their own eyes what is being done for the children, and to let the members of each of the performing bands hear what the others could do.

The concert was all that Mr. Grout could have expected. The young musicians played well. And the interest with which the boys listened to the band that happened to be playing convinced Mr. Grout and the others that the affair will prove a spur for future efforts. The small performers, a majority of whom are still in knickerbockers, appreciated fine points in the playing and expressed their approval at the end of a number with as much dignity as if they had been members of some crack symphony orchestra.

The bands that took part, their numerical strength, and their leaders, were as follows:

Leake & Watts Orphan House, Yonkers, twenty pieces, Arthur Rosander, bandmaster; the Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum Society of Brooklyn, forty pieces, John Wildner, bandmaster; the Brooklyn Hebrew Orphan Asylum, twenty-five pieces, Hugo Wiegand, bandmaster; St. Joseph's Home of Peekskill, N. Y., twenty-five pieces, M. Thornell, bandmaster; the New York Juvenile Asylum, thirty pieces, Burt J. Moffitt, bandmaster; the Hebrew Sheltering Guardian Society, forty pieces, William H. Rohrer, bandmaster; the Mission of the Immaculate Virgin, thirty-five pieces, W. S. Mygrants, bandmaster; the Hebrew Benevolent and Orphan Asylum Society, forty pieces, Philip Egner, bandmaster; the New York Catholic Protectory, forty pieces, M. Ryan, bandmaster.

Each band performed two numbers of its own selection. Then all the bands joined, 300 pieces in all, and played several National airs under the direction of Prof. John Coughlin, bandmaster of the Twelfth Regiment Band.

The way in which those 300 youngsters obeyed the baton of Prof. Coughlin was a spectacle well worth both the hearing and the seeing. The three organizations that took most of the applause while appearing separately were the bands of the Mission of the Immaculate Virgin, of the Hebrew Benevolent and Orphan Asylum Society, and of the New York Catholic Protectory. In appearance the little musicians from the Mission of the Immaculate Virgin took the prize with their spick and span cadet uniforms in gray and gold.

Among those who attended the concert besides Mr. Grout and Dr. Potter were Mgr. Mooney, Dr. Denis J. McMahon, the Rev. Father John McCormick, William Rhinelander Stewart, Louis Wendel, Robert W. Hibbard, Justice Robert J. Wilkin of the Children's Court of Brooklyn, the Rev. Father Jordan, the Rev. N. M. Fitzpatrick, President Mornay Williams of the New York Juvenile Asylum, and the Rev. Brother Henry.

After the concert the performers were treated to ice cream and cakes by the Controller.

LAWYER MAKES BRYAN ANGRY

Tired of Insinuations, He Says, at Bennett Estate Hearing.

NEW HAVEN, May 24.—William J. Bryan appeared in the Probate Court here to-day at a hearing on the accounts of the estate of Philo S. Bennett, of which Mr. Bryan is administrator. Mr. Bryan submitted to a rapid fire of questions from ex-Judge Henry Stoddard, counsel for Mrs. Grace I. Bennett, the widow, and at times impatience was manifested by both the questioner and the witness. Mr. Bryan had Messrs. Newton and White as counsel.

Attorney White was put on the stand as counsel for the administrator to explain the accounts, but Mr. Bryan interrupted so frequently that Mr. Stoddard suggested that Mr. Bryan wait until he was on the stand before he attempted to explain matters. Mr. Bryan retorted:

"Your Honor, I object to the insinuations thrown out by Judge Stoddard. For eighteen months I have heard these insinuations and I am tired of it. I am willing to testify. I want to testify."

The amount of bills receivable, accounts and notes receivable in the copartnership at the time of Mr. Bennett's death Mr. White gave as $215,270, and on March 1, 1904, seven months later, the face value had increased to $227,855. Mr. Bennett was senior member of the firm of Bennett, Sloan & Co. of New York.

Mr. Bryan then took the stand. When asked the amount collected on notes outstanding, Mr. Bryan stated that the loss on accounts was only $2,500.

Ex-Judge Stoddard asked what the item of $2,500 for Mr. Bryan's own services covered.

"For usual and extraordinary services as executor," replied Mr. Bryan.

He was asked whether it included pay for any trips from Nebraska to New York or New Haven in connection with the bequest of $30,000 for himself and family contained in the sealed letter left by Mr. Bennett. He replied that it did not.

Several physicians were summoned immediately. They said they did not believe his condition was dangerous.

Mr. Welles was sent in a private ambulance to the San Rafael Hotel, at 65 West Forty-fifth Street, where he lives with his daughter. He went down to dinner at the usual hour last night. It was said at his offices and at the hotel that he had not been very well of late. He is well along in years.

Besides being Vice President of the Wabash, Mr. Welles is a Director of the Ohio and Mississippi Railway Company and is a member of several clubs and societies.

The speeches were all informal and the affair was purely of a social nature. The unique feature of the menu was a reproduction of the page of The Tribune of March 7, which announced the appointment of Mr. Reid as Ambassador, and on this page the autographs of the diners were all photo-engraved. The menu also included a photograph of Mr. Reid attested by his own signature.

BROKAW-POILLON SUIT UP.

But the Jury Is Still Incomplete After a Day's Session.

After a jury had been assembled in the Supreme Court yesterday to try the $250,000 suit for breach of promise of marriage brought by Mrs. Katherine Poillon against William Gould Brokaw, John F. McIntyre, counsel for Mr. Brokaw, proceeded to make use of the challenges to which he is entitled, and the second man in the jury box had to step down, so that with eleven men in the jury box the case was adjourned until this morning. These eleven may be challenged to-day.

Mrs. Poillon originally came from Troy, where she was married to Joseph P. Smith at the age of eighteen. Three years ago she obtained a divorce from Smith.

Mr. Brokaw is a member of the New York Yacht Club and other well-known social organizations, the owner of several fast yachts, and blue-ribbon winning horses, and has one of the finest kennels of dogs in the country.

Mrs. Poillon alleges that Mr. Brokaw entertained her lavishly at his shooting lodge and park in South Carolina and his country place on Long Island, and that he promised to marry her about March, 1902. According to her counsel about 234 letters alleged to have been written to her by Mr. Brokaw will be introduced in evidence.

ONLY 2 OUT OF 200 AGAINST SCHOOL COURSE

So-Called Fads and Frills Favored at Hearing.

SPEAKER CALLS FOR MORE

Maxwell Expresses Gratification at Vote of Confidence—No More Hearings—Course to Stay.

The defenders of the so-called "fads and frills" of the course of study now used in all the public schools of this city triumphed at last night's hearing before the Committee on Studies and Text Books of the Board of Education. Only two speakers opposed the "fads," while more than a score defended them. So one-sided was the feeling that the committee decided that no further hearings would be necessary to determine the public's sentiment on the matter. Although no action was taken at last night's hearing, it was said that no extensive changes would be made in the present course. Foreign languages, at any rate, will not be eliminated. Almost every civic organization in the city had a representative present to protest against any such change.

The hearing was attended by about 200 persons. Chairman Frank Harvey Field of the Committee on Elementary Schools presided. Magistrate Wahle was one of the first speakers. He defended the so-called "fads" very stoutly.

"All these things which go to make the fingers nimble, the body healthy, and the brain active, are necessary for the welfare of our children," he said. "Give them what they have to-day, and if possible more."

Joseph Clancy, a member of one of the west side local boards, took exception to Magistrate Wahle's remarks. He said that reform was needed in the first few years of the course, that it was impossible for young children to assimilate all that the syllabus required.

The Chairman of the Local Board of the Twenty-eighth District also attacked the present course. All the other speakers were for it. At the end of the discussion, which lasted for almost three hours, City Superintendent Maxwell made a few remarks expressing his gratification at the stand taken by the majority of those present.

Prominent among those who defended the course were Daniel Beard, Mrs. Hewett of the Public Education Society, ex-Sheriff Ramsen, Albert B. W. Fiarman of the Allied Boards of Trade of Brooklyn, President Schnizel of the Ridgewood Board of Trade, H. F. Lippold of the Arion Society, Elwin S. Piper, and Principals Shields and Jenkins.

AGAINST SHORTER DAY.

Elementary Schools Committee Opposes It—Project Seems Dead.

The report of the Committee on Elementary Schools opposing any shortening of the full school day was laid over by the Board of Education yesterday until the next meeting, which will take place on June 14. As Commissioner Abraham Stern, "the father of the shorter day" and its only active supporter, will sail for Europe before that meeting, it is a foregone conclusion that his project will be defeated.

The Elementary Schools Committee has held public hearings on the subject in all the boroughs, and states in its report that public sentiment is opposed to any change in the present five-hour day. Only three persons of all the hundreds who attended these hearings said they desired a shorter school day for their children.

The committee recommends shorter hours in individual cases, greater facilities for play, and more frequent excursions to neighborhood fields and parks under the direction of teachers in connection with nature study.

BRITONS TOAST ROOSEVELT.

Cheer Mention of Him as a Man Who Is Never Afraid.

At the customary Victoria Day dinner given by the British Schools and Universities Club at Delmonico's last night in commemoration of Queen Victoria's birthday, the toast to President Roosevelt was proposed by the Rev. Dr. Arthur H. Judge in the following terms and drunk with great enthusiasm:

"Here's to the man who is never afraid, [shouting and cheering,] who is not afraid of the trusts, who is not afraid of the unions, who is not afraid of the Senate, and who is not afraid of the wild beasts of the Rocky Mountains; here's to the man whose strong hand is being felt by all the peoples of the earth; here's to the man who has succeeded as few before him to unite this Nation in love and admiration; here's to the man who always knows his own mind, and who will carry it out if he can."

Hardly less marked in its appeal to the audience was the incidental reference made by Secretary John Foord of the American Asiatic Association, while speaking to the toast for "Great Britain's ally in the East," to the German Emperor as "a mischief-making commie voyaguer, from whom the peace of the world to-day has more to fear than from any other factor."

Other speakers were Sir Percy L. Sanderson, the British Consul General; the Rev. Dr. D. Parker Morgan, and Capt. Potter, commander of the liner Etruria.

ROOSEVELT AND EQUITABLE.

Refers Matter to Commerce Department—Whitman Sees Him.

William F. King, former President of the Merchants' Association, received yesterday the reply of President Roosevelt to the letter which Mr. King wrote several days ago asking that the President put on foot an investigation of the Equitable Life Assurance Society and generally of the conditions of the insurance business throughout the United States. Mr. King said he did not feel at liberty to give out more of the letter than a single sentence telling him that the President had referred the case to the Department of Commerce and Labor for determination as to whether the Federal Government has power to investigate life insurance.

Mr. King said:

"In case the Government has no power to investigate this scandal I, myself, will endeavor to raise a fund of not less than $25,000, and will contribute toward it myself $1,000 and have a committee formed to take this matter up in an intelligent manner, forming a thorough organization for agitation."

The activities of Mr. King and the fact that Clarence Whitman, now President of the Merchants' Association, was in Washington yesterday in an effort to persuade the President to interest himself in the Equitable affair strengthened the impression that has prevailed in the financial district that the advent of William Nelson Cromwell as general mediator had much to do with the move to carry the Equitable question to Washington. It was said in well-informed banking circles that an effort was being made by some of the Equitable's Directors to bring the entire insurance world under the light of an investigation for the purpose of demonstrating that the conditions in the Equitable on which criticism is passed exist in other companies, whether organized on a stock or mutual basis.

Superintendent Hendricks of the State Insurance Department had another session of five hours with Gage E. Tarbell yesterday.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Clarence Whitman, President of the Merchants' Association of New York, had a conference with the President on the Equitable matter to-day. Mr. Whitman urged the President to take up the subject with a view either to ordering a Government investigation or to making recommendations to Congress on the subject of insurance legislation.

SYRIAN SUES FOR CHILD.

Detectives at Murray Hill Hotel All Night Trying to Serve Wife.

Charles L. Le Barbier, attorney for John Abd-El-Nour, a Syrian merchant of this city, obtained from Justice Dugro in the Supreme Court yesterday a writ of habeas corpus directing Salma Abd-El-Nour to produce in court Hector Abd-El-Nour, the eight-year-old child of the merchant. In his petition Abd-El-Nour says his wife left him about a week ago, and kidnapped the child. He says she is not its mother.

It was believed that the child had been taken out of the State, but detectives found Mrs. Abd-El-Nour and little Hector at the Murray Hill Hotel. After obtaining the writ subpoena servers made an effort to reach Mrs. Abd-El-Nour, but found their way barred at the hotel by a man she had employed for such an emergency.

The hotel clerks said the child was not there, but the detectives stayed on guard all night to try to serve the writ.

MRS. FLIESS DIED AT SEA.

Importer Hears of Mother's Death When He Reaches Pier.

William M. Fliess, Jr., an importer at 47 Broadway, went to the pier of the Hamburg-American Line yesterday to meet his mother, whose husband, William M. Fliess, is dead, and who was to arrive on the Prinz Adalbert from Genoa. He learned upon the arrival of the steamship that she had died at sea on May 13 of pneumonia.

Mrs. Fliess, who was fifty-nine years old, had taken a trip to Italy in the hope of improving her health. The trip had seemed to be beneficial, and her death was an unexpected blow to her son. The body was taken to the Fleiss residence at 235 West Seventy-fifth Street.

Mrs. Fliess, before her marriage, was Miss Ange Post Leave, a daughter of Major Charles Leave of the British Army. She was born in New York, was educated in England, returning later to this country, where she was married. She was a member of various charitable societies and aided her husband in many of his philanthropic works.

It had been her intention to continue the annual Christmas dinner to newsboys of New York, as a memorial to her husband, who for more than thirty years had been a resident of this city.

CHARLES H. WEBB DEAD.

Mark Twain's First Publisher, and Himself a Clever Parodist.

Charles Henry Webb, who was better known to American readers under his pseudonym, "John Paul," died yesterday after a brief illness at his home, 328 West Fifty-seventh Street. He was born at Rouse's Point, N. Y., on Jan. 24, 1834. As a boy he went to sea. Upon returning to this country he engaged in newspaper work in this city and in California, where in 1864 he founded The Californian, to which Mark Twain and Bret Harte were frequent contributors.

Mr. Webb edited and published the first book by Mark Twain, "The Jumping Frog of Calaveras County and Other Sketches." As a writer he is best known for his happy parodies. One of his first works, "Liffith Lank or Lunacy," was a parody on Charles Reade's "Griffith Gaunt." In 1868 he wrote "St. Twel'mo, or the Cumolforn Cyclopedist of Chattanooga," a travesty on Miss Evans's "St. Elmo." Some of his other works were "The Wickedest Woman in New York," 1869; "John Paul's Book," 1874; "My Vacation," 1875; "Parodies, Prose, and Verse," 1876; "Vagrom Verse," 1889, and "Along Varying Shores," 1901.

He wrote several plays and made many contributions, principally of verses, to magazines. He also invented an adding machine, a cartridge loader, and several other contrivances of that kind. He was a member of the Authors' Club and the Reform Club of this city.

C. E. ROWE ENTRY FAVORITE

Big Event at Gravesend Track Will Inaugurate Experiment of Increased Admission Fees.

The Brooklyn Handicap, first of the great mile and a quarter open races for three-year-olds and upward, and the attraction which for eighteen years has packed the public stands of the Brooklyn Jockey Club's Gravesend course, will be run this afternoon as the feature of the first experimental programme under the new scale of high prices for admission.

Under the old rates, crowds varying between twenty and thirty-five thousand visitors have witnessed the decision of the big event, and the managers of the Gravesend track count confidently on the popularity that the great event attained in the earlier years of its history to give a favorable start to racing under the new plan, which includes one other innovation at the Gravesend course in the free betting ring. It is a foregone conclusion that popular interest in the running of the big race will make the afternoon eventful at the Gravesend course, and that even at $3 for admission to the grand stand and $1 for admission to the field stand, both inclosures will be well filled.

The prospects for the race, in spite of the glamour attached to the Brooklyn Handicap, fall short of the best traditions of the stakes, for the accidents of training and backward Spring together have eliminated many of the best horses engaged, and the field of twelve horses named in the announcement of the entries makes up a list that is hardly representative of one of the great handicaps of the metropolitan turf.

The Brooklyn Handicap, of $20,000 guaranteed, for three-year-olds and upward, sweepstakes of $200 each, half forfeit, or only $15 if declared by Feb. 20, of which $2,500 to the second and $1,500 to the third; closed with forty-five entries, weights announced Feb. 1; one mile and a quarter.

*Coupled as C. E. Rowe's entry. †Coupled as W. B. Jennings's entry.

There are good horses in the lot named to run, however, and but few of the disappointments that the chief of them have caused in earlier races this season the field would be impressive. In the lot named to run are Delhi, the leading winning three-year-old of last season with $76,000 to his credit; First Mason, which beat Delhi in a sensational and fast race last year; Colonial Girl, winner of the $50,000 World's Fair Handicap at St. Louis form Hermis, the Suburban winner; Broomstick, holder of the world's record for a race at a mile and a quarter, and the conqueror of Irish Lad, Waterboy, and other famous horses in the Brighton Handicap; Dainty, a heroine of the handicap division in the East last Fall, and other horses that have figured in great deeds on the turf. But Delhi's poor showing in his single race this season when, after finishing first, he was disqualified in favor of the filly Witch Hazel, First Mason's poor running at Belmont Park, and the in and out performances of Graziallo, Pasadena, Ostrich, and Leonidas leave something to be desired by the public as a gauge of form.

The general expectation is that Delhi will show great improvement over his B[illegible]nt Park race, though it is said, too, t[illegible]e has sulked in his work of late. Colonial Girl is the one horse of the entry list that has raced this Spring and lived up to her known best form, she having won with high weight up at a mile, in addition to having run third in the Metropolitan Handicap in her first effort. Lord of the Vale, Broomstick, Dainty, and Proper all will make their first appearances of the season in the Brooklyn today.

Of work for the race, Lord of the Vale looks to be a thoroughly acceptable substitute for Beldame, after the showing the great filly made in the Metropolitan Handicap, while the horsemen who have watched the preparations for the race are agreed that Dainty, Proper, and Broomstick also are ready to do credit to their training. The forlorn hopes in the contest are Ostrich, Leonidas, Pasadena, and Sir Brillar.

The first actual betting on the result of the big event started only a few days ago, when it had become practically settled as to which of the top weights would run. Delhi then being looked on as the probable favorite. The betting, settled yesterday, however, with a growing tendency to back the Western entries of C. E. Rowe, Colonial Girl and First Mason, and Delhi receded in favor so fast that when the entries were announced there were offers of 5 to 1 against the Keene candidate, while the Rowe entry was installed favorite at 3 to 1.

The twelve horses named in the entry list all were spoken of as sure runners last night, when there was every promise of a fast and good track for to-day's race, though it was said that should there by any chance be a heavy going there would be additions to the race of horses which have trained well forward for the Brooklyn, but which could not be expected to beat the best of to-day's field on a good track.

Except for the greater prices for admission and the fact that the bookmakers who transact business at Gravesend to-day will not pay for the privilege, all will be about as racegoers have been accustomed to find the Brooklyn track for many years. There will be no change ordered by the authorities in the arrangement of the betting ring, and the bettors will make and collect their wagers as usual. There will not even be a variation from the customs of the Metropolitan Turf Association, in spite of the fact that the association has no longer an existence so far as the managers of the race tracks are concerned. The members of the Metropolitan association, from the fact that their solvency is established and that they are known to John Cavanagh, the ring manager, will take places in as great number as they choose, but all other reputable layers will have the same opportunity to transact business.

There have been rumors of intended raids and arrests, to be made on behalf of the poolroom men, who long have been fighting the "Dwyer" race track. No definite plan has been made known by the poolroom men, however, and it is said that even should an effort be made by recourse to the law to stop the betting, the attacks will be directed at the bookmaker's individually and not at the Brooklyn Jockey Club.

WARD DEFEATS WHITMAN.

Playing the aggressive net game, Holcombe Ward, the National lawn tennis champion and leader of the challenging American team for the international cup held by the Englishmen, yesterday defeated Malcolm D. Whitman on the turf courts of the Orange Lawn Tennis Club, at Mountain Station, N. J. Ward's racquet work was fully up to championship form, and the great unbeaten champion, Whitman, forced him to put forth every endeavor to win. It was Ward's match from every point, however, and he took three straight sets by the score of 6—3, 8—6, 6—0.

The competition was the first of the series arranged by the Orange Lawn Tennis Club for the practice of the American team before they start for England.

Only in the second set did Whitman make any sort of a defense against the National champion. Then he held him off by sending his returns perilously near to the side lines of the opposite court. The men brought the score to deuce at 5 all and again at 6 all. Here the steadiness of Ward's racquet work carried him over the dangerous places and won the set at 8—6.

The speed with which the match had been played told on Whitman in the final set and he lost it by a love score.

Play in the class lawn tennis championships at Stevens Institute has provided excellent sport on the turf courts of the St. George's Cricket Club grounds. It is the intention of the committee—Hazeltine, 1906, President; Walker, 1906, referee, and Delafield, 1905; Demarest, 1907, and Stewart, 1908—to begin the regular collegiate championships in both singles and doubles as soon as the class singles are finished.

BOSTON HORSE SHOW AWARDS

Mrs. Grosvenor and Reginald Vanderbilt Get Blue Ribbons.

BOSTON, May 24.—Mrs. J. B. M. Grosvenor of New York, Reginald Vanderbilt, and Eben D. Jordan of Boston were again the leading winners in the open-air horse show on the grounds of the Country Club of Brookline. Mr. Jordan won five blue ribbons during the day, Mrs. Grosvenor got four, and Mr. Vanderbilt three. Reginald Vanderbilt rode Mr. Jordan's roan mare Laodamia in the class for harness horses and secured the blue ribbon for the owner. In the tandem class Mr. Jordan's pair also won handily.

Mr. Vanderbilt won all of the ribbons in the class for gig or Tilbury horses. Mrs. Grosvenor won first with Petroleum in the ladies' saddle class, and her bay gelding Roseberry won the blue in the heavy carriage class, Mr. Vanderbilt's Dr. Selwonk getting second. Julius Eachs of New York won the blue in the class for riding and driving horses. Mrs. Grosvenor's team won first in the four-in-hand class.

COLLEGE BASEBALL GAMES.

HARVARD, 16; WILLIAMS, 1.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 24.—Harvard defeated Williams easily to-day by 16 to 1, the game being called at the end of the sixth inning by agreement. The fielding of both teams was very poor. Westervelt pitched well until the sixth, when he was batted for eight runs. Williams's batsmen were at the mercy of Coburn. Score by innings:

Batteries—Coburn and Stephenson; Westervelt and McCarty.

PENNSYLVANIA. 4; BROWN, 1.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., May 24.—The University of Pennsylvania team defeated Brown University to-day in an interesting game. Both Brady and Tift pitched good ball, but the looseness of the visitors' fielding was responsible for the home team's victory. Score by innings:

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., May 24.—Princeton beat Dartmouth to-day by the score of 5 runs to 1. The "Tigers" played one of the best games of the season, and batted in improved form. The visitors played fairly well, but made some costly errors. Byram allowed only two safe hits, and struck out ten men. Glaze, for Dartmouth, also performed well, holding Princeton to six hits and striking out six men. Score by innings:

FORDHAM, 3; VILLA NOVA, 0.

At Fordham Field yesterday the Fordham University team shut out the strong Villa Nova College nine of Pennsylvania, the score being 3 to 0. McLane, for Fordham, pitched one of the best games of his college career, the Villa Nova men being completely at his mercy. Not one of the visitors reached second base. They got but three scattered hits, two of which were of the scratch order, and only one man got to first base on called balls. The Fordham nine scored their runs in the third inning. Murray got his base on balls and ran home on McLane's hit to left for two bases. The other two runs were the result of errors. Score by innings:

In the sixth inning Sawyer and Van Valkenburgh hit for the circuit, Wilson knocked out a three-bagger, and Mawen hit for two bases, five runs being tallied before the side was retired. Sebring's Home Run and Damaging Errors Cost New York the Game.

The game yesterday at the Polo Grounds was one in which the champions were caught "napping," so far as batting was concerned, and this, combined with costly errors, resulted in the New Yorks' defeat by a score of 4 to 3 in ten innings. The local men were outbatted by nearly two hits to one, but with a proper exhibition in the field the score should have stood 1 to 0 in favor of the visitors.

In the fourth inning Corcoran hit a long fly ball to left field, which Mertes let slip through his hands. Then came a terrific stroke by Sebring to centre field, which did not go beyond the ropes, but the runner easily made the circuit of the bases. Only one man was out at the time, but Barry, the next batsman, was easily retired. Steinfeldt was placed at first on called balls, and was advanced on Kelley's hard hit to Devlin. Schlei, however, ended the inning by forcing his manager out at second.

Harper and one or two more of the Cincinnatians spoiled their good record in the seventh inning, and the New Yorks were enabled to tie the score. Donlin placed his team one run ahead in the eighth inning by getting first on called balls, Browne's sacrifice, McGann's single, and Schlei's failure to hold Steinfeldt's throw at the plate.

The visitors tied the score in the ninth inning after Steinfeldt had made a safe hit, and two men were out. The runner was sacrificed to second, and was advanced on Schlei's out at first. Dahlen had an easy chance to nip Blankenship, who had taken Harper's place at the bat, but Dahlen threw wild to first and Steinfeldt scored. Corcoran opened the tenth inning with a single to right field, and after two strikes had been called on "Cy" Seymour, Witse hit him so hard on the back with a pitched ball that Seymour dropped to the ground. He finally went to first, and the two runners were advanced on Sebring's out at first. Barry then hit safely to centre field, Corcoran scoring, but Seymour was caught at the plate by a good throw of Donlin's to Bowerman. Browne made the first safe hit off Ewing, who had succeeded Harper in the ninth inning, in the last inning for the champions, but after being advanced by McGann's out, Mertes retired the side. BROOKLYN, 3; ST. LOUIS, 1.

The Brooklyns turned the tables on the St. Louis team yesterday at Washington Park, scoring a well-earned victory by 3 to 1. Scanlon pitched with excellent judgment, and he was well supported in the field. But for Malay's poor judgment of Smoot's drive in the ninth inning a home run could have been checked and the visitors shut out. The score:

BOSTON, May 24.—Pittsburg hit the ball at will to-day and easily defeated Boston—11 to 1. Volz was batted out of the box in the second inning, and Harley, who succeeded him, fared little better. Aside from the batting of the Pittsburgers, the game was devoid of interest. The score:

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

Greater New York's Pitchers Hit Freely and Detroit Wins by 12 to 6.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, Mich., May 24.—Twenty-four players tok part in an old time batting contest here this afternoon, in which Detroit was the winner by 12 to 6, through superior batting. New York used four pitchers and two catchers, one of the latter, Kleinow, being injured. Detroit used two pitchers and two catchers. Kitson was driven to cover by New York after a combination of hits, costly errors, and poor throwing by the catcher, which netted New York six runs. Detroit first knocked Powell out of the box, then got Puttmann up in the air so that Griffith took him out, and gave Hogg such a trouncing that he kicked himself out of the game. Griffith pitched to but one batter.

Powell was put away in the first inning, three hits, two of them doubles, following two bases on balls, costing four runs. When Detroit went to the bat in the sixth inning New York had taken a lead of two runs. Griffith took Puttmann out after one man had hit and another had got first on called balls, with no one out. The shift was costly, as in three consecutive innings, Detroit found Hogg for eight hits, besides having three bases on balls, the whole netting eight runs.

Fults made third in the fourth inning on a base on balls, two steals, and scored on Anderson's single. Hits by Dougherty, Keeler, and Fults, with O'Leary's wild throw gave three in the fifth. Three hits and two errors netted a pair in the sixth. Then Mullin went in and it was all over. The score:

TANYA WON BELMONT BY A NECK FROM BLANDY

Whitney Filly Was Ridden Out to Capture $20,000 Prize.

VENDOR TOOK THE ECLIPSE

Mackey Dwyer Beat Arian a Head for Big Steeplechase—Belmont Park Races Ended.

With a programme of big stakes, including the Belmont, worth a gross sum of $20,210; the Eclipse, worth $9,300, and the Grand National Steeplechase, worth $6,900, the eventful first inaugural meeting on the immense new Belmont Park course came to a close yesterday, after eighteen days of racing.

The Belmont stood out as the feature of the programme, chiefly on account of its great value. The race was one worthy of the stakes, the oldest turf fixture of the East, for it brought about a hotly fought finish between Tanya, post favorite, and Blandy, winner of the Withers, Tanya, which made about all the running, living only just long enough to get home first by a short neck, with all the others of the field of seven beaten off. The only other filly that has won a Belmont Stakes being Ruthless, which captured the event on its first running at Jerome Park in 1867. Tanya, rated the champion of her age and sex last season, was regarded with some doubt by the betting general public when she was installed favorite, as in her only earlier race this season she was beaten badly by Pasadena and Voladay, but the horsemen and the Harry Payne Whitney stable had every confidence in the filly to take up her weight and go the mile and a quarter course, and she remained first choice through the betting at odds of 2 to 1, while Wild Mint, from the Keene stable, was backed down to the place of second choice, Blandy and Hot Shot being the next in favor.

The race was run over the Belmont course, the start being made in the middle of the back stretch of the training track, and the horses, after making one turn on that course, coming on the main track and finishing down the regular stretch. Merry Lark broke first, but was steadied at once, permitting Wild Mint to rush away to the lead, followed by Tanya, these two drawing further and further away from the others of the field, in the run around the first bend, Wild Mint then leading, with Tanya lapped on him. For nearly six furlongs the two in front were together. Tanya then passing Wild Mint, and as they left the training track and went on the main course, slipping away from him and taking a commanding lead. Wild Mint was hard ridden in the effort to keep up with her, but at the bend into the stretch for the run home he began to swerve and fell back beaten, Tanya in the meantime being half a dozen lengths clear of Hot Shot, Blandy, and Merry Lark, which were the next three, all then fighting after the leader. On the stretch, Hildebrand, who rode Tanya, eased her up for a few strides, seemingly confident that she had the race won, but the field whipped on after her, and closed so fast at the end that Hildebrand was compelled to urge the filly out, Tanya, tiring at the end, lasting in the lead just long enough to win by a neck from Blandy, which passed the winning post on the extreme outside, after having closed an immense gap. Hot Shot and Merry Lark fought out for third place, which Hot Shot took by a half length.

The Grand National Steeplechase had a field of eight runners, with Hylas the post favorite at a price only a shade shorter than the betting against Arian and Flying Buttress. The race made a splendid spectacle as the eight horses swept through the field in the double circuit of the course, Gascar leading for the first round of the course, after which Dromedary went up to him, Dromedary in turn surrendering the lead to Arian on the back stretch, where Hylas, Flying Buttress, and Mackey Dwyer closed up and joined the leaders. Gascar and Ogress fell in the last part of the final round of the field, while Arian and Hylas fought neck and neck to the last jump, followed closely by Flying Buttress and Mackey Dwyer. Arian was first over the final obstacle, Mackey Dwyer then going after him, and in a whipping finish wearing him down in the run on the flat, Mackey Dwyer getting up in the very last jump to win by a head.

For the Eclipse Stakes there were but five runners, the Whitney Stable entry, Battleaxe and Pegasus, starting favorite at odds on. Battleaxe and Vendor were the first two through the early stage of the race, but Battleaxe was disposed to swerve when the pace grew warm, and while Hildebrand tried to keep him steady Vendor drew out in the lead, and, holding command for the remainder of the distance, won hustled out by hips before Jacobite, which beat Battleaxe a neck for second money. Henry S. Redmond, owner of the Ailsa, competing in the race across the ocean for the Kaiser's Cup, sailed yesterday with Mrs. Redmond and his infant son on the Baltic for Liverpool for the purpose of hurrying to the Lizard to witness the finish of the race. He will join his yacht there, or, if she has already finished, at Southampton, and take her to Kiel to compete in the race from Dover to Helgoland, which will follow the Kiel regatta. It is also possible he will sail her in some of the events of the Kiel regatta.

PETITIONS IN BANKRUPTCY.

WILLIAM W. CULLIMORE.—William W. Cullimore, bartender at 342 Bleecker Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $14,170 and no assets. The debts were contracted from 1899 to 1904, and among the creditors are the Henry Elias Brewing Company, $7,500, and Hugh McElearney, $4,600. Mr. Cullimore went into the liquor business in 1900. He had previously been in the pickle business, in which he lost $6,000.

MICHAEL ROVATZOS. — Michael, also known as Charles, Rovatzos of 44 West Twenty-ninth Street, formerly a florist, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities of $5,368, to fifty-four creditors, and no assets. Part of the debts was contracted as a partner in the firm of Rovatzos & Moltz in 1902 and 1903. Among the creditors are J. J. Rayner, $1,076; Demetrius Proustzos, $450; Thomas Young, $783, and R. Dreyer, $315.

SIGMUND WEITZENBLUM.—Judg Holt of the United States District Court has refused a discharge from bankruptcy to Sigmund Weitzenblum, wholesale dealer in jewelry and watches of 90 Nassau Street, against whom a petition in bankruptcy was filed on Nov. 6, 1903, by Harry L. Herzog of the Solidarity Watch Case Company. The Judge confirmed the report of Peter B. Olney, referee in bankruptcy, that the bankrupt had failed to account for $1,915 and assets of $28,402, which statement was only seen by the officials of the bank, was not exhibited to outsiders, and the objecting creditor did not sell the goods on the strength of the statement. The referee based his decision on the section of the Bankruptcy act which provides that a discharge be granted unless the bankrupt "obtained property on credit from any person upon a materially false statement in writing made to such person for the purpose of obtaining such property on credit." This is the first time such a broad construction has been made of the section.

SEABOARD AIR LINE RAILWAY

To the Holders of Voting Trust Certificates for Preferred and Common Stock

On the 12th of January, 1905, the Committee filed with the Morton Trust Company, as Depositary, a plan for consolidating the constituent companies of the Seaboard Air Line Railway. The Committee firmly believed that the plan proposed was so fair and just that it would command the assent of practically every certificate holder, and if consummated, that it would assure to the holders of all securities of the Company great benefit.

The provisions of the plan were approved and accepted by over 521,000 shares out of the outstanding 609,000 shares of the capital stock of the Company.

Of the non-assenting shares, approximately 70,000 were represented by a Committee in Baltimore, with whom your Committee has been in repeated communication, and this Committee has declined to assent to the plan. If, with this amount of shares not assenting, the Committee proceeded with the consolidation, the consolidated company would be obliged to acquire the outstanding stock through legal proceedings. Such acquisition would involve lengthy litigation and delay and uncertainty as to the amount which the consolidated company would be obliged to pay, which would also mean the use of money for the acquisition of minority stock which the assenting stockholders would have contributed not to this purpose, but for the pressing and immediate needs of the Company and future improvements.

Under these circumstances, the Committee has deemed it wise to modify the plan, but in such a manner that the benefits of the original plan may still be obtained for the depositing shareholders, and hereby gives notice that, pursuant to the powers conferred upon it by the plan and agreement of January 12, 1905, it has made and adopted a change, or modification, or new plan, and has this day filed with the Morton Trust Company, Depositary, a copy of the same.

This modified plan has already been accepted in writing by depositors of more than a majority of the capital stock of the Company, and this fact assures the plan being carried into effect.

The modification consists practically in the substitution of a holding company for the consolidated company, with the same authorized capital, the same classes of stock, and the same basis of exchange, as provided for in the original plan.

The payments to be made by such of the depositors as shall elect to subscribe to the First Preferred Stock of the new company will be the same in amount as provided by the original plan.

The proceeds of such sale of the new First Preferred Stock, it is intended, shall be advanced to the Seaboard Air Line Railway to provide for the immediate pressing needs of the railway and for improvements. For the moneys so advanced, the new company will receive notes of the Railway or mortgage bonds, to which all the stockholders of the Railway will also have the right to subscribe.

If practically all the stockholders of the Railway assent to the modified plan, it is contemplated that the original plan of consolidation may then be carried out through the agency of the holding company.

The charter of the new company will, among other things, provide that neither the Directors nor stockholders shall have power to pledge or voluntarily encumber the stock of the Seaboard Air Line Railway acquired by the new company, and that the total indebtedness for which the new company may at any one time be obligated shall not exceed $500,000.

This notice is not intended as a full or precise statement or outline of the provisions of the modified plan, but as a mere notice that such a plan has been filed.

All stockholders are urged to obtain a copy of the modified plan and will be held bound by the provisions thereof.

All depositors who shall not surrender their certificates of deposit and withdraw their stock on or before June 24, 1905, said date being two weeks after final publication in accordance with the provisions of the plan and agreement of January 12, 1905, of the notice of the fact of the filing with the Depositary of the change or modification or new plan, shall be conclusively deemed to have assented thereto.

PREFERRED CAPITAL STOCK DIVIDEND NO. 25.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors held this day, it was resolved that a dividend of 1 1-6 Per Cent. on the Preferred Capital Stock of the Company be declared, and paid on Saturday, July 1st, 1905, at the office of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, No. 28 Nassau Street, New York City, to stockholders of record at the close of business on June 8th, 1905. Transfer books will close on Thursday, June 8th, 1905, and reopen on Monday, July 3d, 1905.

S. S. DE LANO, Treas.

D. A. BIXBY, Secretary.

AMERICAN CAR & FOUNDRY CO.
New York, May 20, 1905.

TO THE STOCKHOLDERS:

At a meeting of the Board of Directors held on May 9th, 1905, a dividend for two months at the rate of Seven Per Cent. per annum, (being One and One-sixth Per Cent.) was declared on the Preferred Capital Stock, and made payable July 1st, 1905. The transfer books will close June 8, 1905, and reopen July 3d, 1905.

This action was taken to bring the quarterly dividend periods and reports in conformity to the fiscal year and annual statement. On account of the difficulty in taking inventory during a Winter month, the fiscal year was changed to end April 30 instead of February 28, the Company having begun operations March 1st, 1899, and the first fiscal period, therefore, was fourteen months. This change made it necessary to include the earnings for March and April in the annual statement and those for May in the subsequent quarterly report. As these three months have heretofore covered one dividend period, this separation of the earnings caused some misunderstanding, which will be avoided hereafter, as the quarterly report will then cover the same period as the dividend.

The first dividend on the Preferred Capital Stock was paid in July 1899, and quarterly dividends have been paid on same since that time during each subsequent November, February, May, and August. After July 1st, 1905, however, the regular quarterly dividend on the Preferred Capital Stock of One and Three-quarters Per Cent., (being at the rate of Seven Per Cent. per annum,) when declared, will be paid on the first day of October, January, April, and July, of each year, and on the same day a report of the result of the operations of the Company for the dividend period will be mailed to the stockholders.

It will be apparent that the dividend of One and One-sixth Per Cent., payable July 1st, 1905, is declared solely to make the dividend periods and the quarterly reports conform to the fiscal year by paying two months' dividend before the regular time, and does not in any way affect the dividend rate to be paid on the Preferred Stock.

Respectfully submitted,
F. H. EATON, President.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, May 24.—The local money market to-day did not change. The usual table of rates, &c., follows: Call loans, 3@3½ per cent.; time loans, collateral, 3@4 per cent.; time loans, mercantile paper, 3¾@4 per cent.; Clearing House loans, 2½ per cent.; New York funds at par; clearings, $23,966,278; balances, $1,-441,894; Sub-Treasury debit, $21,402.

Copper shares were rather slow in following the rally in the New York market. The buying power here was limited, and in places there was apparently plenty of stock for sale. At times the traders tried to bring in a following by bidding for stocks. Their efforts were not very successful in the early day, but during the last half hour more buying orders appeared, and stocks had a sharp rally, closing strong, with a much better tone. The complete list of transactions follows:

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 24.—Interest again centred to-day in United Gas Improvement stock. Notwithstanding the appearance of good buying, the stock broke badly from 110¾ to 108¼, the lowest price being recorded in the final transactions. Philadelphia Electric was sympathetically affected, but receded only a fractional amount. It was believed that a good deal of the latter stock was sold to protect gas holdings. Reading and United States Steel common were very active, local commission houses being persistent buyers of both stocks. American Railways improved ¾, Cambria Iron ½, Lehigh Valley, which was bought for New York, 2, and Philadelphia Company ½. Sentiment showed some betterment, but it was not generally believed the rally would hold. The total sales were 82,835 shares; bonds, $117,100, as follows:

Stocks Strong; Call Money Easy, 2¼@2½ Per Cent.

The Market Rallies Sharply and Generally, with a Multiplicity of Familiar Reports.

The magicians waved their wands and everything was different in Wall Street yesterday. That is to say, almost everything. Of course the crops are not yet guaranteed. Naturally the iron trade is still dependent upon the crops, as before. The Eastern war is still in progress, and panic in Paris remains as possible as ever. But these things and their like were pushed into the background and the coryphees of the rear rank came to the front. No disrespect is intended to anybody. The point simply is that conditions never were as bad as some depicted, and perhaps may not now be as altogether roseate as enthusiasts assume. Nevertheless it is necessary to assume an altogether hospitable attitude toward ideas previously presented here when they were less popular. They were none the less true then, but the psychological moment for their exploitation had not arrived. Now it must be at hand, for representatives of the opposing interests agree in letting it be known that all is promising for peace and profit in the Northwest. On the one hand there is the authoritative assurance that a temporary misunderstanding is succeeded by business amity. On the other hand is the assurance that this mental attitude has been crystallized in acts. The argument runs like this: "Our roads are now earning 18 per cent. Shall we conserve these assets for our shareholders, or shall we enter into a competition of rates and construction which shall benefit nobody, not even those who receive lower rates for a time?" The intimation is that the former course was resolded upon; the situation is good enough to permit the absence for a prolonged time of the best fighter of them all, but not the one with the most power. In addition to these authentic facts was the report that the Inter-State Commerce Commissioners and the representatives of the railways have found a way to compose their differences, and that legislation agreeable to both may be expected. It is all sufficiently credible and wholly desirable.

There always is another side. The strength of sterling and cotton are worth attention. Gold exports and a deficiency of the staple would not be stimulating. The rampant strength in the corn market is too exaggerated not to be speculative. It had no relation to the frosts reported in the Eastern States, which serve as a reminder of what would happen if they chanced in the West. Under these influences brisk buying early upon London's cue was checked by realizations, and resumed later with increasing activity and strength from noon until the close, with much momentum apparent. Some further improvement would not be surprising, but the situation has elements which will check any excessive tendency for the market to become overbought.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Northwest Clearing Up Well Timed—Rally in Market Was Due.

The turn in the market yesterday was bitterly fought by the floor trading element. Lacking the information which the large houses were supplied with, they thought the advance merely a rally after the long continued decline, which had lasted without a break for six days. These traders sold stocks on every advance until the slight reaction set in about the noon hour. Then they took profits, and when the market continued to go up they sold some more. But when prices refused to give way but kept steadily creeping upward, the room traders tried to cover, and thus helped the advancing movement still more, so that at the close nearly every trader's account showed a loss for the day.

Rally Due, Anyway.

The official announcement of a settlement of the Northwestern situation was well timed. The decline had lasted so long that a rally was due, even if only the technical position of the market was considered. One shrewd trader who had been heavily short reached the conclusion that a rise was coming on Tuesday, and he covered his entire line without difficulty. There are, however, always traders who overstay a bear market, just as there are always bulls who in their endeavor to squeeze out the last eighth do not sell out early enough. Many of these will, it is expected, cover to-day. This is one of the reasons why most brokers yesterday predicted a further advance.

***

MacDonald In Early.

C. B. MacDonald at the very opening was a heavy buyer of stocks. He bid for large lots at prices in some instances a whole point above the market. Traders who thought this merely a blind sold him the stock without hesitation, but when he took all there was and bid for more, and when other important brokers did likewise, the smaller fry became scared and their covering helped to run prices up. MacDonald is said to have cleared a nice pile on the rise.

***

London Bought Calls.

The opening was influenced by the advance reported from London, where American shares ruled firm. According to arbitrageurs, there have been heavy purchases of calls in London in the last two days in anticipation of a rise here. As London calls are very much nearer the market and can be obtained in much larger quantities than calls on American stocks in this market, a demand for calls in London on American stocks is generally a pretty good sign that some one well informed is buying them in expectation of an advance.

***

Cotton and Corn.

The most unfavorable development of the day was the rise in the commodity markets, especially in corn and cotton. Theodore H. Price came out with a declaration that the cotton crop would fall away behind that of last year and that it would be barely 9,000,000 bales. This he attributed to the poor condition and the reduction in acreage. Roswell Miller, Chairman of the board of the St. Paul, yesterday returned from a trip through the West, and said that the outlook for crops was very good. Corn had been slightly damaged and had to be replanted in some sections, but the crop in general would not suffer. The Spring wheat crop he said was in very good shape. He expressed himself as highly satisfied with the conditions and the general outlook.

THE OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Market Recovers Sharply from Recent Depression.

Northern Securities Leads Upward Movement with Gain of 7½ Points —Increased Activity in Minor Issues.

A majority of the issues traded in on the curb yesterday rose as rapidly as they had declined two days ago. The change in the attitude of traders was reflected in Northern Securities to a larger extent than in any other issue by a gain of more than 7 points in that stock. United Copper, the Can stocks, Mercantile Marine and American Writing Paper preferred were some of the other issues that made gains amounting to about a point. Activity developed also in some of the minor issues, which recently had been dull and weak, and some of these rose substanthially. The change in the tone of the general market was naturally reflected in the outside stocks, in which traders usually shape their course by the movements on the Stock Exchange. It was worthy of note that some of the gains were made on very much smaller transactions than had occurred during the previous decline. American Writing Paper preferred showed a net advance of 1¼ points on the purchase of only 200 shares and Marine common, which sold a couple of days ago at 10, was bid up to 11 without calling out any stock.

***

NORTHERN SECURITIES opened up 1¼ points and rose almost constantly until the very close, when the price reached 165. The net gain amounted to 7½ points. Meanwhile the stubs after declining early in the day recovered their loss and closed unchanged. Doubtless the course of Northern Securities was influenced by the news of the removal of all friction in the Northwestern Railroad situation. The recent decline in the stubs as well as their heaviness yesterday was considered the result of more or less constant selling of the stubs by those who have been in a fair position to judge of their value and who apparently have been attracted by the price commanded by the stubs in the open market.

***

GREENE CONSOLIDATED GOLD was among the minor stocks that showed activity yesterday. It rose from 5⅞ to 6¾ and retained about half of this advance.

Transatlantic Mail Improvement.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Second Assistant Postmaster General Shallenberger has just completed a reciprocal arrangement with the British postal authorities by which each country is to ship mail direct in separate bags to about twenty-five cities in the other. This will be done to lighten the work of the postal clerks operating the sea routes. Heretofore only three or four of the largest cities in Great Britain and the United States have had mail sorted direct to them from the other country.

seems as far in the future as a fair and just system of taxation in New York City. Why not avoid the excessive cost of living in the City and buy a home in the Country; you can reach your office almost as quickly, you will have sewers, macadamized roads, sidewalks, street lights and fire protection for nothing, and your bills for water, light, and taxes will be very reasonable. You will find all these advantages at Larchmont Park, and in addition you will be living in the most attractive village in the neighborhood of New York, and your home will not only be a home, but a source of financial profit as well, owing not alone to the natural increase in values, but as well to the large amounts of money now being spent by the New Haven Railroad. I want to explain all this more fully to you, and will do so in answer to your inquiry.

VENTNOR BY THE SEA

ADJOINING

ATLANTIC CITY

ON THE SAME ISLAND AND SAME BEACH

Not a barren tract, but already built up, flourishing under a prosperous city government, with well conducted Hotels.

LOTS $150.00

Each and upwards ON INSTALLMENTS $10 down, $1.50 per week.

The entire investment world has often marveled over the wonderful fortunes which have been amassed by buying Atlantic City real estate. The same opportunity is now being offered in Ventnor, immediately adjoining Atlantic City, on same beach, on same island, the regular terminus of the Atlantic City Trolley Line, with a five-cent fare from any part of Atlantic City through to Ventnor. Never before has this tract been placed on the market; it has been held by a large corporation who were independent as to its disposal.

When one considers that lots there only 1,000 feet from the ocean can be purchased for $150 per lot, and then compare it with lots on the same beach, not half a mile away, which are worth $25,000, the tremendous opportunity for profit is most plausible. We pay railroad fare within a radius of 1,000 miles to all who purchase. SCHOOLBOY IS KILLED BY SIGHT-SEEING AUTO

His Playmates See James Jordan's Life Crushed Out.

NO PASSENGERS ON BOARD

Police Commissioner Expects to Regulate Running of Heavy Cars When Traffic Bill Is Signed.

As a crowd of children were playing in the street just before beginning their studies in St. Vincent Ferrer's Parochial School, 155 East Sixty-fifth Street, yesterday, a large sight-seeing automobile passed through the block from Third Avenue and ran over James Jordan, eleven years old, of 322 East Sixtieth Street, killing him instantly in the sight of his playmates.

The machine, which carried no passengers, was going from a repair shop further east in the same street. It was traveling slowly, and witnesses agree that the boy ran directly before it while chasing a ball from the sidewalk.

Edward Keins of 810 Willow Avenue, Hoboken, the chauffeur, shouted and the boy stopped directly before a wheel, which passed over him.

Policeman Gallagher helped Keins to extricate the body and to carry it into a drug store. He then arrested Keins, who was released in $1,000 bail by Coroner Scholer, on a charge of homicide.

Jordan is the second schoolboy killed in Yorkville by an automobile within a month.

Commenting later upon the accident, Police Commissioner McAdoo said that representatives of the companies operating sight-seeing automobiles had asked him for a conference to discuss an ordinance which should govern these vehicles. The Commissioner said that he expected when the Governor signs his traffic bill that he will be more fully empowered to deal properly with the sight-seeing automobiles.

THREE CHAUFFEURS HELD.

One Says Employer Did Not Know Car Was Out.

Alden Markham, aged 32, of Union Hill, N. J., chauffeur for William Armstrong, who lives in Union Hill, was held by Magistrate Mayo in the Morrisania Court in $200 bail for trial yesterday on a charge of fast driving in an automobile on the New Rochelle Road in Pelham Bay Park. Markham said his employer was not aware that the automobile was in use at the time.

William H. Turner, aged 30, of 309 West Fifty-fourth Street, negro, chauffeur for J. Egmont Schermerhorn of 25 East Seventy-ninth Street, was also held for trial by Magistrate Mayo, charged with driving an automobile at a rate of twenty-three miles an hour on Jerome Avenue.

Henry Rogers of 228 West Thirty-seventh Street, who said he is chauffeur for T. Suffern Taller of 150 Madison Avenue, was held in $500 bail in the West Side Court yesterday by Magistrate Wahle on a charge of speeding an automobile on Seventh Avenue.

BANKER IS ARRESTED.

On a charge of exceeding the speed limit with the automobile he was driving, Henry P. Davison of Englewood, N. J., Vice President of the First National Bank of that place, was arrested late yesterday afternoon and taken to the West Forty-seventh Street Station. In the automobile were two women, who refused to give their names.

Bicycle Policeman Bullman charged that the machine was going at a rate of twenty miles an hour in Seventh Avenue, between Forty-seventh and Fifty-seventh Streets.

The banker said that the arrest was an outrage, and declared that he would fight the case to a finish. He gave $100 cash bail.

BETTER UNDER DEVERY, REASSERTS MR. PHILBIN

Says, However, That He Referred Only to Police Discipline.

KNOWS NOTHING OF GRAFT

Mr. McAdoo Promises Prompt Action If Instances of Extortion Can Be Pointed Out.

Eugene A. Philbin, who refused to give to the Committee of Nine his views on police reform, and who told Cornell students on Tuesday night that the citizens of New York were much better protected against crime under Chief Devery than now, was surprised yesterday to find what a commotion his remarks had caused.

Mr. Philbin explained that he had not told the Cornell students that graft was now being collected by the New York police at the rate of $1,000,000 a year.

"I spoke only of the time when I was District Attorney," he said. "The figures I gave as to the amount of graft collected are based on facts that I learned while engaged in the prosecution of Diamond, Bissert, and others. What conditions are now, so far as the collection of graft is concerned, I do not know.

"Really, I did not mean to stir up the police situation at all, and did not think my remarks would get back to New York. When I refused to appear before the Committee of Nine it was because I did not wish to make it any harder for Mr. McAdoo. I believe he is honest, and wishes to bring the police up to a high state of efficiency.

"I believe it is true, however, that the police under Devery were in much better condition to provide protection for the public. It is possible to have discipline only by holding the Captains responsible for their precincts, and giving them full control over their men. Devery at heart was a policeman, and took a pride in the organization of the force. He put the responsibility on the Captains, and, except from the standpoint of graft, the results were excellent.

"The prosecution of several Captains and the enforced retirement of several others tended to break down the organization. Patrolmen were then encouraged to go to Headquarters, and men were sent from Headquarters to look after them. Latterly Mr. McAdoo has, by his raids over the heads of the precinct commanders, aided the tendency among the men of the force to disregard the discipline of the precinct. The result is regrettable demoralization. The remedy lies in the selection for head of the force of an honest man, who would have the same police instinct as Devery, and who would hold the Captains to account."

"Where is he to be found?" Mr. Philbin was asked. He shrugged his shoulders in reply.

Mr. Philbin's speech at Cornell brought out from District Attorney Jerome a sharp rejoinder.

"He's a little late to comment on these things now," Mr. Jerome said. "He has not been in public life for three or four years, and doesn't know. There is practically no gambling in this city to-day. Of course there are a few 'pikers,' some handbooks, and a few with a bag who put up in the hotel corridors. But there is no fixed rate of protection, for the simple reason that they cannot be given protection. They do not pay large money, as was the case some years ago."

Under the impression that Mr. Philbin had charged that extortion was still being done on a huge scale, Mr. McAdoo issued a statement late in the afternoon, in which he expressed his desire to hunt out any grafters. He invited Mr. Philbin to bring forward any evidence on that subject, and continued:

"He knows me well enough to feel assured that I will act with promptness and vigor; that I will probe the matter to the bottom, hurt whom it may, and that, if the evidence justifies it, I will put the matter before the Grand Jury at once, and in doing so, I feel assured I will have the hearty co-operation of the District Attorney of the City of New York."

Of Mr. Philbin's criticism, Mr. McAdoo said:

"As to the question of discipline, that is one which the public must settle for itself, and Mr. Philbin's assertion has just as much value as the assertion of any other observant citizen. As to whether my methods are disorganizing the police is as capable of discussion as any other matter upon which two opinions are possible."

The Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst sailed yesterday on the Baltic for his vacation. On the pier he said:

"In the race for rottenness, I think Philadelphia will win, with New York a close second. Tainted money is in the very air."

MR. JESUP CANNOT SERVE.

Health Will Not Permit Him to Aid Mr. McAdoo.

Commissioner McAdoo received a letter yesterday from Morris K. Jesup, one of the five men he invited to form an advisory board to assist him in filling the many vacancies now existing in the executive posts. Mr. Jesup said he could not serve, as he was still ill from the effects of a recent operation and would spend most of his time this Summer in his country home.

Mr. McAdoo has heard nothing from St. Clair McKelway, and Austen G. Fox, another invited, has declined to accept. This makes two vacancies on the board, and possibly three. Mr. McAdoo says he will get other citizens to serve.

In consideration of the trying demands upon the police force in the last year, especially in the Presidential campaign last Fall and the traffic strike this Spring, Commissioner McAdoo has decided to give every man below the rank of Captain two days' extra vacation.

POLICEMAN'S WIFE, SHE SAID.

Also ex-Police Captain's Daughter, Is Alleged Shoplifter's Story.

A woman who said she was Mary Warren of 56 West One Hundred and Twentieth Street, a daughter of a retired Police Captain and the wife of a policeman, was arrested late yesterday afternoon on a charge of shoplifting in a Sixth Avenue department store and held in the Tenderloin Station. The woman was handsomely dressed and wore a diamond pin, which the police experts said was worth at least $200.

It is charged that the woman took a feather valued at $4.25 from a counter and placed it under her coat. Store Detective Kash reported that the woman told him that she was a daughter of a retired Police Captain. She also asserted that she was the wife of a policeman who was dismissed from the force on charges brought by Inspector Walsh, but who some months later was reinstated and is now a member of the department. The police say that the woman had articles worth $44 which had come from Sixth Avenue stores.

GAYNOR AGAIN ATTACKS POLICE FOR PICKETING

Tells Police Captain He Uses Lawless Brute Force.

WORSE VICE THAN BETTING

Justice Enjoins Capt. Bourke from Interfering with a Cigar Store in West Third Street.

In a long memorandum Justice Gaynor of the Supreme Court in Brooklyn yesterday attacked the police for the methods adopted by them in the suppression of suspected poolrooms. His remarks were particularly addressed to Acting Captain Edward J. Bourke, whom he enjoined, on the application of James R. Cullen, who keeps a cigar store at 34 West Third Street, Manhattan, from sending policemen into his store and interfering with his customers.

Cullen said that he purchased the store on Feb. 1, and that on Feb. 7 three policemen entered his store and smashed in the doors leading to the smoking room in the rear. They found Cullen and several other men at luncheon. The plaintiff ordered the policemen out, but they refused to go, and shortly afterward Bourke and several other policemen entered. They remained there all day, and returned the next afternoon in a patrol wagon. Under the orders of Acting Captain Bourke, the bell of the wagon was repeatedly clanged. By this means a crowd was collected. To the crowd the policemen loudly declared: "This is a suspected poolroom. You are liable to be arrested if you go in there." Of this Justice Gaynor says:

"From first to last the actions of this defendant were simply the exercise of lawless brute force. He seems to be possessed of the delusion that he is under no restraint whatever by the laws, but simply turned loose on the community to knock people about and do as he pleases.

"It is said that the conduct of this defendant arises from his virtuous zeal against the injurious vice of betting on horse races in private. He seems to be wholly unaware, and not informed by his official superiors, that the vice of arbitrary power which he indulges in is a far worse vice and far more dangerous to society and our system of government than the vice of betting. It brings in its train a horde of vices, and especially the despicable vices of oppression, extortion, and blackmail. If this Captain of police is to be permitted to go on doing at will what he has done to this plaintiff, he can extort money throughout his precinct, and get rich thereby, just as police officials have done in the past in the City of New York.

"It may be that this plaintiff is addicted to the vice of private betting on horse races, a vice publicly practiced on five or six race tracks within the limits of the City of New York,

NEW YORK LIFE MAKES ITS SALARIES PUBLIC

A Remarkable Pamphlet Issued to Company's Agents.

WHAT OFFICERS DO AND GET

President McCall Receives $100,000—Why Vice President George W. Perkins Gets $25,000 Instead of $75,000.

The New York Life Insurance Company has just issued to its agents a remarkable pamphlet entitled: "The Compensation of the Executive Officers of the New York Life Insurance Company; Who They Are, How Chosen, Their Duties."

The circular quotes this minute, adopted by the trustees on April 12 last:

We commend the policy of an open ledger. We commend a rule under which information, when sought, is sent promptly to the policy holders.

And, over the signature of Vice President Thomas A. Buckner, says:

"We are going to take you all over the house, from cellar to garret, and right through the kitchen."

That this promise is kept will be seen from the extracts from the pamphlet which follow. In the pamphlet the company is frequently referred to as "Nylic," a word compounded of the initial letters of the company's full title. The first officer considered is President John A. McCall. After giving an extended biography of the company's head, the pamphlet has this to say of his compensation:

President McCall's $100,000.

"The salary of the President of the New York Life has been raised from time to time during the growth of the company until, in 1901, it was fixed at $100,000 per annum.

"It is a large salary, paid to a large man, for large and peculiar responsibilities. A mistake in the selection of $100,000 risks, a mistake in negotiating with some Government for concessions, a mistake in agency methods, a mistake in the wording of a policy contract, a mistake in investing even a small percentage of the company's assets, a mistake in any one of these departments could easily cost the policy holders several times the amount of the President's salary; and yet, on all of these important branches of the company's business, the President is acting and passing judgment, day by day, during the business year.

"President McCall receives no other compensation—not one dollar—for his services to the New York Life.

"It will thus be seen that the President of the New York Life receives only his salary, and his position depends entirely on the successful administration of the manifold duties of his office—the tenure of which office comes through the Board of Trustees, and is from year to year only."

Pay of the Vice Presidents.

The three Vice Presidents are next considered. To one of them, George W. Perkins, a member of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., is devoted almost a page and a half:

"The three Vice Presidents, George W. Perkins, Darwin P. Kingsley, and Thomas A. Buckner, all held prominent positions with the New York Life prior to the administration of President McCall. Their biographies are unnecessary. Almost every Nylic reader is familiar with their careers.

"Vice President George W. Perkins has been with the company more than twenty-seven years. He began as office boy and worked his way up the ladder round by round, having filled at one time or another almost every position in the gift of the company.

"Vice President Buckner has also spent his business life entirely in the company's service. He began at fifteen and has ever since been actively in the service of the company—for more than twenty-five years—in branch offices, field and home office.

"Vice President Kingsley was Insurance Commissioner of Colorado. From that position he came to the New York Life as Inspector of Agencies by appointment of a former President of the company. For more than sixteen years he has continuously and ably served the New York Life in many capacities—as Inspector of Agencies, Superintendent of Agencies, Third Vice President, and Vice President.

"To secure competent men and spread the gospel of Nylic in every clime, in every language, under every civilized Government, has been the labor of these Vice Presidents, ably assisted by the other officers of the company. Under their administration no Government has refused a concession to Nylic. It took fifty-four years for the company to secure $1,000,000,000 of insurance in force. Under the new non-general-agency system—originated and developed by these three Vice Presidents—the second billion of insurance-in-force was placed on the company's books in less than six years! The total expenses of all kinds for securing, handling, investing, and caring for the second billion was over $20,000,000 less than the total expenses of the first billion.

"Compensation of the Three Vice Presidents.—In each case it is a straight salary fixed by the Trustees through the Finance Committee. The salaries are $25,000, $35,000, $40,000. No one familiar with the details of life insurance transactions and the high ability necessary to create and maintain a world-wide field organization, and at the same time do this at a cost that makes it worth while to the policy holders, will doubt for an instant the ability of these officers to earn their salaries; and it should be borne in mind in this connection that no one in an official position with this company can participate in any

NO OFFICERS AS PROXIES.

Agents and Employes of New York Life Also Barred.

The Executive Committee of the New York Life Insurance Company has, on the recommendation of President McCall, reported favorably on this by-law:

"Any person of legal age, except an officer, employe, or agent of the company, may, at the annual election of members of the Board of Trustees, act as proxy for any member or members of the company.

"The Board of Trustees shall elect from its own numbers a committee of three, who may act as proxies for members and shall hold office until their successors are elected by the board. This committee shall not include any officer, employe, or agent of the company.

"Every proxy must be executed in writing and shall be revocable at the pleasure of the person executing it.

"Every such proxy shall be invalid after the expiration of eleven months from the date of its execution, unless the member executing it shall have specified therein the number of years for which it is to continue."

SUBWAY FOR 14TH STREET.

Four Tracks to Join Bridge Loop—Board Accepts Plan.

Fourteenth Street was formally decided upon as the route for the second cross-town subway at the meeting of the Rapid Transit Commission yesterday afternoon. Thirty-fourth Street having been decided upon as the route for the first at the meeting last week.

The subway, as planned, will extend from the North River straight across Fourteenth Street as a four-track route to a point between Avenues B and C, where the connection will be made with the bridge loop, which is to connect the Williamsburg, Manhattan, and Brooklyn Bridges. This loop will tunnel the East River to Williamsburg opposite Fourteenth Street.

The Fourteenth Street line will also have two spurs running down the west side. One will run from Ninth Avenue, two tracks, through Ninth Avenue, Greenwich Street, Liberty, and William Streets to the proposed Old Slip tunnel under the East River to Brooklyn. The other will carry two tracks down University Place, Wooster, Canal, and Centre Streets, to connect at Brooklyn Bridge with the so-called bridge loop.

In addition to adopting the Fourteenth Street route the board approved the form and text of the legal resolutions for all of the proposed Brooklyn routes reported by the Committee on Plan three weeks ago, except the Fort Hamilton route, which is to be changed. As originally laid out the Fort Hamilton route would have terminated in the Interborough Subway in Brooklyn, now building. The Commissioners thought that no bidder would want to compete for such a route except the Interborough, so it was decided yesterday to include a loop in the plans so that, instead of being carried into the Interborough Subway, the Fort Hamilton route would be carried around on a spur in Fourth Street and Atlantic Avenue to Borough Hall, where it could be connected with any of the proposed extensions under the East River.

Ex-Borough President J. Edward Swanstrom and W. C. Redfield attended the meeting as the representatives of the Transportation Reform League of Brooklyn to urge a connection between the elevated roads of Manhattan and Brooklyn with a 5-cent interborough fare. The plan outlined would extend the tracks of the Third Avenue line at the City Hall and Brooklyn Bridge by curving them into the bridge structure and connecting the tracks with those of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit system. An intertraffic agreement between the Interborough and the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company would be necessary to make this a success. Mr. Redfield thought the city could force this. Mr. Redfield also presented a plan by which the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, by constructing one block of new elevated line in Brooklyn between Myrtle Avenue and Fulton Street, on Adams Street, could do away with twenty-one blocks of its elevated structure. The structure removed would be from the Bridge Plaza and on Adams Street between Sands Street and Concord Street. The plan was referred to the Interborough and Brooklyn Rapid Transit Companies for their opinions.

A public hearing will be held on Thursday next on the application of August Belmont to three-track the Second and Third Avenue elevated line from One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Street to the bridge.

Chief Engineer Rice told the Commissioners that the lessees of the advertising privileges in the Subway yere installing additional slot machines. Counsel to the board were instructed to proceed at once, in the courts if necessary, to have all slot machines removed.

FISHER, THE GOULDS, AND MERCHANTS' TRUST

Accused Promoter Approved the Loans They Took Up.

JEROME LOOKING UP CASE

Man Charged with Larceny by Textile Directors Got State Insurance Company Some Loans, Too.

George E. Fisher, a promoter, against whom four indictments for grand larceny are now pending, has become, through disclosures made yesterday, the principal figure in the collapse of the Merchants' Trust Company. It was also learned yesterday that an independent investigation of the trust company's affairs is under way, and that interesting developments are promised.

District Attorney Jerome said last evening that he had appointed Deputy Assistant District Attorney Iselin to the case, and that it would be thoroughly investigated to discover whether a crime had been committed. He said that he had no evidence or knowledge of the matter, and was investigating it merely as a precautionary measure.

Fisher was the promoter of the collapsed Virginia Passenger and Power Company and of the collapsed Southern Textile Company, both now in the hands of receivers, and it was through him that Helen Miller Gould and Frank Gould took up the loans of nearly $1,500,000 made by the Merchants' Trust Company to the Virginia concern. A lot of the same kind of security was unloaded upon the United States Insurance Company, of which Dr. Munn, who was physician to Jay Gould, is President, and when the State Insurance Department forced the insurance company to cancel the loans after declaring the collateral worthless, the bonds were bought at 85. Miss Gould and her brothers are said to have been the buyers in both instances to save Dr. Munn.

According to the latest edition of the Corporation Directory, Fisher is still a Director of the United States Insurance Company, and at the time that the loan of $1,500,000 was made by the Merchants' Trust to the Virginia Passenger and Power Company, Fisher was a Director of the trust company and a member of its Executive Board, which made the loan. This board also had as members the President, Edwin Langdon, and Dr. Munn.

Coincident with the announcement that an independent investigation was being made into the inside affairs of the company and its methods was the declaration of Duncan A. McIntyre, who is associated with William B. Ellison, counsel for the trust company, that it will probably be developed that Fisher was also connected with the promotion of the Hudson Valley Railway Company, whose securities figure so largely in the assets of the trust company. Fisher, who has an office at 37 Wall Street, could not be found yesterday. He was at his office in the morning, but left before noon, and did not return.

There are several suits in Richmond, Va., against Fisher in connection with the Virginia Passenger and Power Company. One of these, involving $2,000,000, was brought by Miss Helen Gould, who says that she was induced to take up the securities of the Virginia company as a result of misrepresentations concerning its earnings, and that the receipts of the companies, which are a consolidation of passenger railways and lighting companies of Richmond, were padded. In the case of the railway companies it is alleged that Fisher hired men to ride in the cars all day long and thus raised the receipts.

Although the Goulds did not become associated with the Virginia company until they took up the loans made by the Merchants' Trust Company, Fisher was careful to declare, when he was promoting the concern, that it was backed by the Goulds. Dr. Munn, Edwin Langdon, and the latter's brother-in-law and attorney, Rowland K. Brown, were also associated with Fisher in the promotion of the defunct Southern Textile Company.

It developed yesterday through the State Banking Department that the $1,500,000 loan on the securities of the Virginia Passenger and Power Company was almost the first loan that the Merchants' Trust Company ever made, and certainly its first large transaction. This was in the early part of 1902. The loan was made between examinations, and as soon as the Banking Department learned of it President Langdon was summoned before Superintendent Kilburn to explain the loan. He said that Fisher, a Director and member of the Executive Committee, had advised the loan, and could tell all about it.

Fisher told the Superintendent that the company was one of the greatest ever conceived, and that by holding to the securities the trust company would make a clear profit of over $1,000,000. Nevertheless, Mr. Kilburn told the trust company that the loan must be canceled. Then the Goulds came forward, and took up the loan.

It was some time after this that Fisher severed his official relations with the trust company, but it is said that he still holds stock in it. Mr. McIntyre said yesterday that Fisher was forced out, but his connection with Dr. Munn and Mr. Langdon still continued. At the time of the collapse the trust company held no securities of companies with which Fisher had been identified, unless his connection with the Hudson Valley Railway Company shall be established.

Fisher financed the Southern Textile Company, which was designed to be a combination of a number of Southern cotton mills. The indictments against him charge him with larceny of a promissory note of the Southern Textile Company for $10,000, another of the same company and for the same amount, dated March 25, 1904, six months later than the date of the first note, and with the larceny of two drafts for $3,750 each, one made by T. Ashby Blythe of Philadelphia and another by Peter H. Corr of Taunton, Mass. These, with Tracy W. Pratt of Huntsville, Ala.; Ernest C. Brown, David Bennett King, and Fisher were Directors of the textile concern.

In the criminal action against Fisher last March James Gordon Battle was the attorney for the Directors who charge Fisher with larceny. Mr. Battle is also attorney for Frank J. Gould. He yesterday issued a statement in Mr. Gould's behalf, in which he declared unequivocally that any story to the effect that Mr. Gould or any member of his family was interested in the Hudson Valley Railway Company "is absolutely and unqualifiedly false."

The statement also points out that the loans made by the Merchants' Trust Company on the Virginia securities were executed before the trust company came in the Trust Company, and that the action of Frank J. and Miss Helen Gould in taking up the securities of the company at par and accrued interest instead of hurting the trust company was beneficial to its interests. The statement says further:

Inasmuch as neither Mr. Gould nor any member of his family had any interest whatever in the Virginia Passenger and Power Company at the time the Merchants' Trust Company acquired these securities, and inasmuch as Mr. Gould was not a Director nor any other official of the Merchants' Trust Company at that time, it is perfectly obvious that he was not in the slightest degree interested in nor responsible for the transaction.

It may be further said that at no time while Mr. Gould was a Director of the Merchants' Trust Company did that company loan any money on any securities in which he or any member of his family were interested so far as he knows.

BOSTON BANKERS FAIL.

Burnett, Cummings & Co. Go Into Bankruptcy Owing $1,714,000.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, May 25.—The creditors of the banking firm of Burnett, Cummings & Co. of this city, which to-day filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, include seventy-one banks and trust companies. The firm's liabilities are $1,714,368, and the assets are of uncertain value. They may not exceed $200,000. The bankruptcy petition is the largest ever filed in this district.

The cause of the failure was the building and financing of the Concord and Boston street railway, the Middleborough, Wareham and Buzzard's Bay Street Railway, the Lowell and Boston Street Railway, and the Bristol County Railway Company. These electric lines were in thinly settled districts and were unable to make suitable connections. The roads were placed in the hands of receivers upon which the equity of the stock was lost and the notes given by the roads became valueless, entailing large losses to the firm.

The secured creditors number eighty-seven and the unsecured eighty-one. There are thirty-two Massachusetts savings banks in the list of creditors and thirteen Massachusetts National banks. One of the heaviest claims is that of the Worcester Five-Cent Savings Bank for $80,600. Other banking institution creditors are the Danvers Savings Bank, $26,721; the Millbury Savings Bank, $26,660, and the International Trust Company of Boston, $44,495. All these claims are in the secured list.

Among the other larger claims, most of them unsecured, are the Lynn Five-Cent Savings Bank, $21,899; the National Bank of the Republic, Providence, R. I., $17,000; City Savings Bank, Providence, R. I., $20,711; Brockton Savings Bank, $11,121; Amherst Five-Cent Savings Bank, $21,776, and the Crocker Institution for Savings, Turner's Falls, Mass., $4,158.

Several Western institutions are affected by the failure.

The firm of Burnett, Cummings & Co. is composed of Archie C. Burnett and Charles C. Cummings, second. The firm has been in business three years and a half, succeeding C. S. Cummings & Co.

The State Savings Bank Commissioners say that so far as their investigations have gone the savings banks which have lent money on the Massachusetts security bonds have not violated any laws.

BANK RUN CAUSES FAILURE.

Holzman & Co., Cincinnati Bankers and Brokers, Make Assignment.

CINCINNATI, May 25.—Holzman & Co., bankers and brokers, members of the New York Stock Exchange, assigned to-day to Lepman & Levi. A member of the firm says the assets and liabilities are about equal and amount to $100,000. The assignment is attributed to rumors concerning the loss of $55,000 from the reserve fund of the German National Bank and to the recent run on the Union Trust Company Bank.

The firm's main indebtedness is to Cincinnati banks, and is amply secured.

The failure of Holzman & Co. was without significance here. Recently the firm had not done much business in this market. Their commitments on the Exchange here were small.

FATALLY HURT BY RUNAWAY.

Unknown Man Tried in Vain to Stop a Galloping Horse.

As Manhattan-bound Reid Avenue Car 3,161 stopped at Broadway and Hughes Street, Williamsburg, about 8 o'clock last night to take on a well-dressed middle-aged man, a runaway horse attached to an empty buggy dashed along the street.

The man leaped for the horse's head, but missed his hold and was hurled against the side of the car. He received a compound fracture of the skull. He was removed to the Eastern District Hospital, where it was said he could not live more than a few hours.

The man is about fifty years old, of medium build, with mixed gray hair and mustache. On his left forearm is tattooed a shield, an anchor, and a Goddess of Liberty; on his right arm is a picture of a woman holding an American flag. His clothing contained about $26. In one pocket was a metal strip such as is used for name plates for apartment houses. On it is the name Thomas Little.

PUT BANKER IN A CELL.

McAdoo Summons Sergeant and Doorman on Automobilist's Charge.

Sergt. Cornelius Hosey and Doorman George Dorsch of the West Forty-seventh Street Police Station were notified last night to appear to-day at Police Headquarters before Commissioner McAdoo. The summons grew out of the arrest of Henry P. Davison, Vice President of the First National Bank of Englewood, N. J., who was charged with speeding his automobile in Seventh Avenue Wednesday night and was held yesterday in $100 bail for trial.

When Mr. Davison was taken to the station house Wednesday night the Sergeant allowed him to go into the Captain's room and make out a check for bail. The check was given to a friend, who was in the automobile, and he left to have it cashed.

After the man had left Doorman Dorsch asked whether Mr. Davison was a prisoner. Sergt. Hosey said he was, and the doorman placed Mr. Davison in a cell, where he remained for about twenty minutes. Before leaving the station house Mr. Davison said he would bring charges.

Nephew Offers Reward for Proof That Aunt Was Poisoned.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., May 25.—In response to a telephone query from this city to-night, Welton Stanford, at his Summer home at Lake George, said that he had offered a reward of $1,000 for proof that his aunt, Mrs. Leland Stanford, died in Honolulu from the effects of poison and for information leading to the conviction of the person who administered it.

He stated that he had received official reports of her illness and death from the attending physicians from Honolulu, and that he was not satisfied that she died a natural death. No examination of certain capsules administered to Mrs. Stanford during her illness had been made. He was not a beneficiary under her will, although he received a legacy of $100,000 or more from Senator Stanford's estate.

SUICIDE LOST MILLIONS IN AMALGAMATED COPPER

W. C. Jutte of Pittsburg Dead in Atlantic City.

BANKRUPTCY CASE STARTED

Relative Had Begun Action—Jutte Had Been in Deals with J. W. Gates.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 25.—W. C. Jutte, a Pittsburg coal operator, who not long ago was reputed to be worth $15,000,000, and is said to have lost most of his fortune in copper and other stock speculations, shot himself some time last night in the St. Denis Hotel here.

Mr. Jutte was found dead on the floor of his room this morning by George Nash, a nurse who had come to Atlantic City to take care of him. Nash said he did not know that Mr. Jutte had the pistol, though he heard the shot in the night, and was not aware of the cause of the noise. Melancholia was assigned as the cause of the suicide.

Mr. Jutte came to Atlantic City about three weeks ago with his nurse. His mind had been troubled the last few weeks over a prospective deal by which a firm in Pittsburg was to take over some of his lands. There was a large difference in the price offered by the company and the price wanted by Jutte. He had said that if he could get the matter satisfactorily adjusted he would settle everything on his wife and not trouble himself in the future with business matters. It is believed that worry over the settlement of the coal field deal drove Mr. Jutte temporarily insane and ended in his taking his life.

Jutte attempted suicide in this city at another hotel about two years ago. At that time he shot himself in the head, but the bullet did not enter his brain, and he seemed to have fully recovered from the effects of the wound. He has been exceedingly nervous, however, since that time, and almost constantly in the care of a nurse.

Nash, in his statement to the Coroner's physician and the police, declared that last night was the first time for three weeks that his patient had been out of his sight. He did not know how Mr. Jutte got the revolver.

The suicide had evidently made certain that there should be no chance of his attempt failing. He had placed the muzzle of the revolver, a 38-calibre, against his left breast when he fired. Mr. Jutte's widow has directed that the body be forwarded to Pittsburg.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, May 25.—The news from Atlantic City to-day that William C. Jutte had killed himself there was little surprise to his intimate acquaintances in Pittsburg. It has been known among his personal friends the last few weeks that he has talked almost continually of ending his life. Nurses here recently watched his every movement. He is the second member of his family to accomplish self-destruction.

While a few years ago Mr. Jutte was said to be worth 15,000,000, it is being whispered in Pittsburg to-night that he died worth almost nothing; that even the house in which he lived is now owned by a prominent Pittsburg banker. It is said that he has lost millions in the past few years in Amalgamated Copper speculations.

The son of Charles Jutte, one of the pioneers in the coal business, who for the last few years has lived in Germany, William C. Jutte spent much of his boyhood days on the river and worked in almost every capacity on his father's steamers. When he entered the coal business, a number of years ago, he displayed so much energy that rivermen gave him credit for being the brightest man in the business.

Mr. Jutte received a great deal of money years ago by selling out to the River Coal Trust. At the same time he promised not to re-enter the coal business, but within two years he went back at the business, and there was a hard legal battle between the trust and Jutte, which ended in his business being driven out of Pennsylvania. He established headquarters at New Orleans.

Some months ago Mr. Jutte was said to be in a deal with John W. Gates to reorganize the river coal trade, and it was said he had $50,000,000 behind him. This fell through. He was identified prominently with the river interests of Pittsburg and Allegheny for from twenty-five to thirty years. He married Miss Mary Brokaw, an Allegheny school teacher. He was always a hard worker, and it was not unusual for him to be at his desk in his office in the Conestoga Building as early as 6 o'clock in the morning.

Mr. Jutte was interested in the Jutte-Foley Company, against which involuntary bankruptcy proceedings were instituted yesterday by Charles Cramer, who is a brother-in-law of Jutte.

COURT ENJOINS MRS. REID.

Neighbor Objects to Extension Ambassador's Wife Plans for Home.

Work on a new extension to the mansion of Whitelaw Reid at Madison Avenue and Fiftieth Street has been stopped suddenly by legal proceedings brought against Mrs. Reid, in whose name the house stands, by Edward Mitchell, the former United States District Attorney. Mrs. Reid proposed to build a five-story extension in the rear of the house on a lot fronting on Fiftieth Street. The first floor was to be used as a conservatory.

Mr. Mitchell lives in Fiftieth Street, immediately east of Mrs. Reid's dwelling, the two houses being separated by the vacant lot on which she contemplates building her extension. Mr. Mitchell says that his deed gives him the right to the use of the vacant lot as a means of access to his court yard, which would be cut off by Mrs. Reid's extension. Pending the trial of his suit to prevent the extension, he obtained an injunction which put a stop to the work.

Justice O'Gorman, who heard the evidence in the suit yesterday, reserved decision. The injunction will remain effective until the case is decided. At the trial it was asserted in behalf of Mrs. Reid that she contemplated building the extension in such a manner that it would not interfere with Mr. Mitchell's courtyard.

The Reid home was formerly owned by Henry Villard, and was purchased for Mrs. Reid by her father, D. O. Mills.

SENATOR TILLMAN HURT.

Horses Drawing His Carriage Plunge Over Embankment at Night.

CHARLESTON, S. C., May 25.—While returning home in a carriage after the commencement exercises of the South Carolina co-educational institution at Edgefield late last night, Senator Benjamin R. Tillman was driven over an embankment and severely injured.

He sustained two cuts on the head and was badly bruised.

It was very dark, and the horses missed the road and feel fifteen feet, dragging the carriage with them. In the vehicle were Senator Tillman's two daughters and Miss Bryant. They were not hurt.

LA FOLLETTE SCORES LOBBY.

Message Asks Law to Stop the "Nuisance and Disgrace."

MADISON, Wis., May 25.—Gov. La Follette to-day sent to the Legislature a message urging legislation that would destroy secret lobbying.

"The impudent railway lobby," he says, "has cost the State millions of dollars in the last six years, and has been a nuisance and disgrace in the legislative halls of the State."

The Senate recently killed the Johnson bill, in line with the Governor's recommendation, but a new measure is to be presented.

TOO TALL FOR SCHOOL.

Lena Ober Stands 6 Feet at 14 Years Old—In Court About It.

Lena Ober, fourteen years old, of 150 Broome Street, was in the Essex Market Court yesterday afternoon before Magistrate Whitman to explain why she did not attend school as required by the rules of the Board of Education. She is six feet tall. When asked what she had to say Lena replied:

"I am too tall, Judge, your Honor. The children in the fourth grammar grade class, in which I would be, are small, and they make fun of me. This humiliates me so I quit going to school. I can't help being tall."

Even the Magistrate smiled.

"Well," said he, "I can only advise that you attend school in spite of your troubles. Make the best of it and forget your size, and all will come out right."

VAN WYCK TO SEE CROKER.

New York the Best-Governed City, ex-Mayor Says, Before Sailing.

Ex-Mayor Robert A. Van Wyck sailed for Europe on the Hamburg-American liner Deutschland yesterday. While away he will visit Richard Croker in Ireland. When asked about Dr. Parkhurst's assertion that New York, next to Philadelphia, was the rottenest city in America, Mr. Van Wyck replied that in his opinion this was the best-governed and the finest city in the world. Mr. Van Wyck expects to be away several months.

Others who sailed on the Deutschland were Bishop Thomas Grace of Sacramento, Robert J. Collier, the publisher; Mrs. C. A. Spreckels, Dr. John Addison Fordyce, H. P. Miriklam of the Persian Legation in Washington, Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont, Miss Lulu Glaser, the actress, and J. Henry Smith. The Deutschland had over 500 first cabin passengers, every apartment on the liner being taken.

STEEL RAIL POOL DISBANDS.

It Is Thought to Have Feared Action by Mr. Roosevelt.

The steel rail pool, an organization of manufacturers of steel rails, which has been the stiffest of the various pools existing in steel products, has been dissolved. The members of the pool were the mills of the United States Steel Corporation, the Pennsylvania Steel Company, the Maryland Steel Company, the Cambria Steel Company, and the Lackawanna Steel Company. The mills not in the combination were those of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company, the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company, and the Republic Steel and Iron Company.

It was said yesterday that the pool was dissolved because President Roosevelt had been informed fully as to its working, and that the pool members desired to avoid any challenge on the ground of a violation of law at this time. The pool has held the price of rails stationary in this country for four years, and it was so strong that even in the depression of 1903 the schedule was not varied. It is not believed that the dissolution will have any effect on prices.

PIPE GALLERY BILL SIGNED.

Governor Also Approves Measure Aiming for Pure Milk Supply.

ALBANY, May 25.—Gov. Higgins to-day signed Senator Gardner's bill amending the New York City Rapid Transit act so as to require separation in rapid transit contracts of items for pipe galleries from those for construction and operation. The bill had an eventful career in both houses and was said to be drawn to destroy monopoly of the underground wire conduits in New York City.

Three bills amending the agricultural law were signed. One was Senator Ambler's, requiring owners or operators of milk stations for the sale of milk or the shipping of milk to cities to procure licenses from the State Commissioner of Agriculture. The applicant must file an affidavit declaring that he will not participate in or permit adulteration of milk at his station.

The Governor also signed Senator Tully's bill, permitting co-operative savings and loan associations to issue juvenile savings shares of a matured value not to exceed $50 in the name of any minor.

Assemblyman Bedell's bill, providing for the inspection of steam railroad locomotive boilers under the supervision of a State Inspector, was signed.

To Chicago in Nineteen Hours.

CHICAGO, May 25.—The Lake Shore and New York Central Railroads announced to-day that, effective on Sunday, June 18, the running time of the Twentieth Century Limited between Chicago and New York would be reduced one hour, making the time between the two cities nineteen hours. This reduction will make it the fastest long-distance train in the world.

OVATIONS FOR WEAVER AS HE SCORES ON RING

Supreme Court Assisting, Mayor Seats New Directors.

GAINS VOTES IN COUNCIL.

Organization Decides to Impeach Him—Roosevelt May Be Appealed To in Philadelphia Gas Fight.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 25.—"I have received, both directly and indirectly, assurances from a number of Councilmen that they will stand by me in the matter of the gas lease," said Mayor Weaver to-day.

"Enough to prevent the Councils from overriding your veto?" he was asked.

"That I decline to answer," he said smilingly. But in response to another question he said:

"You ask if the gas lease is dead? I certainly hope so. If it isn't there are a number of men now in favor of it who will be very sorry later on."

The Councilmen who favor the gas lease are having a hard time of it. They are being swamped with protests, and delegations of neighbors are calling on them at their homes or places of business or holding them up on the streets. Many reply that they are for the lease as long as the "peerless leader," as Durham is called, is for it.

Three Select and six Common Council men have announced that they will change their vote on the lease. This would make the vote in Select Council 34 for the lease and 8 against, and in Common Council 68 for and 16 against. It takes a two-thirds vote to pass an ordinance over the Mayor's veto.

Steps to impeach the Mayor, it is said, were decided on to-day by "Boss" Durham. John R. K. Scott, Assistant City Solicitor, it is reported, obtained the papers in the Salter case and they are under consideration now as the basis of impeachment proceedings.

If the Salter case does not seem, on further consideration, to be a safe basis for impeachment the ring probably will attack the Mayor on the ground that he has attempted to bulldoze Councilmen into voting against the gas lease. This is the more attractive proposition, for the reason that in it there is no danger of showing up the organization. But that the case would have as strong a chance as an impeachment proceeding based on the Salter affair is doubted by the leaders.

The plan is to rush Weaver's impeachment through with lightning rapidity. The necessary petition is to be brought into court and granted in one day, a special session of Councils called for the next day and the trial rushed through on the spot.

MAYOR EJECTS DIRECTORS.

The Mayor to-day countered on the ring by getting a supersedeas from the Supreme Court and establishing his appointees in office. Before doing it he personally removed Smyth and Costello from the offices they were attempting to fill.

When the Mayor arrived in his office in the morning he found Col. Sheldon Potter, his new Director of Public Safety, waiting for him. Col. Potter said that Smyth, the removed Director, had possession of the office. A few minutes later word came that Costello had taken possession of the office of the Department of Public Works.

Mayor Weaver sent to each of the removed Directors a letter notifying them that they were trespassers and would be forcibly ejected unless they left at once. He waited an hour without any sign being given that his order would be obeyed, and then moved on the offices at the head of a detachment of detectives. With him went Capt. Donaghy of the detective force.

With these detectives and his counsel, ex-Judge Gordon, the Mayor walked into Costello's office and handed him another copy of the letter sent him an hour before. Costello read it and remarked that he guessed he would have to obey it. He walked out of the office, and then Mayor Weaver and his detectives went into the Public Safety office and put Smyth out in the same way.

Detectives Bond and Duey were placed in charge of the two offices and instructed to see that the removed officers did not return. They obeyed their orders so literally that Costello, who wanted a drink of water, had a hard job in getting back into the room long enough to go to the ice cooler and pour out a glass.

The next development of the day was the granting of the writ of supersedeas by Chief Justice Mitchell and Justice Potter of the Supreme Court. This breaks the dead-lock in Philadelphia's government and enables Directors Potter and Acker to discharge the duties of the offices. Copies of the writ were promptly served on Presiding Judge Martin of the branch of Common Pleas, which had issued the restraining order.

Col. Sheldon Potter and A. Lincoln Acker, the new Directors, sent for the bureau chiefs and officially notified them of the changes. None knew what was in store, but after cordially greeting the new chiefs, departed in a happier frame of mind.

POTTER'S WARNING TO POLICE.

Col. Potter, after a day in charge of the Department of Public Safety, said:

"I found the police a fine body of men in uniform. Of course, that was on the surface. We might get below the surface later on. I know many of the men in the service, and I believe them to be good men.

"I will say, however, that the police must not mix in politics when they ought to be doing their duty. If they violate that rule it will be considered a very serious matter. I have given no thought to removals or shifting of the men, because I have not yet acquainted myself with conditions. No man will be removed without cause, and the sole criterion will be fidelity to duty. So far as it lies in my power this will be a people's administration."

Mr. Acker, in charge of the Department of Public Works, had nothing to say. He referred all interviewers to the Mayor.

The two dismissed Directors sent identical letters to the Mayor late this afternoon, which read:

"In your letter of this date you assume what is yet to be decided by the court under the proceedings instituted by me, viz.: That I have been removed from office, and you assert an intention to do what I am advised will be contempt of court. Until it is decided to the contrary, I will assert my right to discharge the duties of my office, from which, as yet, as I am advised, I have not been removed; but in view of your threat of violence and of my desire that there shall be an orderly determination by a judicial tribunal of a legal question, I will do nothing which will bring about a breach of the peace."

The most remarkable scene that has been enacted in Philadelphia for years took place when Mayor Weaver went to the Union League for luncheon. When he came out with Director Potter he found an immense crowd that jammed the streets. It had been waiting patiently for him for a long time, for he did not go out at his usual hour. It was not such a crowd as ordinarily hangs about the City Hall, for there were hardly any politicians in it, and it was a thoroughly representative gathering, made up of all classes of citizens.

The Mayor and Director Potter literally had to fight their way through this crowd. Wild cheers for the Mayor were heard all along the way. When he reached the Union League, after an ovation that had taken the breath out of him, he had to struggle up the steps, and the crowd burst through the guard and surged into the clubhouse, where it rent the air with the voice of its approval.

The club members who were lunching at the tables jumped up and rushed over to the Mayor, shouting their encouragement and jostling each other. Mr. Weaver ate his luncheon to such an accompaniment as no club member ever enjoyed before.

But on the return trip the first scene was cast into the shade. The crowd had doubled in numbers, and at the entrance to the League stood a number of well-dressed men anxiously waiting for Mr. Weaver to show himself. As he appeared at the top of the steps leading to the north a mighty cheer was raised, which was taken up and echoed and re-echoed by hundreds more who lined the sidewalk and overflowed into the highway between Sansom and Chestnut Streets.

OVATION AT BULLETIN BOARD.

As the Mayor, side by side with Col. Potter, passed along the crowd opened out, forming two lanes of men facing each other, through which he walked, hat in hand, with a gratified smile on his face, bowing in acknowledgment to the cheers and congratulations that were showered upon him along the line. Between Chestnut Street and the City Hall there was a repetition of what occurred in the square below.

At one point in his march the Mayor stopped to read a bulletin board whereon the day's developments had just been set forth, and immediately a crowd of enthusiasts pounced upon him and struggled for a chance to shake hands. After a length he extricated himself from the crowd, smiling broadly and saying:

"Thank you, gentlemen, thank you."

Then the cheering began again and continued as he strode rapidly up the street, and crossed South Penn Square to the big marble building. Just before he disappeared into the entrance of the hall a crowd of at least 500 massed themselves on the Land Trust Title corner and gave "three cheers and a tiger," which the Mayor acknowledged by turning around and raising his hat.

During this demonstration men waved their hats, handkerchiefs, and canes, and in other extravagant ways gave vent to their satisfaction over the course of the city's Executive.

In the midst of all the excitement District Attorney John C. Bell was standing at the corner of Broad Street and South Penn Square. As the cheers went up from the crowd at Broad and Chestnut Streets one of the two men with whom Mr. Bell was conversing asked:

"What's all this? It must be the Mayor coming up the street."

"Yes," said Mr. Bell, as he glanced down Broad Street and saw Mr. Weaver approaching, "and he comes. Watch me turn my back upon him."

And as the city's Executive was within a few feet of the District Attorney the latter deliberately turned around and continued his talk with his companions.

"YOU'LL WIN, WEAVER!"

"We bet on you, Mr. Mayor," shouted the crowd. "Go after the gang. You'll win the fight, Weaver."

These and many more yells of encouragement mingled with the cheers that accompanied the Mayor's progress to and from luncheon. It was an astonishing scene for Philadelphia, and the friends of the ring were both enraged and downcast. They declared that the crowd was not representative, and stigmatized it as a "gang of ragamuffins," which was considerably wide of the facts. The evidently well-to-do element in it was very strong.

Joseph S. Auerbach of New York has been engaged by the Committee of Seventy to act for the Mayor, and presumably will enter into conference with ex-Secretary Root. The organization has a strong representative, John G. Johnson, known as one of the ablest lawyers in the country. He is not in the case as counsel for the organization, but for the United Gas Improvement Company. The difference is not worth mentioning.

Francis Shunk Brown is the organization's counsel. It is a coincidence that Mr. Brown was the man who led the organization to take up Weaver in the first place and make him District Attorney. Weaver then was an unknown lawyer.

MAYOR DUNNE'S MESSAGE.

From all over the country came floods of telegrams to-day congratulating the Mayor on his fight. They are so numerous that the work of assorting them is hopelessly behind.

One from Mayor Dunne of Chicago follows:

"I congratulate you upon the firm stand you have taken in behalf of the people."

It was reported to-day that President Roosevelt would be asked to issue a special warning to Federal employes to keep out of the gas lease fight. It is charged by some of the anti-gas lease people that the organization is calling upon Federal office holders to use their influence with Councilmen in behalf of the lease. This is denied by organization leaders.

Practically the whole work of the organization leaders to-day was on the impeachment question. The chiefs of the ring and their lawyers were closeted all day, going over Weaver's record. The office of United States Senator Boies Penrose was the headquarters for this work. With him were Boss Durham and State Senator McNichol.

After going over Weaver's entire record as Mayor, the lawyers counseled action against him on his attempts to secure votes against the gas lease. If this is carried into action it will be charged against the Mayor that his removal of various officers was for the purpose of intimidating Councilmen. Aside from these removals, the Mayor will be charged with having held personal interviews with Councilmen.

Should the Mayor be removed, his successor would be Henry C. Ransley, President of Select Council, who is an enthusiastic supporter of the gas lease. Ransley is the Republican candidate for Sheriff. Since the storm began to gather there has been much talk of taking him off the ticket and putting some one less likely to stir up public hostility.

One of the probable effects of the Mayor's attack on the ring will be the cleansing of the "Tenderloin," a region which only remotely resembles the original bearer of that name in New York. Now that Col. Potter has become Director of Public Safety something is expected to be done in that quarter.

There were two big ward meetings tonight. At that in the Twenty-ninth Ward two of the Common Councilmen attended and announced that they would support the Mayor. In the Mayor's own ward, the Fortieth, the Select Councilman representing that district said he would take the matter under consideration.

About 1,000 persons attended the Fortieth Ward meeting, and after the speakers had concluded a parade was started that ended at Mayor Weaver's house. He was not at home, and the paraders sang songs and cheered for both the Mayor and Mrs. Weaver.

Mayor Weaver attended a meeting of the Philadelphia Law Association to hear an address by a Pennsylvania Supreme Court Justice. His appearance for a time interrupted the speech of the Justice, so great was the desire of the lawyers and others to greet the Mayor.

DELHI, FAVORITE, WON BROOKLYN HANDICAP

Great Race Failed to Arouse Enthusiasm as Formerly.

TOP WEIGHT WELL BACKED

Keene's Famous Horse Made the Running Throughout the Main Event of Gravesend's Opening Day.

With Delhi, the top weight and post favorite, first every jump of the mile and a quarter distance, the nineteenth Brooklyn Handicap was run at the Gravesend race track yesterday in the presence of 25,000 visitors as the first test of experimental racing under the new and higher scale of prices for admission. The race was a good one, and the best horse won in satisfying style and time that was close to the race record, but there was something lacking in the ensemble of Gravesend's opening day.

It hardly was the extra dollar that the general public paid for admission that checked enthusiasm, for the holiday makers, well aware of the increased rates, paid the higher prices for grand and field stand badges without murmuring, and all the circumstances attending the gathering of the crowd were mush as is usual on Brooklyn Handicap day. The feeling seemed general, however, that an experiment was in progress, and racegoers suspended both judgment and demonstration for the time and waited for a lead to popular opinion, which in the waiting never came. Thus a decorous and self-suppressed gathering, which in size made an excellent showing in the grand stand inclosure and overflowed the field stand, witnessed an excellent and very satisfying afternoon sport, but somehow missed the general flavor of the Brooklyn Handicap of old.

Even the victory of Delhi, a famous race horse, and one with a sensational record as the leading winner among the three-year-olds of 1904, the popular favorite and much the best backed horse in the big race, failed to break through the reserve of the spectators, and, though partisans cheered when Delhi took the lead and swept on in front through the entire distance to win in gallant style after a punishing finish, there was instant return to decorum when the horses finished.

The contest for the $20,000 prize offered for the great event of the day was all that it gave promise of being when the entries were announced. Eleven of the twelve horses named to run on the programme started, and Delhi, carrying his 124 pounds away in the front at the lifting of the barrier, made his own running throughout, and responding courageously to the whip when challenged by Graziallo in the last eighth of a mile, went on and won by a length and a half from the light-weighted Ostrich, who, with 92 pounds, closed at the end and finished second two lengths and a half before the tired Graziallo.

The time of Delhi's race, 2:06 2-5, marked a decidedly meritorious performance, as the track was soft and a trifle dead. The figures took rank with the best races that have ever been run for the Brooklyn Handicap, as only two Brooklyns have been won in faster time, and both of these by horses carrying very much lighter weight than Delhi had up yesterday.

The result was as disastrous to the bookmakers as it was popular to the general public, as three of the best-backed horses in the race filled the first three places at the finish and made a long period of paying off by the more than two hundred and fifty layers who transacted business in the grand and field stand inclosures. These bookmakers fairly divided public interest with the handicap, for in view of the experiment in racing inaugurated at the Brooklyn track yesterday, there was great curiosity on the part of the visitors to see what might happen in the betting ring.

Even in this respect racegoers failed to find unusual diversion, for things went on among the layers about as usual notwithstanding that bookmakers handled the public's money without paying for that privilege for the first time in the history of the Brooklyn Jockey Club track. The rings in both field and grand stands were free, as they were in the closing day of the Belmont Park meeting, the Brooklyn Jockey Club officials refusing to accept payment from the bookmakers, and under the agreement of the racetrack managers reached early in the week, trusting to the increased admission fees to make up for the revenue cut off from the betting interests. Inside the ring was the Metropolitan Turf Association with the better places to the exclusion of the back-line men. This was in accordance with the tacit understanding between John Cavanagh, manager of the grand stand betting ring, and the Metropolitan Turf Association.

About twelve thousand visitors were in the grand stand, while a crowd of about the same size was packed in the field stand at the general rate of $1 for admission. The crush in the field stand became so great before the racing began that the gates to the infield were opened, and a large portion of the crowd crossed the track and witnessed the racing from the turf oval encompassed by the race track proper. These spectators lined the rail along the quarter stretch three deep, and spent the entire afternoon out in the open with perfect satisfaction, as they had equal opportunity with persons who remained in the regular inclosure, so far as betting was concerned, as bookmakers from the field stand moved with the crowd and offered odds as freely in the infield as they did in the usual betting inclosures.

DELHI WON ALL THE WAY.

Favorite, with Top Weight, Always First for Brooklyn Handicap.

For the third time in the history of the stake the blue-spotted white jacket of James R. Keene was carried to victory in the Brooklyn Handicap yesterday when Delhi, racing in front from post to finish, strode home a length and a half before Ostrich for the twenty-thousand-dollar feature of the Gravesend meeting's opening. Hornpipe in 1895 achieved the first triumph for the veteran turfman and breeder, and the three-year-old Conroy in 1901 placed a second Brooklyn Handicap to the credit of the big Keene stable, but neither former victory nor both together brought such delight to Mr. Keene as did the triumph of Delhi, a horse of his own breeding from the Castleton Farm, in Kentucky, and the successor in the owner's affections to the dead turf heroes Domino and Commando.

The race, the fourth on the programme, was run at about 4:15 o'clock, eleven horses of the twelve named on the programme responding to the call to the post, the only withdrawal being the Western horse, First Mason, which was scratched by the C. E. Rowe stable, which trusted the Colonial Girl for the big event. Delhi was the opening favorite at odds of 5 to 2, and held first place in the betting from first to last, the highest price laid against him being 7 to 2, and the post betting 3 to 1. In the first betting Colonial Girl and W. B. Jennings's stable entry, Dainty and Proper, were equal second choices at 5 to 1 each, while Graziallo, Broomstick, and Lord of the Vale were next in favor. Next to Delhi, Colonial Girl was the best backed horse and started a warm second choice at 4 to 1, with the Jennings entry still at 5 to 1 at post time, while Graziallo and Ostrich both were backed down, the odds against all the other runners increasing as the betting progressed.

Mr. Keene himself watched the saddling of Delhi, deaf to all arguments against his horse, and aggressively argumentative when the question of Delhi's courage was raised. August Belmont stood by when his own representative, Lord of the Vale, was saddled, but the public interest seemed to pass over the Belmont candidate, and was divided between the favorite and Colonial Girl, the Jennings pair, Dainty and Proper, and Graziallo.

At the starting post in the chute at the head of the stretch the horses took their positions behind the barrier with Colonial Girl on the rail, Pasadena next to her, and Sir Brillar, Broomstick, Graziallo, Ostrich, Delhi, Dainty, Lord of the Vale, and Leonidas lined out in the order named, Proper being on the extreme outside. The delay at the post was brief, and all were together and quick to move when the barrier was sprung by Starter Cassidy. Delhi, the quickest to move, and coming through, ran away from his horses in the very first jump. He led past the timing flag and went straight on to make his own pace, while Graziallo, Colonial Girl, Lord of the Vale, and Pasadena followed in the order named. Proper and Dainty were the last of the crowd and slow to move, and dropped back and out of the race in the first furlong.

In the run to the stand Delhi drew out clear of Graziallo, and, carrying a terrific pace, led by two lengths at the end of the first quarter, with Graziallo second, a length and a half before Colonial Girl, she in turn a length before Lord of the Vale, with Pasadena fifth, and Broomstick sixth. Ostrich waited just before Proper and Dainty. Around the paddock turn and into the back stretch the pace continued without abatement, Delhi striding on in front under a gentle pull, while the positions of the others remained unchanged. Entering the back stretch Delhi moved a little further away in front of Graziallo, and led to the far turn by three lengths, while Graziallo increased his lead over Colonial Girl to four lengths, the Western mare then being lapped by Lord of the Vale and Ostrich, the latter just beginning to move up.

Beginning the turn between the back and quarter stretches Graziallo went on after Delhi, and going away from Colonial Girl gradually closed the gap on the leader, while shouts of excitation went up from the backers of Graziallo, attended by predictions that Delhi would quit as soon as Graziallo got to him. At the bend into the quarter stretch Delhi led by but a length, Graziallo then being four lengths away from Colonial Girl. The race now seemed to be between the first two, though Ostrich still was closing in the rear.

As the horses straightened out for the run home Burns for the first time called on Delhi. Graziallo then seemed to be going the stronger of the two, but Delhi, rallying, gave generous response to the urging, and, with Graziallo then at his hips, drew away slightly. Hildebrand, on Graziallo, at this point drew his whip, and just before the last sixteenth was reached moved up alongside of Delhi again. Burns, too, was forced to draw his whip, and for half a dozen strides the horses, both under punishment, hung together, but without Delhi ever relinquishing his lead.

Even the partisans of the Keene stable were ready at this point to see Delhi stop and fall back, but in the brief duel of stamina Delhi showed himself the more courageous, and under the whip came away, while at was Graziallo, famed for his bulldog courage, which weakened first under the pace and pressure.

As Graziallo dropped back Ostrich, passing Colonial Girl, settled down under hard riding and closed with a whirlwind rush, going up to Graziallo so fast that the horses came together in a jostle that knocked Graziallo further back, while Ostrich went on in pursuit of Delhi.

Burns, on the favorite, kept his whip going even after he had shaken off Graziallo and was forced to ride on when Ostrich challenged, but his lead was so great that even the pace of the second whipping, and slightly easing up the staggering Delhi in the last few strides passed the winning post first by a length and a half, while Ostrich, closing with a speed and determination that have won more than one race for him had he begun his run a few jumps earlier, was second, two lengths and a half before Graziallo. Colonial Girl tired in the last eighth of a mile and was eased up, while Sir Brillar, which burst through the crowd on a place far in the rear, when it was too late, finished fourth, two lengths behind Graziallo and a length before Colonial Girl. Broomstick, which was prominently placed, was beaten at the end of the sixth furlong, while Dainty and Proper, the Jennings entry, galloped last and next to last all the way.

The fractional time of the race was: First quarter, 0:23 1-5; three furlongs, 0:35 2-5; half mile, 0:48; five furlongs, 1:05 2-5; three-quarters, 1:12 2-5; seven furlongs, 1:25 4-5; mile, 1:39 2-5, and mile and a quarter, 2:06 2-5. The last quarter in 0:25.

Delhi, the winner of the nineteenth handicap, is a brown colt, four years old, by Ben Brush-Veva. By his victory he netted for Mr. Keene $16,000, the value of the stake to the winner, and brought his total earnings in his three years on the turf up to $114,185. As a two-year-old Delhi's greatest achievement was in winning Hopeful Stakes, worth $22,275, at Saratoga, his one victory in five starts. Last season, at three years old, Delhi won six races, including the $50,000 Great Republic Stakes at Saratoga, and the Belmont Stakes and Withers at Morris Park, earning a total for the year of $75,910. He is well engaged in all the prominent weight-for-age stakes and handicaps of the present season, and should he verify the expectations of his stable will be one of the greatest money winners that the American turf has ever known.

Early in the day the question was raised by C. Yeager, owner of Leonidas, as to whether the engagement of Jockey Hildebrand, who is under contract with Yeager to ride Graziallo, should have preference over Yeager's claim to the rider. Hildebrand had agreed to ride Graziallo for a fee of $1,000, with the approval of W. Schaut, agent for Yeager, and the Stewards decided that the engagement was binding. Yeager then was obliged to give another jockey, Miller, the mount on Leonidas.

HISTORY OF THE RACE.

From Dry Monopole's Victory to Delhi's—Irish Lad's Record.

The Brooklyn Handicap, run yesterday for the nineteenth time, though three years younger than the Suburban Handicap, long has had a place of its own in the racing of the East, the fixture having achieved great popularity on its first running as being the great event which ushered in the New York racing season under the old Ives racing law. It was run formerly on the first day of racing in the State.

The first Brooklyn, run in 1887, helped to establish the success of the stake by producing one of the most sensational finishes that any of the great handicaps has brought, Dry Monopole, ridden by Andy McCarthy, winning after a terrific struggle from Blue Wing and Hidalgo. In most of the Brooklyn Handicap races that followed great horses were returned the winners, though on occasions muddy going and the early season in which it was run have helped some very ordinary animals to victory. In the years that the race has been run, three-year-olds have won twice, Conroy, for James R. Keene, being the first to break the tradition that a three-year-old could not win a Brooklyn Handicap, and Irish Lad, owned then by H. B. Duryea and Harry Payne Whitney, following Conroy's victory two years later.

The one mare successful for the race was A. Featherstone's Reina. The winners of the race from the first running follow:

FIRST WATER MET DEFEAT.

Bennington Colt Was Beaten, for the First Time, by Woolwich.

With an unbeaten record to the time of his start for the Expectation Stakes, First Water, the star two-year-old of the Newton Bennington Stable, in that race met his first defeat. The race was the third on the Gravesend card, and was second in importance only to the Brooklyn Handicap, the fixture being one that annually brings out the smartest two-year olds of the Spring, for the five-furlong sprint that was inaugurated in the same year with the Brooklyn Handicap.

The start was made with McKittredge, the half brother to McChesney off with a shade the best of the break, Woolwich second, and First Water third, but in the first twenty yards Woolwich went to the front, followed by First Water, and the two drew steadily away from the others from that moment. Woolwich held his place in the lead all the way, First Water closing on him after the colts turned into the stretch and just outside the first furlong pole, getting so close to the pace maker that Odom on Woolwich drew his whip, First Water at the same time feeling punishment for the first time in his life. For half a dozen strides First Water hung at Woolwich's hips, and then faltered and fell back, Woolwich thereafter drawing away and winning rather handily by three lengths, First Water pulled up quite lame, and examination by his trainer disclosed as explanation of his stopping when pressed, that he had injured himself again on a bruised foot which had troubled him for a few days before the race. STRIKE LEADERS SENT TO JAIL FOR CONTEMPT

Chicago's Mayor Says Situation Does Not Require Troops.

STREET CAR MEN MAY GO OUT

"Unfair" Coal at Power Houses, Their Complaint—Slim Response to Call for Volunteer Police.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 25.—While President Shea of the Teamsters' Union escaped in the contempt proceeding before United States Judge Kohlsaat this afternoon two of his colleagues were declared guilty. Bernard Mulligan, President of the Express Drivers' Union, was sentenced to the Dupage County Jail until he will answer the questions of the Master in Chancery, or is released by process of law. John H. Donohue, a member of the Express Union, will be confined in the Kane County jail.

Mayor Dunne this afternoon announced that owing to the absence of serious rioting the civil authorities continued to hold control of the situation. As long as such conditions prevailed troops would not be asked for.

The possibility of a street railway strike developed to-day as a result of a formal presentation of demands for increased wages and complaints that the street car company is using "unfair" coal.

While the leaders of the strikers were in the Federal Court the lumbermen of Chicago were demanding troops for their protection. They declared to Mayor Dunne that the police protection was inadequate. In answer to the call for volunteer policemen yesterday only 165 men responded. One of the men who came to serve as a policeman was the son of Gen. Herman Lieb, who commanded the Eighth Illinois in the civil war. He had a letter from his father addressed to Mayor Dunne, which said:

"If I were not excluded by the age limit I would cheerfully offer my services in this emergency as I did forty-four years ago to President Lincoln, but I send you herewith my eldest son, Herman, as my substitute."

It is expected that other lumber employes will join the strikers to-morrow. A new feature developed during the afternoon when carpenters employed on new buildings refused to handle the lumber brought to them under police protection by non-union drivers.

It is estimated to-night that the fifty days of the strike has cost almost $14,000,000, divided as follows:

City for extra police, $52,000; county for deputies, $54,200; loss in wages to teamsters, $504,300; assessments on teamsters, $323,500; cost to employers for wages, $1,200,000; shrinkage in wholesale business, $2,200,000; shrinkage in retail, $3,000,000; loss to railroad and express companies, $1,300,009; lumber yards, $25,000; non-involved interests, $5,200,000.

Vice President Fairbanks and Mrs. Fairbanks and their son Fred were in Chicago to-day on their way to Oregon. The Vice President said:

"Of course, I feel an interest in the strike situation in Chicago and would exert myself to bring about an amicable agreement if my good offices were considered in the same light as the effor

SAYS ROJESTVENSKY WILL MAKE TOGO FIGHT

To Bombard Japanese Ports If Necessary, Avelan Says.

DISCREDITS BATTLE REPORTS

Speedy Clash Between the Fleets, However, Is Expected—Birileff Off to Vladivostok.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES.
Special Cable. Copyright, 1905.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 25.—Reports of a Russian naval victory telegraphed from Manila are received here with considerable scepticism, although Admiral Avelan gives color to the report by professing expectation that a naval engagement will occur almost immediately.

Rojestvensky, according to the Minister of Marine, is absolutely determined to fight, and will force Togo to fight, if necessary by bombarding Japanese ports.

All this, however, does not well agree with the report of a fight south of Formosa. It is asked why Togo has gone so far from his base, and it is concluded that if an engagement really occurred it was not a general fleet action.

By The Associated Press.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 25.—Admiral Avelan to-day confirmed The Associated Press dispatches saying Vice Admiral Rojestvensky was steaming north to give battle to Admiral Togo. He considers it possible that news that the two fleets have met may be received any day.

AS TO ROJESTVENSKY'S HEALTH.

He reaffirms the official denial of the reports that Rojestvensky has broken down and asked to be relieved. Avelan says Rojestvensky sent detailed reports of the condition of his own health and of the health of the crews of his ships. The constant tension and hard work of the past months have been a great strain on the Admiral's health.

"Even before he left," said Avelan, "Rojestvensky was a sufferer from kidney trouble, but his health is no worse. His reports breathe a spirit of strength, resoluteness, and confidence, and other reports show he has inspired his crews with the confidence of their commander. As a matter of fact, it is not Rojestvensky, but Vice Admiral Voelkersam, (in command of a squadron of the Russian fleet,) who has suffered from the long stay in the tropics.

"The appointment of Vice Admiral Birileff as successor to Vice Admiral Skrydloff at Vladivostok will in nowise affect Rojestvensky's status. The latter's mission as chief of the fleet is to take it to Vladivostok. There will be no antagonism when he gets there. The two Admirals are on excellent terms, which began long ago when Rojestvensky served under Birileff. Both are iron disciplinarians, and Rojestvensky will give his superior the same loyal obedience that he demands of his subordinates."

In response to a suggestion that Togo might intentionally allow Rojestvensky to get to Vladivostok, contenting himself with torpedo attacks while the Russians are on their way there, and then try to bottle Rojestvensky up in Vladivostok, Admiral Avellan smiled and said:

"The story of Port Arthur will not be repeated. Rojestvensky is not the kind of man to allow himself to be locked up in a port. If he gets to Vladivostok he will not rest on his laurels, but will seek an engagement. He will try to wrest the mastery of the sea from Togo. There are many ways of compelling Togo to accept battle. Rojestvensky will only have to bombard one of the coast cities to force Togo to appear in its defense."

Aimiral Avellan repudiates the reports that a number of chartered colliers sent to Vladivostok were captured by the Japanese owing to the connivance of their Captains who arranged to receive half the price of their cargoes for betraying their route and time of departure.

The Admiral explains that the colliers were lost through delay in the receipt of orders telegraphed to them by the Admiralty to go to Vladivostok by way of La Perouse Straits (between the Island of Sakhalir and the Island of Hokkaido, the most northern of the large islands of Japan) instead of through the Straits of Korea. Two of these vessels which passed through La Perouse Straits arrived safely at Vladivostok.

A private letter from the commander of one of Rojestvensky's torpedo boat destroyers, mailed at Saigon, describes the fleet's passage of the Indian Ocean. The writer says the hard work fell on the light cruisers and torpedo boat destroyers under Vice Admiral Enquist, which were constantly scouting ahead and communicating the approach of vessels so as to permit Rojestvensky to change his course and steer clear of them, his desire being to avoid discovery before he reached the China Sea, in which he was successful.

Considerable difficulty was experienced at times in coaling from the transports at sea, especially in the case of the torpedo boat destroyers.

The officer adds that after the long voyage they were looking forward with relief to the coming battle. He says his torpedo boat destroyer was reprovisioned at Saigon.

Admiral Birileff left St. Petersburg for Vladivostok to-day by special train. All other trains will be sidetracked in order to enable his train to get to Vladivostok quickly.

COLLIERS IN THE YANG-TSE.

Russian Vessels Between Formosa and Korean Straits.

SHANGHAI, May 25.—It is credibly reported that five steamers of the Russian Volunteer Fleet, three colliers, and one Russian cruiser arrived at the mouth of the Yang-tse River this afternoon. The cruiser left shortly afterward, and three of the Volunteer Fleet vessels went to Woosung during the evening.

MANILA, May 25.—Official advices have been received from Vigan that on May 20 over fifty war vessels were sighted off the east coast of the Batan Islands, (half way between Luzon and Formosa,) sailing in a northeast direction. It is supposed that the vessels were Russian.

WARSHIPS FOR RUSSIA?

Bulgaria Said to Have Obtained Them from Argentina.

LONDON, Friday, May 26.—The Sofia correspondent of The Daily Chronicle asserts that the Bulgarian Government has purchased four armored cruisers and three torpedo-boat destroyers from the Argentine Republic for Russia, and that the vessels will be transferred from the Bulgarian to the Russian flag at New Guinea.

As a commission for this service Bulgaria is to receive from Russia $2,500,000 worth of rolling stock for her railways.

BOLD DASH BY JAPANESE.

Reconnoitred Rear of Russian Army—Kuropatkin at Gunshu Pass.

GUNSHU PASS, May 25.—A squadron of Japanese cavalry which has been reconnoitring deep into the Russian rear encountered and defeated a small detachment of Russians northwest of Gunshu Pass, twelve miles from the railroad, on May 22, and on the following day penetrated almost to the station of Tanziatun, twenty miles north of Gunshu Pass.

The appearance of the Japanese so far from their base is taken as an intimation of their desire for information preliminary to turning this flank.

Reports of the movement of Japanese in the direction of Tsitsihar, 300 miles west of Harbin, have been revived.

Chinese bandits are active on the Mongolian border. They are hampering the Russian scouts, preventing the purchase of supplies, and attacking cattle purchased by the Russians. There are daily skirmishes with the bandits.

The attitude of the North Mongolian Princes is changing. An important Prince, whose territories touch the border, is said to have forbidden Russian merchants and reconnoitring parties to enter his country.

Gen. Kuropatkin arrived here on his special train. The platforms were crowded with brilliantly uniformed Generals and members of their staffs, who greeted the former Commander in Chief. As the General's train entered from the south the mail train from the north arrived with the Princess Reuss, who is to become a nursing sister, and Lieut. Gen. Sakharoff's wife, who is also to become a nurse.

The crowds on the platforms of the railway stations nearest the Japanese lines at train time are as elegant and as well dressed as those which assemble at the St. Petersburg station on the departure of the International Express.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 25.—The report that Gen. Kuropatkin would return to his old position as Commander in Chief has been considered impossible for some time on account of the mutual recriminations between Kuropatkin and Gen. Linevitch, but the War Office says that Linevitch has not demanded his recall.

Kuropatkin's health undoubtedly is much shattered, and Gen. Zaroubaieff is expected to succeed him as commander of the First Manchurian Army, although he has not yet been appointed.

COTTON AS CONTRABRAND.

Serious Negotiations Likely to Result from Calchas Case.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES.
Special Cable. Copyright, 1905.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 25.—The contention of the British and American Governments that raw cotton cannot be considered as absolute contraband will give rise to serious negotiations with Russia as soon as the text of the judgment in the case of the steamship Calchas is issued.

The Admiralty Court of Appeals, on the recommendation of Prof. Martens, confiscated the cotton aboard the Calchas, the contention being that cotton was to be used to manufacture explosives and therefore must be treated as absolute contraband.

The Russian Government can have no doubt regarding the attitude of Great Britain and the United States, as formal protests against the Russian doctrine were lodged last year by Sir Charles Hardinge and Mr. McCormick. As soon as the written judgment is issued these protests will be renewed.

TRASK TALKS OF DUMMIES.

Banker Says He Doesn't Know His Associates in Many Companies.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—Accounts and checks which passed between the Postal Device and Lock Company and the Government were presented to-day in the case of W. G. Crawford, who is on trial charged with conspiring with August W. Machen and George E. Lorenz. Spencer Trask, the New York banker, who financed the Postal Device and Lock Company, testified to Crawford's relationship to the company. Mr. Trask said he believed Crawford's salary was $200 a month.

Very little intimate knowledge of the company's affairs could be given by Mr. Trask. He believed that several of the officers were "dummies" put in by his lawyer, who organized the company. He was asked if Mr. Franklin, a clerk in the banking firm of Spencer Trask & Co., was an officer of the company, but the witness did not know. "Mr. Franklin did not know either," said Attorney A. S. Worthington.

"There, you see how it is," replied Mr. Trask. "It is that way in a hundred other companies in which I am interested. You ask Mr. Morgan or Mr. Schiff, and they will tell you the same thing."

YOUNG ROEBLING TRACED?

Grandfather Hears That the Boy Went to Henderson, N. C.

Victor Norman, Secretary to Col. Washington A. Roebling, President of the Roebling Construction Company, received word yesterday that Col. Roebling's grandson, Siegfried, son of John A. Roebling, has been traced to Henderson, N. C. Telegrams from Asheville, however, said it was not expected that the boy would be found at Henderson.

Mr. Norman received the news in the form of a letter from Col. Roebling, who enclosed the false telegram forwarded two days ago from this city by Daniel Dolan, who was later arrested on a charge of attempted grand larceny. Dolan tried to get $50 sent to him by telegraph by Col Roebling, using the name of the absent youth who was being sought by his family.

Dolan was arraigned in Jefferson Market Court yesterday and held in $1,000 bail. Mr. Norman appeared in court and showed Col. Roebling's letter, which requested the full prosecution of the sender of the telegram.

LUNDBERG JURY DISAGREES.

Third Mistrial of Slocum Inspector—11 to 1 for Acquittal.

The third trial of Henry Lundberg, formerly Inspector of Steamboats, who was accused of manslaughter as a result of having improperly inspected the General Slocum, resulted in a mistrial last night. The jury came in at 10 o'clock and reported that it had been unable to agree. The jurors were discharged.

It is understood that the jury stood eleven for acquttal and one for conviction.

It was said that another trial of the case was unlikely.

HUSBANDS WORSE IN WINTER.

More Time Then to Get Drunk, Says Humane Society Officer.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, May 25.—Carefully kept statistics at the office of the Humane Society show that husbands are more considerate of their wives in good weather than in bad. Secretary Ricksecker of the society stated to-day:

"It is true that in Summer husbands treat their wives with more consideration than in Winter. One reason for this is that work is more plentiful in Summer. Another that working husbands have less time to loiter about saloons and get drunk. Seventy-five per cent of the cases which come to this office of desertion of wives is directly attributable to drink."

THREE OWN ALL SHARES IN ANTI-MONOPOLY CO.

Which Is Going to Play Hob with Lighting Deals.

THAT IS WHEN IT GETS GOING

Its Mortgage for $350,000,000 Covers Half Interest in a Franchise Said to be of Doubtful Worth.

Enter the Anti-Monopoly Light and Power Company, which, according to its avowed intention, is going to do things to existing corporations in its field. It sprang full grown from the Legislature recently. On Wednesday it executed a $350,000,000 mortgage. Yesterday, through the filing of incorporation papers with County Clerk Hamilton, the identity of its officers became known.

The President of the Anti-Monopoly Light and Power Company is George B. Hayes, a young lawyer of 35 Nassau Street. According to the papers, he owns 998 shares of the 1,000 into which the capital stock is divided, while to Albert G. Stephenson and John L. Walsh, who with Hayes make up the Board of Directors, falls only one share apiece.

What powerful interests are behind this concern, which is able to execute a mortgage for $350,000,000, is yet a matter of mystery. Dark hints as to the power and wealth of the backers were thrown about recklessly yesterday afternoon after the filing of the papers with the County Clerk. The names of the Directors of the Anti-Monopoly do not appear in the directory of Directors.

President George B. Hayes was reticent yesterday when asked about his company, and said there was nothing to add to what had already been said in the papers at the County Clek's office. He was willing to admit, however, that the Edison Company had been trying for some time to get possession of the American Electric and Manufacturing Company, a half interest in which is one of the chief assets of the anti-monopoly.

The fact was brought to the attention of an official of the Edison Company last night.

"That's the first time I ever heard of our trying to get hold of the American Electric and Manufacturing Company," said he. "In fact, until I heard this I was under the impression that we had several offers from that company and had refused to absorb it."

The mortgage executed by the Anti-Monopoly Light and Power Company to William N. Baron of Jersey City covers all right and title to a half interest in a franchise granted by the Board of Aldermen in 1887 to the American Electric and Manufacturing Company, a half interest in a patent for arc lighting, and all interest in a contract between the new company and John J. Moore. The mortgage is said to be preliminary to the booming of the old franchise which has lain idle for eighteen years.

There is a good deal of doubt as to the validity of this franchise, which was granted by the Board of Aldermen in 1887. A person connected with the Edison interests said last night that one reason why the Edison Company did not seriously consider the offer that had been made by the manufacturing company was that the old franchise had a serious flaw in it.

"The franchise is not valid," he said; "an effort was made to put a special bill through the Legislature last year to make it good, but the bill was killed. I think it was Elihu Root who rendered an opinion that the franchise was invalid."

The speaker hinted that the new company was not intending to put up plants and really do business, but that its formation was merely a speculative venture.

According to the articles of incorporation the object of the Anti-Monopoly Light and Power Company, the capital of which is given at $100,000, is for the manufacture, using, producing, buying, and vending of electricity for light, heat, or power in New York, Poughkeepsie, Albany, Troy, Utica, Syracuse, and a dozen or more other cities and towns. One of the articles it proposes to make is hot air—not according to the slang meaning of that term.

McADOO STILL UNDAUNTED.

To Obey Injunctions, but Try Somehow to Hit Fortified "Clubs."

Police Commissioner McAdoo yesterday received two more injunctions restraining him from allowing his men to picket suspected gamblers. They were in behalf of "Jimmy" Wakely's place in the neighborhood of Forty-second Street and Sixth Avenue, and McDonald's, in East Thirty-first Street. Mr. McAdoo said that he would obey them, of course. He added, however:

"In the meantime it is the bounden duty of the police and the Commissioner, under their oaths of office, to persist in enforcing the laws of this State, despite any difficulties that may present themselves. It is especially incumbent on us to direct our efforts against brazenly impudent and 'fake' clubs composed in the main of professional lawbreakers and irredeemable loafers.

"I am writing to the Corporation Counsel asking him to assign at least temporarily to this office Mr. Breckenridge, Assistant Corporation Counsel, who has, in defending the police in these suits, shown great intelligence, zeal, and high professional ability. Within the last few days he has had three or four of these writs set aside in the courts of law. If he is sent here, I intend consulting him as to the advisability of calling the attention of the Health, Building, and Fire Departments to the effect of the conditions on the lives and health of those living in these fortified 'clubs.'"

St. Clair McKelway yesterday declined, because of need for a vacation, a place on the police advisory committee.

VETOES VETERANS' BILL.

Mayor Thinks Republicans in Legislature Tried to Entrap Him.

Mayor McClellan yesterday discovered what he considers another trap set for him by the Republican leaders in the Legislature, and he accordingly vetoed the bill passed to restore all veterans on the city's pay roll to the salaries they received prior to the reorganization of the civil service schedules in 1902. Under the bill the veterans would have been entitled to back pay at the increased rates since 1902, a total of more than $1,000,000.

By the rearrangement of the salary list three years ago, under the Low administration, all city employes doing similar work were placed in the same grade of pay. Many veterans lost pay as a result, and they organized to fight the action. Their suits are pending in the courts, but without waiting for a decision they persuaded Republican leaders to pass the bill which practically gave them judgment without waiting for a court decision.

The Republicans could have accused the Mayor of raiding the city treasury for political purposes if he had signed the bill.

VIENNA, May 25.—The Executive Committee of the Zionist Congress, after studying the report of the committee sent to Africa, has adopted a resolution to the effect that it is impossible to recommend carrying out the Uganda colonization plan, and invites the congress to express deep thanks for Great Britain's offer to help the Jews.

GERMAN OFFICER'S TRIAL.

Husband of "Veiled Lady" in Dreyfus Case Accused of Swindling.

THORN, Prussia, May 25.—The trial will begin on Monday next of Hellmut Wessel, formerly a First Lieutenant and instructor in the Artillery and Engineer School at Charlottenburg, who is charged with swindling. This is the accusation on which he will be tried, but he is also charged with selling plans of German fortresses to France.

Wessel is the husband of Matilde Baumler, the "veiled lady" of the second Dreyfus trial. In 1898 he found an asylum in France and lived there for some years. He followed a precarious career in Italy, where the German authorities caused his arrest and after sixteen months' imprisonment secured his extradition. The Opposition Italian press criticised the Government of Italy for giving up a political fugitive.

Wessel is to be tried here, his last garrison detail, on an indictment charging him with fraudulently obtaining $25 from a certain Captain of Uhlans named Becker, since deceased.

PERUVIAN RAILWAY DISPUTE.

London Corporation Withdraws Proposal to Build.

LIMA, Peru, May 25.—The order received here by cable from the London Director of the Peruvian Corporation to withdraw its proposal for railroad building has created a very bad impression.

Mr. Schatzmann, the corporation's representative at Lima, who was fully empowered to effect a settlement of the pending questions, has resigned, and is receiving expressions of universal sympathy. The Government is determined not to waver in upholding the just claims and rights of Peru.

The Peruvian Corporation is a London concern whose full title is the Peruvian Corporation of London. It was formed to undertake railroad building, &c., in Peru, but disputes as to payments, &c., have been interfering with the work for seven or eight years.

The questions at issue were long ago submitted to the Peruvian Chamber of Deputies, which authorized the Government of Peru to settle them, but little or no progress seems to have been made, and, as announced from Lima to-day, the corporation has now withdrawn its proposals.

RICHTER BECOMING BLIND.

Bismarck's Old Opponent Kept Affliction Secret for Months.

BERLIN, May 25.—Eugen Richter, the Radical leader in the Reichstag since its foundation, Bismarck's old opponent and for a long time editor of the Freisinnige Zeitung, is losing his eyesight, and it is feared will become totally blind.

Six months ago Herr Richter suddenly retired from the editorship of the Freisinnige Zeitung, which he founded, and caused its name to be changed to the Deutsche Freie Presse, so that no one should call it Richter's paper, and he ceased to appear in the Reichstag. His friends knew that his health had given way, but the secret of his failing eyesight was well kept.

SATISFACTION FOR BRAUN.

Hungarian Official Who Opened His Mail to be Dismissed.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—It was announced at the State Department to-day, after a call of Baron Giskra, the Austro-Hungarian Chargé d'Affaires, that the controversy of Marcus Braun, the American Immigration Inspector at Budapest, with the Hungarian authorities was on the road to a satisfactory settlement.

The police official who is said to have tampered with Mr. Braun's mail will be dismissed and will be further punished. Mr. Braun will be withdrawn from his present post and transferred to another field of activity. His successor has not yet been selected.

American Medals for German Tars.

BERLIN, May 25.—Three gold medals given by President Roosevelt to three German bluejackets who saved from drowning several sailors of the United States ironclad Monadnock in Chinese waters, were transmitted by Ambassador Tower to the Foreign Office to-day, from which office they will be sent to the Marine Ministry.

Hungarian Anti-Emigration Bill.

BUDAPEST, Hungary, May 25.—A bill providing for the restriction of emigration was introduced in the Diet to-day. It proposes to prohibit steamship companies from employing emigration agents, to limit their advertisements, to abolish emigration agencies, and to punish those who hold out inducements to emigrate.

RIVAL ROADS TO BUILD ONE BRANCH FOR BOTH

Union and Northern Pacific Will Share Clearwater Traffic.

SURVEYORS MET IN FIELD

The Result Was a Decision to Avoid the Expense of Constructing Two Lines.

The Executive Committees of the Northern Pacific and Union Pacific Railroads yesterday met and instructed the operating officials of their systems to prepare agreements for the joint construction of a new railroad in the Clearwater district. The operating officials are now at work on plans which, while avoiding the law regarding the ownership of one road by another, yet will assure each of the two systems a line from the rich farming district on the borders of Idaho and Washington to a point in the neighborhood of Pasco, Washington, where the existing lines of the two systems meet.

This agreement marks the settlement of a dispute of several years' standing. It was in 1900, when the Nez Perces Indian reservation was thrown open to the public that the two systems first began to invade this territory which since then has been claimed by each as belonging to it exclusively.

The Northern Pacific built a railroad branch from its main line down to Clearwater. The Union Pacific built a line as far as Pomeroy, in Washington, and ran a steamboat service up the Snake River into the Clearwater country.

Recently both systems sent surveyors into the country to map out more lines, and these surveying parties met. Each informed its respective superiors of the presence of the other, and when the main offices heard of it they tried to find out as much about the other's plans as possible. Mr. Harriman, for the Union Pacific, finally met Col. Lamont, representing the Northern Pacific, and they talked the matter over.

The result was that they agreed that the building of two lines in this territory was a needless expense, and that it would be more to the interest of the stockholders to build only one line and use it jointly. This line will be about 300 miles long, and it will reach from the Clearwater district to a point near Pasco. Its main line will be laid along the Snake River, which runs through a narrow gulch. The expenses of construction will be borne jointly.

It is probable that a new company will be organized to build the line, and that when the construction is completed the Union Pacific and the Northern Pacific will each lease one-half of the new road. The situation at Clearwater was the last point in dispute between the two systems.

In spite of the announcement that the difficulties in the Northwestern railroad field had been settled, there is skepticism in many quarters regarding the sincerity of the settlement. Said one banker:

"What I want to know is how long this harmony will last."

Navy League and Kaiser Reconciled.

BERLIN, May 25.—The differences between Emperor William and the Navy League (or German Fleet Society) have seemingly been settled. Prince zu Salm-Horstmar, President of the league, was received in audience by the Emperor yesterday, reconsidered his tentative purpose to resign, and reached, it is understood, a full agreement with his Majesty.

TO RECEIVE MR. DALRYMPLE.

Public Reception for Manager of Glasgow's City Owned Street Cars.

James Dalrymple, the expert of the municipally owned street railways of Glasgow, who has been invited to this country to show the City of Chicago how to operate its surface railroads, is due here to-morrow on the steamer Campania. A reception in his honor has been arranged to take place at the Hoffman House to-morrow night from 8 to 10 o'clock. The committee in charge comprises 175 men prominent in business or professional life in this city, among them many members of the St. Andrew's Society and other Scottish organizations who will take this opportunity to greet their fellow countryman.

Representatives of the Municipal Ownership League and of Mayor Dunne of Chicago will board the vessel from a revenue cutter down the Bay by special permission from Washington. A feature of the reception at the hotel will be a serenade by district clubs of the Municipal Ownership League. The public will be received by committeemen at the Twenty-fifth Street entrance.

Mr. Dalrymple's stopover in New York was arranged by the league, which cabled to the Lord Provost of Glasgow in regard to the matter after obtaining Mayor Dunne's consent. Mr. Dalrymple is the General Manager of the street railways of Glasgow, all of which are owned and operated by the city. The average fare is less than 2 cents and the employes get better pay and work fewer hours than on lines owned by private corporations. The railways pay all interest charges, provide an ample sinking fund, and turn into the public treasury $1,250,000 a year.

Among those on the Reception Committee to receive Mr. Dalrymple are Henry Edwin Tremain, Judge Samuel Seabury, Thomas Gilleran, M. F. Ihmsen, John De Witt Warner, Judge John Palmieri, Melvin G. Palliser, A. E. Shober, R. Mowat, John Miller, W. F. Doll, Lucien Knapp, E. H. Sayre, Col. Alexander S. Bacon, Ernest Howard Crosby, the Rev. STOP POILLON-BROKAW SUIT.

Settled, It Is Said, for $40,000—Woman Asked $250,000.

The $250,000 suit which Katherine Poillon brought against William Gould Brokaw for breach of promise of marriage was discontinued—at least, temporarily, and, it is believed, for all time—yesterday, to the great disappointment of several hundred men and women who had gone to the County Court House expecting to hear the first of the testimony in the case.

Some time ago it was said that Brokaw was willing to pay Mrs. Poillon $50,000. It was said yesterday, however, that a settlement had been made or would soon be made on the basis of a payment of $40,000—$30,000 to Mrs. Poillon and $10,000 to her attorney, ex-Judge W. M. K. Olcott.

When Justice Dowling went on the bench yesterday Eugene L. Bush, attorney of record for Mr. Brokaw; John F. McIntyre, special counsel to Mr. Brokaw, and Mr. Olcott stepped up and held a whispered conversation with the Justice. While one was talking the others smiled.

At last the lawyers stepped back to the counsel's table, and Mr. Bush addressed the court, making the motion for adjournment, which was granted.

The Summer WHITE SALE Of Men's Furnishings

It would be the very worst policy to allow ourselves to be fooled as to the comparative values of the merchandise that we present to the intelligent men of New York on this important occasion.

WE KNOW that it is extraordinary. We have investigated most thoroughly. Else we would make no such claims for it. There would be no need to investigate now, for the splendid public response of yesterday has told us what men think of it, themselves. Here is the gist of the news, over again:

About One Hundred Men's Sack Suits

Formerly $15, $18, $20 and $22; now at $12.50 a Suit

It's a little early to clean up stocks of Spring clothing that must be worn all Summer; but it is all the better for you that we are anxious to become rid of small lots and broken sizes.

This collection of about one hundred Suits includes both double and single-breasted sack coat styles, of black thibets, black and blue unfinished worsteds and serges. All are made up in the well-known WANAMAKER manner, up to the standards required for our regular stocks, and there is no better clothing sold anywhere at their regular prices.

They have been marked until today at $15, $18, $20 and $22; if you are one of the fortunate men, you may select at $12.50 a suit. The assortment of sizes is quite good as the selling starts, but you had better be prompt.

"Good Fortune Never Comes Singly"

Six Hundred More Silk Dresses

Offering Extraordinary, at $10.75

The picture shows five patterns, sketched directly from the dresses yesterday. That tells how pretty they are.

As to quality and finish—they came from the same manufacturers as the collection that last Monday made the greatest selling of Women's Dresses that this store ever knew.

The silks alone are worth more than the present cost of the finished dresses. And no dressmaker who can do such work would start to make the dresses for you at today's price.

More than double money's worth—that's the story in a nut-shell—and the dresses are spic-span-new—each one in its own box, crisp, clean, perfect. All are newly made, over the very latest models that designers know.

Only six hundred—and remember that they sold faster than one a minute last Monday. These should go still quicker, with the fame of that sale to give them advance reputation. Then there are more styles to choose from today—more kinds of silk, including some dainty white China silks, trimmed with white lace insertion, in both waist and skirt. Also many black taffeta silks—in addition to a perfect flower-garden of colored silks in the season's favored shades.

Second floor, Broadway.

Two Large Counterfuls of SILK REMNANTS

NATION WILL CONTROL OUR LIFE INSURANCE

James M. Beck Sees Federal Action Coming.

TELLS AGENTS IT IS WELL

Plain Talk at Dinner on the Troubles of the Big Companies This Year —Also on T. Lawson.

James M. Beck, ex-Deputy Attorney General of the United States, made a speech at the May dinner of the Life Underwriters' Association of New York at the Hotel Astor last night, in which he made a strong plea for supervision of the life insurance companies by the Federal Government, instead of by the various State Governments, as at present, and predicted that this would soon come to pass.

"I believe the agitation of the last twelve months, in which the life insurance companies have been tested as though with fire," said Mr. Beck, "will tend to benefit the entire cause of life insurance in this country more greatly than anything that has yet occurred.

"In the first place, I believe it will turn the hearts and consciences of the heads of these great companies to the inside workings of their institutions. If it should be found that there is some cause for complaint these complaints must be met and the workings of these institutions be placed on a basis where all they do shall be done in the broad light of day.

"In the second place, I believe this agitation will further the cause of National supervision of life insurance companies. It is high time they were placed under the broad aegis of Federal protection instead of being left to the whimsical scrutiny of forty-five different insurance departments.

"I believe the events of the last twelve months have left the American people in a frame of mind where they will no longer recognize territorial lines, but will demand National control and National guarantee, which is only fitting in the case of institutions as broad in scope and as dignified in purpose as the life insurance companies.

"To achieve this we must first get Congress to pass the necessary legislation. We must further convince the Supreme Court that its earlier definition of what rightly falls within the realm of inter-State commerce has been too narrow in view of modern concentration of capital. No action is needed by court, Congress, or President to make life insurance companies national in their scope. Steam and electricity have already made them so.

"The great insurance concerns of the United States collect more money every year than the Government collects in all its Custom Houses and disburse more money than the Government does. In the treasuries of these institutions there is more money or its equivalent than the aggregate in circulation in the entire country.

"Congress and the Supreme Court have been lagging behind the economical events of recent years. 'Dooley,' in his wisdom, says that the Supreme Court follows the election returns. That, of course, is not true, but it is a fact that neither Congress nor the Supreme Court, if this country is to continue as progressive as it has been in the past, can afford longer to be in the rear of the procession or legislate with regard to economic conditions which long ago have been outgrown. I believe that national supervision of life insurance is certain to come, though it may not be inaugurated for a decade yet.

"It must come if our insurance interests abroad and more still if our interests at home are to be protected. These great institutions cannot be economically administered if they are to be dependent upon the caprice of forty-five governments instead of one. It is a wonder that they have been able to survive at all with so many masters to pay their hands into their coffers whenever they choose and help themselves to as much as caprice or greed may suggest.

Mr. Beck started out by saying that this had been the most unfortunate year in its immediate results that the life insurance interests in this country had ever been called upon to pass through, and that the effects of the recent agitation would be noticeable in life insurance returns for years to come.

In connection with this statement he reiterated his former sharp attack on Thomas W. Lawson, whom he characterized as "a clever, audacious, and frenzied fakir" and a "demagogue who with artful craft has poisoned the public mind against the insurance interests." He declared the uneasiness his attack had created in the public mind was not justified.

J. H. Jeffries, an insurance man of Philadelphia, denounced the recent advocacy by an insurance paper of the State Government stepping in and by eminent domain taking hold of one of the great insurance companies.

"It is not reasonable to believe," said he, "that the insurance companies would be more honestly or more economically managed in the hands of ignorant or dishonest politicians than they are to-day. Witness the recent gas steal in Philadelphia, where the law-making power has turned to violation of the law, where public opinion is derided and the will of the people set at naught."

President John Dolph of the National Life Underwriters' Association also spoke.

GIVES ALL CREDIT TO TEACHER

Schoolboy Who May Stop Bridge Crush Wants Her Pay Raised.

Morris Schaefer, the fourteen-year-old Brooklyn schoolboy, whose automatic signal system to stop the bridge crush has recently been accepted by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, has written to City Superintendent of Schools Maxwell that all the credit for the invention belonged to his teacher, Mrs. Cora Mackay of Public School No. 129, Brooklyn. Without her help and encouragement, he said, he could never have succeeded. He therefore asked that the teacher's salary be raised.

City Superintendent Maxwell answered the letter, praising the youthful inventor for crediting his teacher for his success and urging him to greater efforts. Referring to the boy's declaration that the science of electricity had never interested him until he had studied it in school, Dr. Maxwell said:

"I am glad that the course in science has helped you so much, and, in your case, it has answered one of its great purposes. One of the reasons why we teach science is to give boys who have mechanical tastes a chance to discover this aptitude."

In conclusion the City Superintendent said that he was sorry that he could not raise the salary of Morris's teacher; it was not within his power, he said.

FOR CITY'S LIGHTING PLANT.

Contracts Signed to Bind Purchase of Land for a Site.

Contracts were signed yesterday for the purchase by the city of a site for its proposed electric lighting plant. The entire block bounded by Avenue A and East River, Ninetieth and Ninety-first Streets, has been selected. Fifty-three city lots are included in the block and it has a 205-foot frontage on the river, with a depth of 650 feet.

The site chosen is near other large electric plants and is conveniently located for economical operation, especially the landing of fuel and supplies. The land at present is vacant and is owned by the firm of Lesher, Whitman & Co. They have agreed to sell to the city for $350,000. By closing the deal at private contract all the delays and expenses of condemnation proceedings will be saved.

CONTROL OF INSURANCE BEFORE MR. ROOSEVELT

Cromwell and an Equitable Director Asked His Support.

TRUSTEE PLAN ALSO URGED

Cromwell and Gulliver Confer with Untermyer About This—Tarbell Denies Trouble with Hendricks.

William Nelson Cromwell, who recently came into the Equitable Life Assurance controversy, ostensibly as general mediator between the warring factions in the society, recently made a trip to Washington with a prominent Director of the Equitable for the purpose of enlisting President Roosevelt's support for the settlement plan that is being pushed just now by a strong peace element in the board.

This plan contemplates, as was outlined in THE TIMES a few days ago, placing the active management of the society in the hands of a board of self-perpetuating Trustees like those of a savings bank in organization and responsibility, which board shall assign to the officers of the society their duties. Coupled with it is the suggestion, and one, it is understood, that was urged strongly upon President Roosevelt, that the business of life insurance is now of a National character, and deserves therefore Federal control.

It is believed that the local situation in the Equitable hangs around the success of the efforts made here to induce James H. Hyde and James W. Alexander to agree to the Trustee plan, and to this task the efforts of Mr. Cromwell just now are shaped. Yesterday Mr. Cromwell and William E. Gulliver had a long conference with Samuel Untermyer in the latter's office, at which the situation, it is understood, was thoroughly canvassed. When the conference was over Mr. Cromwell was asked about the subject under discussion.

"It was merely a call of courtesy," he said.

"What about your recent visit to President Roosevelt in company with a Director of the society?"

"I cannot say anything about that just now," Mr. Cromwell replied. "You will have to wait a while."

When Mr. Untermyer was asked about the conference with Mr. Cromwell, he said:

"Mr. Cromwell? Who is he? If you mean Mr. Oliver Cromwell, why, he is dead these many years."

Superintendent Hendricks of the State Insurance Department went back to Syracuse yesterday, and will not take up his examination of Equitable officials here until after the meeting of the Board of Directors next week, at which the report of the Frick Committee will be presented.

Gage E. Tarbell, Second Vice President of the society, who has been under examination for a couple of days, denied yesterday that his relations with Mr. Hendricks had been anything but pleasant. He added that he had answered satisfactorily all the questions that were put to him. Then Mr. Tarbell was asked if he was going to resign. He said:

"There once was an old woman who one day surprised her friends by leaning her head upon the table and sobbing bitterly, although nothing had occurred to disturb her. Somebody asked her what the matter was, and she replied:
